AMERICAN ARMY MOVES ON GERMANY THIS MORNING.

Demobilization to Come Quickly.

Secretary Baker in Thanking Soldiers Says Discharges will be Expedited.

Five Thousand Volunteers to Man Transports as Called for by Hurley.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—Secretary Baker today formally expressed his thanks to officers and men of the army in the United States for the zeal shown in preparing for overseas duty. Mr. Baker expressed confidence that the standards of discipline and bearing will be maintained by the men in training until mustered. His statement follows:

"The signing of the military armistice enables us to suspend the intensive military preparation in which the country was engaged. It does not, however, signify the formal end of the war, and it will therefore be necessary for us to keep under arms a substantial army until we are certain just what the military needs of the country will be.

"The men in service in the United States will be demobilized as rapidly as is consistent with the needs of the government and the War Department is working with the other branches of the government toward the rapid re-establishment of normal business conditions and the restoration of the soldiers to their homes and occupations.

"In the meantime, I desire to express to the officers and soldiers under arms in the United States the appreciation of the department for their patriotic zeal and service. That they were not called upon to go abroad and not permitted to participate in the historic struggle in France leaves them none the less a part of the great army of our nation and entitled to the thanks of the nation for their readiness to serve.

EARLY RETURN HOME.

"The officers and men can rely upon the sympathy and activity of the department in their early return home. Both officers and men will realize that it is their duty to continue with the training and work so as to maintain in the highest degree the discipline and soldierly spirit which is the great glory of the army of which they are a part."

Provost-Marshal-General Crowder has ordered the discontinuance of all physical examinations of draft registrants and of all work of district draft boards on the classification of registrants. The physical examinations have been given only to men of 18, under orders issued upon cessation of hostilities.

District draft boards, Gen. Crowder said, have been instructed to complete all records of cases before

STATE FURNISHES 136,025 MEN IN WAR.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SACRAMENTO, Nov. 16.—Adjt.-Gen. J. J. Borree has furnished to the War Department the names of all Californians who have served in the war with Germany, covering enlistments to November 1, the total being 136,025. This comprises all branches, including the navy and Marine Corps, but excepts the Students Army Training Corps, for which figures are not yet compiled.

LOOT-LADEN GERMANS STAGGER HOMEWARD.

COWS, CHICKENS, HOUSEHOLD GOODS THE PILLAGE OF RETREATING TROOPS.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

WITH THE AMERICAN FORCES IN FRANCE, Nov. 16.—Great quantities of civilian property are being carried away by the retiring Germans, according to Lieut. M. K. Lockwood and Lieut. D. C. Bebe of the Fiftieth Aero Squadron, who returned to the American front today after being prisoners in the hands of the Germans ten days. The aviators were shot down November 4 in the region of Tannay, east of Rethel, and were released by the Germans Thursday.

Walking towards the American lines, Lieuts. Lockwood and Bebe passed great numbers of motor trucks and occasional guns and caissons abandoned here and there in the mud, but in every instance the value of the truck or gun appeared to have been destroyed deliberately. The aviators said the Germans were taking herds of cows, crates of chickens and wagons loaded with household articles.

During the first few days the Germans billeted the aviators in Sedan, later removing them farther back. The lieutenants said their guards had their attention centered on the uprising in Germany and fretted because of the meagerness of news from Berlin. Two days after their capture, the aviators said, they heard soldiers "boo" their officers, and the guards repeatedly spoke disparagingly of the Kaiser.

The German soldiers heard little news from Berlin and other cities, as the wires had been tampered with by some element desiring to keep news developments from the army at the front.

The aviators had plenty to eat, but the food was of poor quality.

PUGET SOUND YARDS LAUNCH MOTORSHIP.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SEATTLE, Nov. 16.—The first of its vessels was launched today by the shipyard of J. H. Price & Co. in Puget Sound, when the American motorship Snetind took the water. The Snetind is of 2500 deadweight tonnage, 250 feet long, and was built for the American Motor Schooner Company of New York.

RECONSTRUCTION PLANS FRAMED BY REPUBLICANS

Congress Leaders Propose Committees to Direct Readjustment of the Land to Peace Basis.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—Republican leaders in Congress framed a new programme today for dealing with the reconstruction problems growing out of the cessation of hostilities and it became apparent that a bitter parliamentary struggle on this issue is close at hand.

The aim of the Republican leaders is to keep the "unscrambling" questions as far as possible under the control of Congress and to combat the proposal from the Democratic side to give the administration the major share in the solution of the problem of readjusting the nation to a peace basis.

The new programme is embodied in a concurrent resolution drafted by Senator Cummins of Iowa and indorsed by the Reconstruction Committee of the Republican Senate conference, consisting of Senator Watson of Indiana, Senator Poindexter of Washington and Senator Cummins.

The measure is intended as a substitute for a resolution recently introduced by Senator Weeks of Massachusetts. Senator Weeks has indorsed the substitute and it has received the approval of other Republican leaders. It will be laid before the Republican conference next week for ratification. There is every reason to believe it will receive the conference indorsement, and preparations will be made immediately for a vigorous fight on the Senate floor.

The Cummins substitute provides for the creation of six Congressional committees of ten members each. Each committee would be composed of five members from each house. While the Democrats are in power the committee would be made up of six Democrats and four Republicans and the ratio would be reversed after March 4, when the Republicans take control. The purpose of the committee would be to investigate and make recommendations to Congress on various phases of the reconstruction problem.

The six committees would be designated in the following manner:

Joint Congressional committee on demobilization of the army and the navy.

Joint Congressional committee on foreign trade and commerce.

Joint Congressional committee on interstate transportation.

Joint Congressional committee on domestic business.

Joint Congressional committee on employers and employees.

Joint Congressional committee on natural resources.

DUTIES OF COMMITTEES.

The duty of the committee on demobilization would be to investigate and report upon these subjects:

The employment of discharged soldiers and sailors in civil pursuits.

The allotment of lands to returned soldiers and sailors and their establishment in homes upon the public domain.

All legislation which may be required in the proper care for those who have suffered the dangers of war and whose ability to earn a livelihood has been impaired.

The committee on foreign trade and commerce would have charge of these problems:

Duties on imports for the protection and encouragement of home industry.

The development of new markets.

Combinations for the purpose of increasing our selling facilities.

Changes in our banking facilities necessary to co-operate with such trade.

The supply and control of raw materials and encouragement in the production of articles that have not heretofore been manufactured in this country.

The merchant marine, including construction of ships; the continuance of government ownership and operation, and in general with respect to the various problems of transportation on the high seas.

TRANSPORTATION.

The following questions would be turned over to the Interstate Transportation Committee:

The permanent relation which the government should sustain to the committee on carriers of the country.

Whether the systems of transportation now in possession of and being operated by the government should be returned to their former owners and operated as heretofore, or whether the government operation should continue with or without government ownership; or if private ownership is to be continued what system of regulation and control will be best adapted to secure efficiency in service; reasonable rates of transportation and fairness to the capital invested.

The relation which should be established between inland water transportation and the railroads, including the control of the former.

All questions relating to communication by wire.

The fourth committee—the Committee on Domestic Business—would be placed in charge of these questions:

To what extent, if any, should our laws relating to trusts and combinations be modified.

What co-operation should be permitted in order to increase efficiency, reduce cost, and enable this country to successfully meet foreign competition.

To what extent should the government undertake to control prices.

Government loans to private enterprises.

Government supervision of capital issues.

ON EMPLOYMENT.

The following questions would be assigned to the Committee on Employers and Employees:

Conciliation and arbitration in labor disputes.

The relation of men and women in similar employments.

Substitution of female employees for male employees and vice versa.

The organization of permanent employment agencies.

The distribution of labor, including the employment of surplus labor on public works.

The sanitary housing of employees and the disposition of houses constructed by the government during the war.

The freedom of labor and of employment in its relation to trade unionism; and wages, hours and conditions of labor.

The Committee on Natural Resources would have charge of these problems:

The encouragement of private enterprise in the development of the resources of the public domain.

The tendency toward urban pop-

GERMAN REDS SINK SHIPS.

Allies Cheated of Spoils of War by Revolutionists Destroying Vessels.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

COPENHAGEN, Nov. 16.—A large number of ships demanded by the Allies under the naval terms of the armistice were sunk by their German crews during the revolution, according to Germania of Berlin.

Clause 30 of the armistice provides that all merchant vessels in German hands belonging to the Allied and associated powers are to be restored in ports to be specified by the Allies and the United States.

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 16.—The new German government, according to a dispatch from Berlin, has telegraphed to the Secretary of the Navy to see that complete discipline is observed in the German fleet. The telegram concludes:

"We will only get peace if we loyally fulfill the conditions of the armistice."

BASEL (Switzerland) Nov. 16.—(Havas.) The new German government has addressed an appeal to the submarine crews explaining that it is indispensable that the armistice conditions be carried out rapidly.

Guarantee, it is stated, will be given that the crews will be repatriated after their arrival in England and will be discharged as soon as they return to Germany.

LONDON, Nov. 16.—In compliance with the terms of the armistice, the German forces in East Africa under Gen. Von Lettow-Verbeck surrendered on November 14 on the Zambezi River, south of Kasama, Northeastern Rhodesia. This official announcement is made tonight.

SWEET CHRISTMAS FOR CALIFORNIA.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 16.—This will be a sweet Christmas in California, according to announcement made today by the United States Food Administration for California, which received advices from Washington increasing sugar allotments, for December only, to candy and other less essential manufacturers, bakers and soft drink and ice cream makers.

It was announced that certificates for the increased allotments are available.

General conservation of sugar is not to be discontinued, Food Administration officials said. But the additional allotment is a Christmas present made possible by a larger available supply in this State.

HUNS TRY TO ELICIT SYMPATHY BY PLEAS.

HYSTERICAL APPEALS BELIEVED DESIGNED TO EXCITE LENIENCY.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—In the almost hysterical appeals of the German provisional government for supplies of food and for permission to address itself directly through a commission to the American public, officials here see a purpose to excite the sympathies of a large element of the American population more or less connected by blood ties with Germany. With such sympathies aroused, the German government, it was said, undoubtedly hopes to influence the approaching peace conference toward leniency.

Such appeals as those which have been sent by wireless by Dr. Solf, German Foreign Secretary, to Secretary Lansing, were said to be quite unnecessary and not likely to have any beneficial results. President Wilson already has promised to do everything possible to prevent suffering among the civil population of the liberated states. The Entente Powers have indorsed this attitude, not so much from considerations of mercy or sympathy with the foe, as from a genuine conviction that a starving and desperate people would make dangerous neighbors; render any satisfactory peace impossible, and by appeals to the internationalist spirit endanger the security of the Entente countries themselves. The design of the conservative elements in the Entente states is understood to be to avoid raising any new issues that would aggravate these conditions.

It is known officially that there is sufficient food in Germany to meet immediate needs. The Supreme War Council is planning to supply food in the future and before the present stocks are exhausted, assuming the exercise of economy in food distribution.

To correct what appears to be a general public misunderstanding on the subject, it may be authoritatively stated that none of this food to be sent from America to Germany or Austria will be given away. It must be paid for by the governments of those countries. Possibly that cannot be done in German cash, for it is believed that the store of gold in the Reichsbank has been practically exhausted through the heavy purchases which Germany has been obliged to make from neutral countries.

PARIS, Nov. 16.—(British Wireless Service.) President Wilson will be invited to lay the corner-stone of the proposed monument at the mouth of the Gironde River, commemorative of the help given to France by the United States in the war.

WILSON EXPECTED IN ENGLAND AND FRANCE SHORTLY

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LONDON, Nov. 16.—Reuter's Limited is informed that President Wilson is expected in England shortly.

PARIS, Nov. 16.—A semiofficial note declaring that some countries had chosen their peace plenipotentiaries has led to much comment on the personnel of the delegations, but no announcements have been made, although it is generally accepted in Paris that President Wilson and Secretary of State Lansing will join Col. House with a large staff of secretaries and shipping, food and other experts. Admiral Benson will remain here as naval adviser to Col. House.

The Paris municipal council yesterday adopted a resolution to the effect that, in the event of President Wilson coming to France, a deputation will be sent to greet him on his arrival on French soil and he will be received at a sitting of the council in the Hotel de Ville. A fete will be organized in President Wilson's honor by the municipality.

OUR MEN LEAD WAY TO RHINE.

Pershing's Troops are Honored by Heading First Big Unit of the Allied Occupational Forces to Garrison Teuton Cities Held as Hostages.

(ATLANTIC CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.)

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Nov. 16.—The American troops will be first of the Allied force to occupy German soil. The choice has been made by Marshal Foch, Allied commander in chief, and the American army is under orders to begin its march info Germany at 5:30 o'clock tomorrow morning (Sunday.)

The advance will be made in several columns and the troops are expected to advance about twelve miles each day until they arrive at their respective stations. The various units assigned to the different cities and sections will separate from the main column at convenient places and move to their respective stations.

The advancing American divisions will follow the retreating Germans, but at a considerable interval. The Allied commanders have estimated the speed at which the Germans are withdrawing and efforts will be made not to permit the two armies to come in contact during the march.

When the army enters Germany it will be in full military array with every equipment for battle included in the supply of a field army. The divisions assigned to this service have been selected with great care and with due regard to military achievement since arriving in France.

None of the American or Allied headquarters will hazard a guess at the duration of Allied occupation of German soil. The armistice period was set at thirty days, but that does not necessarily mean the troops will be withdrawn at the time. It is certain the occupation will be continued until after the peace treaties are signed and, with regard to withdrawal at that time, it is pointed out that the German army occupying France in 1871 did not evacuate all French soil until all indemnities were paid and France had met other stipulated conditions following the surrender of her armies.

The strip of German soil to be occupied has been divided between the different armies of the nations associated against Germany. The Belgians have a certain district, the British another and the French and Americans are associated in the largest section across Southern Germany. The exact locations of the different spheres of control have not been made public to date.

More than 1000 prisoners of war came through the American lines northeast of Verdun yesterday. A few Americans were scattered among the number, but most of them were French. They were mostly men who had been captured recently and held in camps near the front. When the Germans began their withdrawal Thursday the prisoners were left behind and allowed to shift for themselves.

The freed prisoners presented a bizarre aspect as they marched into Verdun. Caught in a cold wave without sufficient clothing, they had taken whatever was available to keep themselves warm. Some wore German overcoats, others had synthetic uniforms and some even had on women's wearing apparel.

They reported the Germans were withdrawing rapidly. In a day-and-a-half march toward the American lines the refugees had seen very few Germans and those had not hindered the homeward progress of the marchers.

All erstwhile prisoners showed the effect of being overworked without proper clothing, rest or food.

MOVE TOWARD METZ.

PARIS, Nov. 16.—(Havas.) French and American troops continue to progress in their occupation of Alsace-Lorraine. Both forces continue their movements in the direction of Metz today, according to the Temps.

WITH THE AMERICAN FORCES IN ALSACE-LORRAINE, Nov. 16.—(By the Associated Press.) Rumanian prisoners began reaching the American lines late yesterday. They said the Germans had freed them rather than give them food or provide transportation for them. The Rumanians appear in groups at different parts of the front, being supplied with clothing and fed by the Americans.

WITH THE AMERICAN FORCES IN FRANCE, Nov. 16.—The movement of the American army toward Germany is being made in columns and not in the order of battle so long followed. But it is not forgotten that technically at least there is still a state of war. Nothing will be left to chance, and every precaution will be taken to guard against surprises, notwithstanding that none are expected.

The advancing Americans will be flanked by the armies of France, and by Sunday evening it is expected that the advance elements of the Americans will cross the Belgian border. The Fifth French Army on the left and the Tenth French Army on the right will advance abreast the Americans, while far along the line to the left and right the Allied troops will continue to march toward the line agreed upon in the armistice.

The American advance will begin on a front from Mouzon to Thiaucourt, the extending lines embracing Luxemburg and Briey, up the valley to the Moselle. Besides Luxemburg, the more important towns falling to the lot of the Americans are Longwy and Briey.

The occupation of the territory which is being steadily evacuated by the terms of the armistice will not be carelessly hastened. It will be some days before German soil is reached, but in less time the duchy of Luxemburg will be penetrated, perhaps even to its capital.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMIES IN EASTERN FRANCE, Friday, Nov. 15.—(By the Associated Press.) Officials and civilians in villages in German-occupied territory are sending many messages to headquarters here, urging that American troops start toward the Rhine as soon as possible. It is feared that after the Germans move back there will be trouble caused by stragglers.

Most of these messages have been sent with French and Italian soldiers who have been released from German prison camps.

PARIS, Nov. 16.—(By the Associated Press.) Belgian advance guards entered Brussels Saturday morning.

The Germans troops, in accordance with the armistice, began moving out of the Belgian capital Friday, and now are nine miles away, according to the correspondent of the Midi, on the Belgian front.

JANUARY PEACE CONFERENCE DATE

BY ROBERT B. ARMSTRONG.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—Secretary of State Lansing today authorized a denial of published reports that the Allies and the American government have completed arrangements for assembling of the world peace conference at an early date. No agreement has been reached, Secretary Lancing asserted, either upon the time or the place for the conference.

Coincident with the State Department's announcement, diplomats of Entente nations informally declared that, with all the expedition possible, preparations for the conference could not be completed before January 1. A prime factor, it is said, which will contribute to determining the date of the conference will be re-establishment of orderly government in enemy territories.

What the Allies can do with reference to enemy countries is to reach necessary understandings concerning political and territorial questions upon which unity is required before the tribunal sits, in order that there may be no opportunity for division to the benefit of enemy interests. It is chiefly to this end that the foreign ministers of the Allied nations are now meeting in Paris.

Physical arrangements also must be made. Preparations are expected to be made directly after the selection of the seat for the conference, which is likely to be Versailles, for communication facilities between the conference place and the capitals of all the belligerent governments. There will be special cable lines to America to be devoted to no other use than that of the American delegation and the American government. One novel innovation, it was asserted today, will be the employment of airplanes, instead of trains and ships, for the convenience of couriers between Versailles and London, Berlin and Rome.

SECTIONAL CONSIDERATION.

The organization of the conference itself is receiving consideration now. Instead of one interminable session, taking up one question after another, the expectation is that sections will be organized, as has been the custom at The Hague peace conferences, and somewhat similar to the committee system in the American Congress. For instance, in addition to the national sections, representing each nation's delegation, which will vote in the general conference as a unit, there will be topical sections composed of experts from all the delegations, or in which the major powers at least will have one or more representatives and which will devote their study and deliberations to one subject—their conclusions to be referred to the general sitting.

In this manner both the work and life of the Congress will be incalculably shortened. There would be a section for indemnities, or reparations; another for Poland; one for freedom of the seas; others for the Balkans; for the Turkish problem, for the League of Nations, for the codification of international law, for economic questions; for the rectification of frontiers, for the oppressed nationalities of Austria-Hungary, etc.

The question of representation of Ukraine, the Baltic provinces which have declared their independence, the Croats and Slovenes, Finland, Palestine, and other countries, which have manifested a desire for independence, has not yet been decided by the Allies. It was regarded as likely today that none would be admitted to the conference which shall not previously have been recognized at least as de facto by the Allies. In any event, however, their representatives will have an opportunity to be heard at the peace conference by the section considering the problem embracing them.

RUSSIA INCLUDED.

No decision has yet been reached either as to Russian representation at the conference, but it is nowhere seriously questioned that Russia will have a delegation there, empowered to vote equally with the other Allied nations. It is probable that President Wilson will suggest to the Allies a method by which official representation for the Russian democracy may be obtained without doing violence to the sensibilities of Russia or to the conventions which usually govern the selection of such delegations.

Neutral nations will have no voice in the conference, but their representatives will be able to appear before subcommittees, or sections, and state their complaints and demands. There is thought to be under consideration the issuing of an invitation to all neutral governments to send representatives to the final session of the conference, in which the league of nations proposal will be voted on. The alternative plan is to submit the league of nations convention to the neutral governments for ratification after it shall have been adopted by the peace conference.

AMERICANS OCCUPY BRIEY.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Nov. 16.—That part of the American army of occupation which starts toward the Rhine up the Moselle Valley will pass through the rich iron ore mine district in the region of Briey, which fell into the new German Empire when in 1871 Lorraine was annexed by Germany. This territorial gain enabled Germany to prepare for the war started in 1914.

The capture of the remainder of the Briey mines in the early months of the war insured for Germany a regular iron production, largely enabling Germany to push the fighting. With the capitulation of Germany, the whole of the iron ore basin extending from Briey and Longwy as far as Thionville is being returned to France.

LLOYD GEORGE OPENS CAMPAIGN IN LONDON.

LONDON, Nov. 16.—(British Wireless Service.) Premier Lloyd George, Chancellor of the Exchequer Bonar Law and George M. Barnes, member of the War Cabinet, the leaders of the coalition government, opened the general election campaign this morning by addressing a large and enthusiastic meeting in Central Hall, Westminster. The Premier presided.

Mr. Lloyd George said the new Parliament would be the most important ever elected in the history of the country. Continuing, he said:

"The war has revealed the defects of the old system and we will be wise to take note of and remedy them. We cannot return to the old conditions.

"The health of the people must be the special concern of the state. What we have done toward feeding ourselves in the past is like feeding a hungry giant with a teaspoon."

The opposition, the Premier continued, was organized for fault-finding and made for delay. For organized labor to withdraw from the coalition at the present moment, he declared, was the height of folly.

For the next four years and a half, the Premier said, he wanted to see all parties united with the best traditions of all.

A voice: "What about the discharged soldiers' party?"

The Premier: "Surely that is not a separate party and the general election will prove it."

This remark was greeted with cheers.

GERMAN STATES TO SEE HOOVER.

American Food Chief will Visit Teuton Countries.

Solf Continues Appealing to President Wilson.

Allies and Hun Victims to be Fed First, is Dictum.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

PARIS, Nov. 16.—Arrangements are being made for Herbert C. Hoover, the American Food Administrator, to proceed to Germany and Austria in connection with the food situation. It is declared he will go to Germany and Austria soon after his arrival here.

BERLIN, Nov. 16 (by wireless to London, 1:05 p.m.) (By the Associated Press.)—Foreign Secretary Solf has sent a message to Secretary of State Lansing urgently requesting President Wilson to give permission for a German commission to immediately leave Germany for the United States so as personally to lay before the American government the conditions existing here and to assure the taking of steps to purchase foodstuffs.

DR. SOLF'S APPEAL.

BERLIN, Friday, Nov. 15 (by wireless to London.)—In his message to Secretary of State Lansing at Washington today, Dr. W. S. Solf, after appealing to him to intercede with President Wilson to send peace delegates to The Hague as soon as possible "in order to save the German people from perishing by starvation and anarchy," suggested that Herbert C. Hoover, the American Food Administrator, be assigned to the task of assisting the German people. This section of Dr. Solf's message reads:

"American delegates could discuss with the plenipotentiaries of the German people the details of how the magnanimous help of America could save, in time, our fatherland from the worst. Perhaps the matter could be put in the tried hands of Mr. Hoover, who has rendered such great services in Belgium.

"The acceptance of the oppressive armistice conditions, the necessity of supplying from scanty provisions the armies that are streaming back from the front, the cessation of navigation in the North Sea and the Baltic by the continuance of the blockade, which imperils our provision supply, and the disturbed conditions in the east make the situation in our country daily more unbearable. The peril can be avoided only by the most speedy help."

PLAN BLOCKADE RELAXATION.

NEW YORK, Nov. 16.—The problem of feeding Germany is not one of going to their relief, but of relaxing the blockade, "so that they may secure for themselves the bare necessities that will give stable government," said Herbert C. Hoover, Food Administrator, before sailing for Europe today to discuss food measures for relief of starving populations.

"There has been a great deal of unnecessary furore in this country about feeding the Germans," he said. "We are not worrying about the Germans. They can take care of themselves if given a chance, but the water-tight blockade has got to be abandoned. If there is an advance relaxation of the blockade, Germany can get food, fish from Norway and Sweden, grain from Argentina, but the blockade will have to be lifted. What is desired most now is for Germany to get some sort of stable basis so she can pay the money she owes to France and Belgium."

Mr. Hoover said that he expected to be in London only a day or two. He will then go to Paris to attend the Allied conferences at Versailles. His work may take him into Belgium, but he does not expect to meet any of the German food administrators. He expects to return to America by Christmas to confer with the President before beginning his actual administration abroad in co-operation with the Allies.

Continuing his discussion of European food conditions, Mr. Hoover said:

"Arrangements have long since been completed by which the big allies, that is, France, England and Italy, will be provisioned. This covers 125,000,000 people.

"Our first and deepest concern now must be for the little allies who were under the German yoke. They are the Belgians, Serbians, Rumanians, Greeks, Czechs, Jugo-Slavs and others. There are some 75,000,000 people in these groups, and they must be systematically helped at once. We have already doubled the stream of food flowing toward Belgium.

"There is a great problem in the situation of the enemy peoples—about 90,000,000. I would certainly approach this problem with mixed feelings, having been long a witness to the robbery of food from women and children and the destruction of millions of tons of food at sea and to the misery under which the millions among the big and little allies have suffered under the German yoke."

Discussing domestic conditions, the Food Administrator said that the regulation forbidding brewing after December 1 would not be rescinded, but that it expired with peace. There was enough beer in the country to last four or five months, he said.

INFLUENZA DECREASES, CAMP LEWIS REPORTS.

QUARANTINE WILL BE LIFTED MONDAY; RED CROSS GIVES SWEATERS.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

CAMP LEWIS (Tacoma, Wash.) Nov. 16.—The weekly health report for Camp Lewis issued today shows that during the week just passed influenza showed a consistent decrease from the week before with 241 cases against 254 the previous week. There were 150 cases of pneumonia reported, an apparent increase of 61 over the previous week, but this number was due to late reporting of cases by the base hospital. There were only eight deaths.

The influenza reports for the camp would show a much greater decrease were it not for the fact that out of 309 recruits from Alaska arriving during the week 104 have been transferred to the hospital with influenza. Of these 93 were admitted on one day.

The report also shown that 88 cases of measles and 36 cases of mumps developed among the 35,851 soldiers in camp.

The influenza quarantine, which was established here October 9, last, will be lifted Monday and the men allowed to circulate freely in nearby cities. Theaters and indoor gathering places of the men in camp were allowed to open tonight.

The work of the Red Cross in camp was shown today when it was announced Red Cross officials here have distributed 91,062 sweaters to soldiers here, 90,724 pairs of socks, 4502 mufflers, 11,030 pairs of wristlets, 1358 helmets, [illegible] dish towels, 3720 pairs of blankets and 2129 comforters besides thousands of other articles to individual men and in the hospitals.

Thirty thousand face masks, principally during the influenza epidemic, also were issued by the Red Cross.

EX-KAISER IS NOT INTERNED.

Former Emperor Regarded as Guest of Holland.

Ceased to be Soldier When He Abdicated, is Claim.

Frederick William and Wife at Friend's Castle.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

AMERONGEN (Holland) Wednesday, Nov. 13.—William Hohenzollern has not been interned by the Netherlands government. He is regarded rather as a distinguished foreigner, who has sought refuge, and who has a claim to protection.

Presumably he is free to go where he likes, but the fact that his suite has actually been interned restricts his movements.

Count von Bentinck explained today that the former Crown Prince, as well as the former Emperor, ceased to be soldiers when they abdicated.

The former Emperor was seen today strolling about the castle grounds with Count von Bentinck and the Count's son. He wore a gray military overcoat.

The members of the former Emperor's suite today surrendered their swords to Dutch officers. They had previously surrendered their other arms, and today's formality completed the act of internment.

LONDON, Friday, Nov. 15.—Former Crown Prince Frederick William of Germany has been interned at the castle owned by his friend, Count Gisbert Wolff Metternich, at Swalmen, a town in the province of Limburg, Holland, says an Amsterdam dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company. It is reported his wife is with him.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—Resumption of construction work on postoffices and other public buildings was ordered today by Secretary McAdoo, thereby rescinding orders of last December suspending all public building on account of war conditions.

Many millions authorized for new buildings are awaiting action. Mr. McAdoo specified that one of the first construction propositions to be taken up would be for a new archives building in Washington.

PLAN TO ORGANIZE FOR SOUTH AMERICAN TRADE

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—Business or professional men acquainted with commercial conditions in South and Central America, and also able to speak Spanish or Portuguese, would be organized into a national commercial reserve force, under plans being developed by the International High Commission's United States section, of which Secretary McAdoo is chairman.

These men would be subject to call by international banking and trade organizations to go to South America or elsewhere to represent them.

FRENCH TO JUDGE GERMAN OFFICERS

Court-martial of Offenders at Lille to be Carried Out at Once.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

PARIS, Friday, Nov. 15.—Edouard Ignace, Undersecretary of State for Military Justice, has ordered a judicial inquiry at Lille against German officers accused of crimes during enemy occupation of that city.

This action conforms to the decision recently made by the French Cabinet.

"These officers will be judged by a court-martial in their absence," says the Temps, "if the Allies are not able to secure custody of the accused."

This is the first of such prosecutions.

HUNS' BILL DUE FRANCE MADE UP.

Seventy Billion Dollars is the Amount of Indemnity to be Asked of Germany.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

PARIS, Nov. 16.—(Havas.) Germany's debt to France is estimated at 340,000,000,000 francs by the Matin in an editorial today. The newspaper apportions the debt as follows:

Return of the indemnity of 1871, with interest, 60,000,000,000 francs; expenses in the present war, 140,000,000,000 francs; pensions, 40,000,000,000, and reparation for damages, 100,000,000,000 francs.

The Matin declares that France must secure acknowledgment of the debt before examining the way in which it is to be paid. France wants no indemnity profit, but all Frenchmen want lawful reparation.

Germany and Austria, it adds, should return to the Allies a minimum of 7,000,000 tons of shipping in payment for that destroyed in the war, but they have at their disposal only 3,000,000 tons. Consequently the delivery of the entire German-Austrian merchant marine would constitute only half reparation.

ASKS BILLIONS FOR THE NAVY.

Daniels' Appropriation Bill Calls for 156 New Ships.

Nineteen Millions Wanted for Yards, Docks, Shops.

Prepared on War Basis, Estimates will be Sliced.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—Estimates of the Navy Department for the 1920 naval appropriation bill, as submitted to Congress, as announced today, call for $2,411,900,000, but, as they were prepared with the view of continuance of the war, material reductions are expected during the framing of the bill, which will be begun next Tuesday by the House Naval Committee.

Appropriations for the navy for the fiscal year ending June 20 amounted to $1,720,000,000, all of which except $125,000,000 provided by a recent deficiency measure, was carried by the regular 1919 appropriation bill.

Increase in naval strength is provided for by the new estimates. Besides calling for a new three-year building programme of 156 vessels, including ten superdreadnaughts, six battle cruisers and 140 smaller craft as previously announced by Secretary Daniels, the estimates include appropriations of $233,985,000 for completing the first three-year programme.

NEW BUILDING PROGRAMME.

The new building programme contemplates expenditure of $600,000,000, one-third of that amount being appropriated each year.

An emergency fund of $175,000,000 to be spent at the direction of the President in expediting delivery of material and munitions and completion of new ships was contained in the estimates.

The cost of the Marine Corps is estimated at $155,286,900, an increase of about $12,000,000 over the last appropriation. Other big items of the estimates include:

Pay of the navy, $579,946,071; aviation, $225,000,000; ammunition, $125,000,000; new ship batteries, $115,000,000; fuel, $98,000,000; repair of vessels, $75,000,000; ordnance and ordnance stores, $75,000,000; reserve ordnance supplies, $77,600,000; medical department, $15,200,000.

NAVY YARD IMPROVEMENTS.

Improvements are planned at several navy yards and stations. An appropriation of $2,500,000 is asked for buying and developing land at the New York yard, while $5,150,000 is asked for completing the dry dock, building new shops and a power plant at the Philadelphia yard.

Improvements on the water front, new ships and other work at Norfolk would cost $3,300,000, while work at the Hampton Roads operating base would cost $3,000,000.

At the Key West naval station, $2,525,000 would be spent building a water works system and submarine base.

Shops at the Mare Island (Cal.) yard would cost $1,800,000 and improvement work at the Puget Sound yard, $775,000.

Dutch Revolutionary Makes Inflammatory Speech in Parliament.

THE HAGUE, Wednesday, Nov. 13.—The second chamber of the Dutch Parliament engaged in bitter debate today. Addresses were made denouncing demands made by Pieter J. Troelstra that the Premier give further details as to expected food supplies from the United States.

David Wynkoop, the revolutionary Socialist, made a speech demanding the immediate abdication of the Queen, urging a general strike. He proposed that demobilized troops should refuse to surrender control of the armies until they were assured of food supplies for themselves and families. He remarked, incidentally, that Troelstra and his adherents were on the side of the bourgeoisie, "just as Scheidemann and Ebert are in Germany."

PARIS, Nov. 16, 4:40 a.m.—A German airplane arrived yesterday morning at the French lines bearing an urgent message from the Mayor of Mulhausen asking that a French regiment be sent to maintain order. The population, full of enthusiasm, has risen against the Germans, who are retiring in the utmost disorder, according to the Echo de Paris.

ZURICH, Nov. 16, 5:10 a.m.—A panic developed at Munich Monday, according to the Tageblatt of Stuttgart. Munich had been very calm, but suddenly all sorts of alarmist reports became current.

Cries were raised in the streets of "The counter-revolution is coming" and "Here are the Prussians." Machine guns were posted on the street corners and began firing. For two days greatest disorder prevailed. Some semblance of order was finally restored yesterday.

PARIS, Nov. 16.—Conditions in Brussels on Tuesday and Wednesday were as disturbed as on Sunday and Monday, owing to many clashes between German troops, says the Bruges correspondent of L'Information. In a fight in which machine guns were used, twenty soldiers were killed.

Officers were driven from the streets, and those found hiding were killed.

The Governor and his suite, the correspondent adds, are believed to have escaped, but most of the officers attached to the staff of the local commander were assassinated.

The Belgian population took no part in the disturbances.

BERNE (Switzerland) Friday, Nov. 15.—Field Marshal Von Mackensen, who commanded the German troops occupying Rumania, has arrived with his staff and a thousand men at Hermannstadt, in Transylvania. The Allies crossed the Danube on November 9 and easily overcame such resistance as was offered by German forces there. British troops have entered Constanza, a Rumanian seaport on the Black Sea, sixty miles southwest of the delta of the Danube. There was great enthusiasm among the people when the British arrived.

Gen. Berthelot, who commanded the French armies fighting around Rheims and later in the advance across the Aisne, is now in Rumania.

PARIS, Nov. 16.—Baron [illegible] the Italian Foreign Minister, had luncheon today with Col. E. M. House and while the meeting was largely social, some of the preliminaries of the inter-Allied conference and the peace congress were discussed.

Italian Premier Orlando is detained in Italy by the illness of his wife and the British electoral campaign is largely occupying the time of the British leaders, but prompt telegraphic exchange between the capitals permits the adjustment of many details.

In official exchanges with Washington, Col. House is able to communicate with President Wilson at the White House within ten minutes.

The conferences and exchanges will be suspended Sunday. Col. House will take a long automobile tour over the Marne battlefield and will visit Chateau Thierry.

It is believed that the informal exchanges will continue until the latter part of November. The voting in the British electoral campaign until December 28 may delay the peace congress beyond that time.

DEMOBILIZATION ORDERS ISSUED.

Gradual Discharge of Troops in America to Start.

Bring 200,000 Home in Next Half Month.

Pershing to Direct Return of Soldiers in France.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—Movement of American troops across the Atlantic has stopped entirely and demobilization of troops in cantonments and camps at home is under way.

Gen. March, Chief of Staff, made announcement today, outlining the War Department's plans in answer to the questions the country has been asking since the day the armistice was signed and it became apparent that the war was over. He said orders already issued would send 200,000 men back to civil life within two weeks, and that when the programme was in full swing about 30,000 would quit the army daily.

Fighting divisions of Gen. Pershing's army in France will be demobilized as fast as possible in their home communities. The Chief of Staff would make no prediction as to when the first divisions would start home. It appears probable, however, that the flow of returning troops can be in full tide before January 1. Quarters will be available for them at the cantonments by that time.

Some officers regard it as possible that certain divisions may be recalled in advance of the general return movement. Gen. March indicated that the Forty-second (Rainbow) division, because it is composed of men from twenty-six States and in recognition of the fighting record it has made in France, would be marked for special treatment. The Twenty-sixth (New England) National Guard and the Forty-first (Sunset) Divisions are in the same class, so it would not cause surprise, therefore, if these three organizations should be designated by Gen. Pershing as the first to return. With six weeks of 1918 left it is possible they may be home before New Year's Day.

Supplementing Gen. March's statement, Secretary Baker said it would not be necessary to maintain all the existing cantonments for demobilization purposes and that a study was now being made of those desirable for that purpose. The others, with all the divisional camps, he indicated, will be abandoned as soon as the men now occupying them have been mustered out.

PLAN OF DEMOBILIZATION.

Demobilization will be in the following order:

First, development battalions, seventy-one in number, and comprising 98,199 men.

Second, conscientious objectors not under arrest.

Third, spruce production division.

Fourth, central training schools for officers with some modifications.

Fifth, United States Guards, now numbering 135,000 men.

Sixth, railway units.

Seventh, depot brigades.

Eight, replacement units.

Ninth, combat divisions.

THE FRONT LINE.

Gen. March sketched the official line held by the Allied armies and the Americans along the west front when the fighting stopped. The front held by the First and Second armies at that hour measured fifty-two miles. Of the American force Gen. March said:

"It had reached its highest point of military excellence on the day the fighting stopped and had endeared itself to the hearts of the American people."

Ports of the Atlantic Coast from Boston to Charleston, S. C., Gen. March said, are being organized to handle returning troops, and it is possible that ports south of Charleston will be used.

The question of final disposition of the great cantonments is being studied, Gen. March said, and no decision has been reached. New construction already largely has been stopped.

In discussing the demobilization plans with Senators at their weekly conference today, War Department officials said Secretary Baker planned to stop all movement of additional troops to Europe with the exception of surgical units.

"We have in the United States now something like 1,700,000 men, and to muster out a force of that kind, of course, will take some time," said Gen. March.

"Each man has to be examined physically, his final accounts made, so that the men may get compensation they are entitled to. Blank forms were being shipped to the various camps for use as these orders go into effect.

"Orders already issued affect 200,000 men. I expect to muster them out in two weeks. When the machine is in full operation we expect to release 30,000 men a day.

"In handling this problem of demobilization, one of the features which had to be considered was the subsequent retaining of men for the Regular Army, or what will be the Regular Army, when Congress passes laws reorganizing that army. When the war broke out, there were only a limited number of such men in the service, and the great number of men who filled out these units were men who voluntarily enlisted for the period of the war. So we have offered these men who came in for the period of the war the option of re-enlisting if they care to.

"We have offered an immediate honorable discharge with a furlough of one month on re-enlistment, and we propose to ask Congress to give every single man who has been honorably discharged one month's pay, whatever his grade is, as a bonus. Every man who is discharged from the army is entitled to wear his uniform for a period of three months; that is a very necessary thing, because the releasing to civil life of three or four million men makes it impossible to clothe in civilian clothes so great a number.

"As men are discharged, we take up the question of the officers. Officers who want to apply for commissions in the Regular Army will be considered; officers who want to put themselves in a class where they can be used for future military operations will be offered commissions in the reserve corps. The rest of them will be discharged.

"I have cabled Gen. Pershing to return to the United States on troop transports all the men who are casuals or convalescents, sick and wounded, who are able to be moved, and these men will come in a steady flow across the Atlantic before the larger number come back as units.

"We propose when the divisions come back from France to have them mustered out in the vicinity of their homes. The men from New England will be put in Camp Devens, for instance, and we intend to have these men parade in the nearest adjacent towns so that the home people can see their own soldiers. This scheme calls for the clearing out of the camps at home, and will leave in each one of these camps a unit of the Regular Army to police it and take care of it and make it ready for the troops as they came back from France.

CASUALTIES QUICK NOW.

"With reference to casualties in the American Expeditionary Forces, I cabled Gen. Pershing to report in plain English and not in code, so as to save time, the name of every man killed, wounded or missing up to the time of the armistice not hitherto reported. I have had an answer this morning saying he would expedite it in every way."

YANKEES HELD FRONT OF 52 MILES LAST DAY.

GEN. MARCH GIVES FINAL LINE-UP OF AMERICAN FORCES; PAYS TRIBUTE

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—In giving the official line-up of the American armies on the day the war ended in November 11, Gen. March today paid a glowing tribute to the Expeditionary Forces and declared that when hostilities ceased the front held by the American First and Second armies was fifty-two miles in extent.

"The performance of the American army," he said, "at the conclusion of the armistice, had reached the highest point of military efficiency. They are close to the hearts of the American people."

The following was the line-up on the last day of the war, as given by Gen. March:

"At the beginning of the armistice the final line on the Belgian, British and French fronts was approximately as follows:

"Along the west bank of the Scheldt from the Dutch frontier to Eecke; thence to the Dendre River at Grammont; along the west bank of the Dendre River to Ath; thence to a point four miles east of Mons; then one to three miles east of the Belgian border to the vicinity of Rocroi; through Rocroi to Mezieres; along the Meuse to Sedan and Bazelles.

"The American front can be given exactly. The front of the first army beginning at Bazelles followed the west bank of the Meuse to a point one mile southeast of Mouzon; crosses there to the east bank; cut the bend to Inor and followed the east bank to Stenay. Thence it ran: Baalon; northern and eastern outskirts of the Forest de Woevre; Remoiville; one mile northeast to Jametz; eastern edge of the Bois de Jametz; Damvillers inclusive; one mile northeast of Chaumont-devant-Damvillers; then through Villers; Bois Herbebois; west of Ornes; one-half mile west of Dieppe; Abaucourt; west of Grimaucourt; three-quarters of a mile northeast of Ronvaux; one mile east of Manheulles; Chateau d'Aulnois.

"The second army began at that point and ran: Riaville; Marcheville; St. Hilaire; Butgheville; one and one-half miles south of Jonville; across the northern end of the Lachaussee Lake; south of Dampvitoux; south of Charey; south of Rembercourt; three-quarters of a mile south of Preny; crossed the Moselle one-half mile southwest of Champey; one mile north of Les Mesnils; the German frontier on the Seille River two miles east of Les Mesnils; the west bank of the Seille River to a point one-half mile southeast of Port-sur-Seille, which was the end of the second army front."

PACIFIC RED CROSS AMONG TOP NOTCHERS.

HAS HIGHEST AVERAGE MEMBERSHIP—300.77 TO 1000 POPULATION.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 16.—The Pacific division of the American Red Cross has the highest average of membership—300.77 members to 1000 population—of any division and holds first rank among the fourteen divisions in the United States as regards membership and promptness in paying for supplies furnished by the bureau of supplies.

This is shown in a report received today by A. B. C. Dohrmann, acting manager of the Pacific division, from S. G. Dubois, comptroller, in Washington.

The report states that in August a total of $175,959.73 in chapter payments out of $182,320.84, owing the Pacific division on August 1, was made.

It is announced that every chapter plans to bring its membership up to 100 per cent. of the Christmas roll call.

Why Preserve Your Teeth--and Neglect Your Hair?

Is not a woman robbed of her beauty, when she is robbed of her hair?

About Ten Million Dollars is Spent Yearly to Prevent Troubles of the Teeth.

Now—How Much is Judiciously Spent in Prevention of Baldness?

Not half of that sum. And why? Simply because the hair does not cause you pain. Simply because you forget about your hair except when you comb it two or three times a day. If your hair could only cause you pain, there would not be nearly as many cases of baldness as there now are.

Men and women—do not wait until some scalp trouble has started your hair to falling out, do not wait until you are nearly bald—it may then be too late to preserve your hair.

Prof. Austin can determine the exact trouble by turning a powerful microscope upon your hair and scalp. He has had thirty-nine years' experience in conditions of the hair and scalp—surely it is worth a few moments of your time to take advantage of this free examination.

—Professor Austin says that the use of mange cures, dandruff cures, hair tonics, vaseline and elixirs is like taking medicine without knowing what you are trying to cure.

During the past 3 years Prof. Austin has made thousands of free microscopic examinations of the hair and scalp of Hamburger patrons—and they enthusiastically appreciate this free service. Hours, 10 to 12 and 2 to 4. Hamburger's—Private Office—Second Floor.

FORD HINTS AT VOTE RECOUNT.

Says if Sought will be to Show Use of Money.

Pleased to Know Neighbors and State Like Him.

Will do All He Can to Help Wilson Peace Ideas.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—To the extent that politics is synonymous with "getting down into the ditch and throwing mud," Henry Ford, defeated candidate for United States Senator from Michigan, is through with the game forever. To the extent that continued support of President Wilson's policies, Mr. Ford will stick to it.

This assertion was embodied in a typewritten statement commenting on his defeat which Mr. Ford made public there today. Mr. Ford said he got lots of satisfaction out of his candidacy.

"Any man worth while likes to know that he stands well with his neighbors," the statement said. "The vote shows that in my home city and county where I have lived all my life I got all the Democratic votes and nearly half the Republican votes."

Mr. Ford wound up his statement by hinting at a possible recount of the vote in Michigan.

"If so, it will be for the purpose of showing how our elections are manipulated by the money interests; nor will that cease with the election," the statement continues. "If organized effort can inform the people and hinder the rule of the dollar I think we shall accomplish something."

Wall street interests now organizing against the President, Mr. Ford said, spent $176,000 to get the Republican nomination for his opponent, Commander Truman Newberry.

"How much was spent in the election to secure that Senatorial seat goodness only knows," the statement said. "If they would spend $176,000 to get one little nomination they would spend $176,000,000 to clean up the country. That is where our danger lies; that is what makes for Bolshevism."

OUTSIDE AID BEAT HIM.

Mr. Ford said he derived larger satisfaction than he did from the proof of his own popularity among his neighbors from the demonstration the election brought that Michigan was not so "rock-ribbed" Republican that voters could not be pried loose from the party label when principle was involved. Though the State is normally Republican by 100,000, the Michigan Republicans had to call for outside aid to beat him, Mr. Ford said.

"Two ex-Presidents and one would-be President got into the fracas," according to the statement. "Two of them stopped making faces at each other long enough to get together and take a united wallop at me, and the would-be came limping in late with his partisan contribution."

After this fling at the Roosevelt-Taft appeal and the Hughes aircraft investigation Mr. Ford continued:

"At that, nearly 50,000 Republicans jumped out of the corral and ran loose, and they seemed to like it. That bodes well for the future.

"Everybody's hope in Europe is pinned on Mr. Wilson's name and his deeds. He has performed well the work of carrying a peace-loving nation through a righteous war to a glorious success, and he is now facing the great problems of helping to bring the nations back to a peace basis, a just and lasting peace.

"I will probably not be able to help him in Congress, but I shall help him in every other way I can. The demonstrations all over the country, following the announcement of the cessation of hostilities, show the people do not like war and are with him in a life for peace that comes with honor, the only kind of peace any of us want.

"But there are influences organizing against him now, organizing to turn the results of the war to their profit and to keep all the people from reaping the full benefit of their sacrifice. We saw that in Michigan in the recent election. It is this sinister influence that must be combatted.

"After Germany's great victory in 1871 the military party fastened militarism on that nation, and that same militarism, like a Frankenstein, turned and ruined the very nation which created it, and to which it had given a false feeling of security for a time. We must see to it that our nation does not fall into the same error.

"The greatest security, the real preparedness of a nation is in the ability to do things. We did our big part of the job not with a lot of out-of-date munitions, but because we had the soldiers at the front to put pep into the action and the men at home to put the pep into making munitions for them, and men with plants and ability to turn the plants quickly to making up-to-date machinery and produce whatever was wanted in the rapid development of our war needs.

"We were prepared with skill and ability instead of antequated machinery. The Germans believed themselves the best prepared nation in the world, had rough antequated stuff to get them licked.

"With the nation at war my object was to help get out everything called for by the government and with the war ended my object is to help find profitable work for every returned soldier, no matter what his condition, and our experience has shown that practically all can be profitably employed."

SAYS IT SAVED HER POSITION

Miss Osborn Nearly Ready to Give Up.

Tanlac Restored Her to Health, She Says.

Troubles of Two Years Standing Ended.

"My condition was so awful that if I hadn't got hold of Tanlac when I did I would have had to stop working and give up my position," said Miss Rachel Osborn of 910 West Eighth street, Los Angeles, the other day.

"I had so much trouble the last two years with my stomach and kidneys," she continued, "that I was almost completely worn out, and many a time I felt like I just couldn't keep up another day. My food did not digest properly but would sour on my stomach and make me miserable for hours after eating anything. My kidneys worried me constantly and my nerves were in such a wretched state that I passed many a night without being able to sleep hardly at all. Then in the morning I would be so tired and fagged out that it was all I could do to get up and dress. I felt so tired and worn out all the time that my work was like drudgery to me and many a time I felt like I would just have to quit, for I could hardly drag myself around. Although I was taking some kind of medicine most all the time I got worse instead of better and hardly knew what to do next.

"As Tanlac seemed to be helping so many other rundown people I got me a bottle, hoping that it would help me, too. Before I had finished my first bottle I felt so much better that I knew I had found the right thing for my case at last. I have used four bottles now and must say that it is the only thing that has done me any good and kept me on my feet. My stomach has been toned up so that I digest what I eat and my food is doing me good. My kidneys don't worry me like they did, my nerves are quiet and I sleep like a child all night. I am in fine condition now and my work is a pleasure to me now instead of being a task. All my friends have noticed my great improvement and several of them have already begun to take Tanlac on account of the way it has helped me."

Tanlac is sold in Los Angeles, Pasadena and San Diego by The Owl Drug Co., under the personal direction of a special Tanlac representative.—[Advertisement.

SOUTHLAND MEN IN CASUALTIES.

Word has come to Mrs. Hazel H. Trombly of No. 45 North Meredith avenue, Pasadena, of the death in action of her husband, Corp. Charles H. Trombly, on September 30. The soldier, a member of Co. C of the Three Hundred and Forty-seventh Machine Gun Battery, Ninety-first Division, was 24 years old.

He is a son of the late Alfred B. Trombly of Pasadena and leaves his mother at No. 2758 Wabash avenue, Pasadena, and four brothers. He was affiliated with the Pasadena Chapter of B.P.O.E., Lodge No. 672, and before entering service had been employed at both the Los Angeles and Pasadena Chocolate Shops and at the Pasadena branch of Pig'n Whistle.

Private Lee Gardner, reported missing in action September 5, has written his sister, Mrs. E. Blanchard of No. 2805 Fairmont street, this city, that he was merely away on furlough at that time. An error in the company records accounted for the report.

Private Edgar E. Beaver, Co. B, Twenty-ninth Engineers, who volunteered early in the war, and who has been in France for a year, was wounded with nine others when a high explosive shell exploded in a German dugout, which they had just captured. He writes from a base hospital to Mrs. A. P. Whetstone of No. 1010 West Third street that he was severely wounded, but will recover. Mr. Beaver is 36 years old, and was employed by Bradstreet's here before going into the army.

EL SEGUNDO, Nov. 16.—Word was received here yesterday that Lieut. Donald Johnston of this city was killed in action on September 12 while out flying with his squadron on the St. Mihiel sector. Lieut. Johnston was a member of the One Hundred and Fourth Aero Squadron. The weather on that day was very rainy and misty, and the machines in the squadron lost each other. It is thought that the engine of Lieut. Johnston's machine was injured by German anti-aircraft gunfire, and that he was forced to attempt a landing. He came down in No Man's Land in a "nose dive." He was killed by German machine-gun fire. Eight hours later French troops recovered his body, rescued the mechanic of the machine, who was found in a shell hole seriously wounded, and brought in the wrecked plane.

Lieut. Johnston is the first El Segundo man to have been killed in action. He volunteered his services soon after war was declared, and was sent to Kelly Field, Tex., for training. While there he was seriously injured in a fall. He was formerly an employee of the Standard Oil Company in this city.

Sergt. Cecil K. Boles, son of Mrs. Minnie Boles of No. 929 Georgia street, died in France from influenza and pneumonia, according to a telegram from Adjt.-Gen. Harris in Washington yesterday.

Sergt. Boles was a volunteer, enlisting here in a Coast Artillery unit in 1917. At the time of his death he was a member of Co. B, Fifty-fourth Ammunition Train. Prior to departure overseas, he was stationed at Fort Rosecrans, San Diego.

Sergt. Boles leaves a widow, Mrs. Anna L. Boles of No. 987 South Normandie street, and a 4-year-old daughter. He had been employed for six years by the Crane Company, and was a member of the Fraternal Brotherhood and the Brotherhood of American Yeomen.

MONTEBELLO, Nov. 15.—Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Moulton were notified yesterday of the death in action of their son, Wesley N. Moulton, Co. K, One Hundred and Fourth United States Infantry, American Expeditionary Forces. The name of the dead soldier, whose death occurred October 15, has as yet appeared in no casualty list.

Two Pomona soldiers are dead in France, two are dead in this country, and one was injured going "over the top," according to information received here yesterday. Mr. and Mrs. John Whipp, pioneer residents of this city, received a telegram yesterday telling of the death of pneumonia of their son, Homer D. Whipp, which occurred on October 16. The deceased was a member of the Hospital Corps, having enlisted in Los Angeles. He went overseas last July. The transport on which he crossed was chased by a submarine and narrowly escaped being bombed.

Word was also received by S. Van Dusen, of East Center street, that his son, Roy Van Dusen, had died of pneumonia in France. He was a member of the heavy artillery, having enlisted in San Francisco, and participated in some of the big battles during the latter part of the summer.

E. J. Levengood of Pomona yesterday received more detailed information regarding the death of his brother, Sergt. Clark W. Levengood, who died at Kelly Field on November 4. The first news contained only the simple statement that the soldier was dead. Now it is learned that death was caused by pneumonia. The body is being sent to a brother in Jackson, Mich.

Corp. Leon R. Clark, son of Mr. and Mrs. Truston Clark, formerly of Pomona, but now of Long Beach, writes that in going over the top last month he was struck in the left foot by a machine-gun bullet, and is in the hospital. He was formerly a high school athlete.

Corp. Ralph V. Marks was wounded in the leg, October 21, according to a letter received yesterday by his sister, Miss Mary E. Marks, of No. 1642 East Jefferson street. The letter was sent from a base hospital in France, and Corp. Marks said he was feeling well and in good spirits. He is a member of a machine-gun battalion of the Three Hundred and Forty-eighth Regiment, Ninety-first Division, and went overseas in July. Corp. Marks was drafted from San Bernardino where he worked for the L. W. Blinn Lumber Company. His father, Louis V. Marks, lives in this city.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

OTTAWA, Nov. 15.—The name of Private P. Lang, Oakland, Cal., appears on the Canadian casualty list among the wounded.

WHY CASUALTY LISTS STILL CONTINUE.

Government casualty lists will continue to be printed for some time—perhaps weeks—despite the fact that the war is practically ended with the signing of the armistice November 11. The reason for this is found in the fact that the collection of names of the killed, wounded, etc., is a painstaking task by the army authorities in France—a task in which nothing is left to chance or guesswork. Naturally this takes much time, but the list of names, when finally announced, from day to day, is as accurate as humanly possible. Readers interested in the complete casualty list, as furnished daily by the War Department, may have access to the names by visiting the editorial rooms of The Times, third floor, Times Building, First and Broadway. The list as published here does not contain the names of wounded and missing soldiers resident outside of California.

TROOPS DESTROY HUN GATEWAY IN PEKING.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

PEKING, Nov. 15.—The Von Ketteler memorial, a beautiful stone tree-arched pailou (gateway) which Germany compelled China to erect in the principal street of Peking recording the murder of the German Minister in the Boxer period has been destroyed by returned Franco-Italian soldiers assisted by certain Allied civilians.

The Chinese authorities are sympathetically indifferent, preferring that the structure should be removed by foreigners unofficially rather than by the Chinese government officially.

The citizens are greatly interested especially as the operations indicate enthusiasm with little practical application.

The Chinese are participating with the Allies in a peace celebration.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 16.—Following the denial of their demurrers, Maj. J. B. Jeffery, L. Williams, Mrs. Alice F. Robie of Los Angeles, and J. H. MEN FROM HERE REAL FIGHTERS.

Southern Californians Figure in Notable Exploit.

[illegible] Capture Strong Position by Use of Strategy.

White of German's Eyes Turns to Yellow When Close.

BY HARRY A. WILLIAMS,
"The Times" Own War Correspondent in France.

SOMEWHERE IN FRANCE.—A successful move in a brilliant drive for the capture of the strongly-fortified village of Eclis Fontaine, an achievement which had to be repeated before complete.

The investment of this point was made by a battalion composed almost entirely of Southern California men, and under command of Maj. T. E. Gregory of Salt Lake City. Capturing the town once, this battalion was forced to fall back because the units flanking it were unable to maintain the same rapid progress. The following day the town was retaken, and the Germans driven out of it for all time.

The capture of so strong a position was a notable victory in itself, but to accomplish the feat with only slight casualties is eloquent of a well-ordered action, and places it out of the ordinary.

In fact, few believed that Eclis Fontaine could be taken without paying a heavy toll in lives. The battalion owes this to its close figuring of the enemy defenses, a knowledge of the power of its own weapons, a study of terrain, use of cover and refusal to give the enemy a "target" at which to shoot. Six hours of fighting were required to take the place under the plan of action adopted, although it could have been captured in a shorter time had the men been permitted to carry it by a [illegible] dash, which is the favorite American system.

WELL PROTECTED.

In the village itself were the usual underground works, with machine-gun emplacements, while the stone walls of houses provided protection for German troops. Bulwarking the town were heavy, complicated entanglements of barbed wire, while the approaches to it were enfiladed by machine guns. Everything considered, it was a formidable little spot on the war-zone map—a position against which a regiment of men easily could have been sacrificed without avail.

In approaching the town our troops were kept so scattered that the Germans had little to aim at. On the theory that a machine gun will not fire at one man, men were sent singly across that terrain exposed to the fire of those weapons. The same theory was applied to the artillery, our men being sent over the terrain commanded by the heavier guns in groups of from two to three—no one group offering a target sufficiently enticing for any of the larger pieces. As a result the men were enabled to approach to the point by which they were to take the town with a sudden rush without being seriously molested, or sustaining appreciable casualties.

ONE-POUNDERS BUSY.

Meantime the battalion's one-pounders were busy hammering the village from a distance of about 1200 meters. While killing comparatively few of the Germans, this fire was galling on them, and reduced their powers of resistance. Later from the rear crashed out the opening notes of a barrage. Part of this was directed at the village itself, and part at the barbed-wire entanglements, opening paths in the barbed jungle through which the troops later charged behind a bullet barrage laid down by their own machine guns. The men had expected hard fighting, and were prepared to take the town at the point of the bayonet after entering its shell-torn streets, but were disgusted when the Germans, who had not tin-canned, ran up the white flag after firing a few rounds.

"This would be a fairly good war and a bit interesting if the Huns would stand up and fight," declared Corp. Ralph Huffman of Santa Ana, following the fight around Eclis Fontaine. "We came over here figuring the Germans as maneaters, only to find that they refuse to fight when put on anything like even terms."

"If this war had been fought with brass knuckles, or even bare knuckles, it wouldn't have gone four rounds, let alone four years," said Sergt. G. L. Vance of Fullerton, who lost part of one lip in this fight. "The British and French would have licked them 'toot sweet' with their mitts, and they haven't produced as many ring champions as America, either."

LOOKS UNSPOILED.

Sergt. Vance did not lose enough of his lip to send him to the hospital, or spoil his good looks.

"Some of those birds will fight when chained to a tree or a gun, which makes the gettin' away bad," said Sergt. Jack Sullivan of San Diego, "but even then most of 'em won't fight any longer than absolutely necessary."

"I heard that 'Kamerad' thing so much that I'm plum disgusted," interjected Joe R. Daniel of the same city. "Those Huns started out to make a world war, but seem to have turned it into a sangerfest, or barking bee, with the chorus of every tune running 'Kamerad, Kamerad, Kamerad,' which probably is German for 'I love you.'"

"Even so we didn't stop with slapping them on the wrist, did we Buddy," said Roderick L. Works, turning to Corp. Lloyd S. Steffgen.

"Not so as you would notice it," replied Corp. L. S. S. "Unless my eyesight deceived me, I gave them one for the meat wagon."

This is the way most of the fellows have the Huns sized after their first close-up. Admittedly, the Germans caused them some grief with their high explosives and gas, but there was nothing to it when the westerners got near enough to see the whites of their eyes, which were tinged with yellow.

CEASED TO BE A FIGHT.

At points where the battle resolved itself into a man-to-man affair, it ceased to be a fight.

Going over the top in a truck is rather unusual, but was experienced by Corp. Fred Clark, No. 928 Galena avenue, Pasadena, and Private Charley W. Nanny of the Trinity Hotel, Los Angeles. As members of the Signal Corps, they were in charge of a truck filled with articles needed in building the line of communications, which it is desirable to keep close to the advancing troops.

Their truck made such good progress that they found themselves even with the second wave of infantry as it stormed a position near Very. They went right over with this wave. The Germans probably thought the truck some sort of new tank, or that the drivers had simply gone looney. But they did not stop to investigate.

DANDRUFF MAKES HAIR FALL OUT

A small bottle of "Danderine" keeps hair thick, strong, beautiful.

Girls! Try this! Doubles beauty of your hair in a few moments.

Within ten minutes after an application of Danderine you cannot find a single trace of dandruff or falling hair and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair, fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—growing all over the scalp.

A little Danderine immediately doubles the beauty of your hair. No difference how dull, faded, brittle and scraggy, just moisten a cloth with Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. The effect is amazing—your hair will be light, fluffy and wavy, and have an appearance of abundance; an incomparable luster, softness and luxuriance.

Get a small bottle of Knowlton's Danderine for a few cents at any drug store or toilet counter, and prove that your hair is as pretty and soft as any—that it has been neglected or injured by careless treatment—that's all—you surely can have beautiful hair and lots of it if you will just try a little Danderine.

LIBERATED NATIONS ASK AMERICAN AID.

CZECHS' PRESIDENT MAKES PLEA FOR MID-EUROPEAN PEOPLES.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 16.—Appeals for American aid in the reconstruction of the liberated nations of Eastern Europe, with promises by American officials and citizens that the helping hand would be generously extended, were features tonight of speeches at a dinner of the American-Slavic conference.

Speaking not merely for Czecho-Slovakia, the republic which today proclaimed him its first president, but for the Poles, Jugo-Slavs and other nationalities of the proposed mid-European union freed by the war from German and Austrian domination, Prof. Thomas G. Masaryk, declared it had been the moral duty of the United States to enter the war and, having helped win it, it was now its moral duty to assist in reorganization of the former oppressed races.

Answering Dr. Masaryk, Senator Hitchcock, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, asserted that "the American people are heart and soul with President Wilson in his demand that generations of oppression and misrule must end and that the Polish people, the Czechs, the Jugo-Slavs and others capable of self-determination and self-government, shall have the opportunity," reminding his hearers that "the high sounding phrases of the Declaration of Independence sounded Utopian in 1776," the Senator said they had proved practical, as would the high purposes dictating Allied determination for permanent peace, gradual disarmament and a league of nations.

Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University, urged immediate formation of a league of nations as the first practical step toward establishing and guaranteeing liberty to the submerged nationalities of eastern Europe. Questions of boundary and economic independence, he declared, should be settled by this international tribunal.

SOLDIER BOYS HOME SOON.

them which relate entirely to the granting of occupational exemptions or the consideration of appeals from local boards on dependency claims.

All records of the exemption boards are to be preserved for future disposition, and the classification of the 19 to 37-year-old and 18-year-old groups is to be completed at the earliest possible moment.

NEED 5000 SHIP MEN.

Arrangements for bringing home the troops in France are being worked out rapidly from a shipping point of view, the Shipping Board announced today in issuing a call for 5000 volunteers to man the ships that will be used for that purpose.

Chairman Hurley, before his departure today for Europe, left definite orders to rush all arrangements for this work. The War Department transport service, it was said, is cooperating fully with the Shipping Board. Plans have been formulated whereby the Shipping Board will furnish crews for the War Department transports. Each month, it was said, 400 men will be required as firemen and other hundreds for ratings as sailors, stewards, cookers and coal passers.

Men between 18 and 35 will be accepted under the call issued, today without regard for their draft rating or previous experience and will be put aboard training ships at Boston, San Francisco, Seattle, New Orleans and Cleveland for six weeks' special training. Opportunity will be afforded those who enlist, in this service to remain permanently in the merchant marine after peace has been signed and the entire army returned to the States.

CONTRACT READJUSTMENTS

In carrying out the industrial aspects of the demobilization, Assistant Secretary of War Crowell today announced that contract readjustments would be made equitably in regard to industry and labor and promptly to safeguard the financial elements of the problem. Mr. Crowell, it was announced, has been placed in charge of the industrial phase of the demobilization programme.

Overtime, holiday and Sunday work on War Department contracts has been stopped, Secretary Crowell said, and as rapidly as labor can be used in normal day shifts, night work will be discontinued.

Regarding the cancellation of contracts Mr. Crowell said:

"No order is being suspended or cancelled by the War Department without consideration of the nature of the work or the locality in which the work is being performed, labor and the re-employment of labor at such places in other industries and without conference and consultation with the War Industries Board, which has been constantly in touch with the industries of this country and with the Department of Labor which is in intimate touch with the conditions of employment in all parts of the United States."

TO RELEASE STUDENTS.

Studies are being made of the situation in which the ending of the war leaves the students' army training corps, Secretary of War Baker said today, in order that measures may be adopted to allow the release of such of its members as desire an immediate return to civil life, or who wish to continue in school, but in purely academic courses.

Mr. Baker said that the colleges concerned would be assisted in returning to their normal work, and that whenever they had a student body sufficiently large to resume functioning of a pre-war basis, their obligation towards the War Department would be cancelled. Whenever it is found that a school's resources and students had been turned over to the government plan so far that the change cannot be made, he said, the present arrangement would be continued.

General Staff orders, under which applications for commissions in army staff corps have been accepted from enlisted men in the service, were rescinded today upon notice given to all commanding officers by Gen. March, Chief of Staff. Enlisted men who have been submitted such applications will be notified that all appointments have been suspended.

TO AVOID UNEMPLOYMENT.

To aid in averting unemployment during the period of demobilization, the War Labor Policies Board today announced a plan whereby a paid secretary will be attached to the community labor boards in the chief labor employment centers. The duty of the secretaries will be to promote the work of the great labor boards, to forward policies to the United States employment service and to keep the War Industries Board and War Department informed of labor conditions, the ability of plants to absorb more man power, or the possibility of loss of work by those already employed.

The plan, it was said, calls for the expenditure of between $250,000 and $300,000 for the work during the next six months. In many cases, it is believed, it will be found possible to make use of secretaries of local chambers of commerce.

TRANSPORT PRICE FIXED.

NEW YORK, Nov. 16.—The price the United States is to pay Great Britain for transporting American soldiers to France has been agreed upon, Chairman Hurley of the Shipping Board said today just before sailing for Europe. Mr. Hurley did not say what the rate would be.

"We have been negotiating with the British government," he said, "as to the rate per man which we will have to pay for the transportation of troops to France. I am glad to say a decision has been reached, and I think it will satisfy all concerned to know that the price will be fixed practically at cost."

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 16.—The Executive Committee of the League to Enforce Peace, in adopting here today plans for an intensive campaign "to educate the people of the country as to the meaning of a league of nations," pledged its support to President Wilson in his effort to bring about the establishment of such a league, approved as "the basis of the armistice."

GERMANS QUIT AS OUR DRIVE AT METZ BEGAN.

AMERICANS HAD STAGE SET TO CAPTURE GREAT FORTRESS IN LORRAINE.

[ATLANTIC CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMIES, Nov. 15—(8 p.m.)—It may now be stated that when the Germans gave up, November 11, the Americans had the stage set for a drive on Metz by moving up on both sides of the Moselle River.

When the armistice was signed we had moved the First Corps well from the front of Sedan-Mousson and turned it over to the French, the First Corps, containing four crack divisions, having been sent to reinforce the Second Army which was to have made the drive on Metz.

The operations of the Second Army on November 9 and 10 were preliminary to our heavy attack.

This attack stood an excellent chance of success in seizing the fortress of Metz because our advance to Sedan had cut the Germans' Voie de Rocade and the German command had no way to get the troops eastward to meet this American effort. Thus will be given a new insight into Marshal Foch's strategy in directing Pershing to clean out the Mezieres-Metz railroad system.

After the American drive for Metz had started we were to have launched another drive a few days later toward Mulhausen. Preparations were also made for this and troops were about to be ordered to that front.

It may also be stated that Foch had attacks by the French and English planned to be launched at the same time as the American efforts. However, ours was to have been the big important role because the ultimate object of the drive was to cut off the German army bottled up with only Liege as the gateway of escape—our advance northward having gone a long way to accomplish this end.

HITS BOY AND HOUSE.

While James Leroy McQuinn, 11, was roller-skating near his home on Jefferson street yesterday afternoon, a playmate pulled the starting lever of an electric delivery truck, which jumped forward, knocking the skater down and stopping only when it hit the front of the house at No. 127 West Jefferson street. James was badly bruised and his back was sprained. He lives at No. 154 West Jefferson street.

WIFE MORE TO ME THAN THRONE.

The Secret Marriage of Prince Carol of Rumania.

BY VINCENT WRAY.

A romantic story concerning the Crown Prince of Rumania has reached me from a correspondent in Holland, who is in close touch with Odessa.

This may explain the statement that the Crown Prince has been punished by the King as head of the army with close arrest for fifty-five days for an offense against military discipline, which offense is stated to be his marriage with a lady much beneath his station in life.

The lady's name, as my information goes, is Mlle. Lily Peropski. She is young, intelligent, vivacious. She is the daughter of a wealthy exporter of wheat, a man whose authority in Odessa's commercial circles is beyond dispute. Mlle. Peropski is one of the most beautiful women in South Russia. She has a lovely voice of wonderful compass and a quick intelligence which results in an amazing vocabulary of many languages, and which won for her a considerable position in society.

Mlle. Lily, before the outbreak of war, spent a year in traveling through the countries of Europe. Among other places, she visited Bucharest, the capital of Rumania. While there she met the Crown Prince. He was immediately struck by her transcendent beauty, and but for the restrictions which bind the heir to a throne would have then married her.

They began to correspond, however, through the medium of a close friend of the Prince. The Crown Prince saw the lady many times, chiefly at Vienna, but as he always passed under another name the meetings escaped the attentions of those who were always jealous of the "divinity that doth hedge in a king."

The mystery of the romance has deepened since the outbreak of war. The Crown Prince, it is stated, was married at Odessa. At any rate, this is the story that is told. Mlle. Peropski was seen in company with a young man of striking appearance, and evidently of blue blood. He had the manners of a person of education and ultra refinement. He was generally described as a Rumanian gentleman, and he was generally found in association with Mlle. Peropski.

The German authorities were perturbed, and their agents followed the young couple everywhere they went. Once Prince Carol, when with Mlle. Lily, was intercepted, when the following conversation ensued:

"You are a Rumanian and you are intriguing against Germany."

"My private affairs cannot concern you."

"But you are Prince Carol of Rumania?"

The Crown Prince said many things without denying the identity suggested.

The German authorities had in their own minds no doubt concerning the identity of the Prince, and brought pressure to bear upon the lady's father, who professed entire ignorance concerning the events which were narrated to him.

At last the German commandant appealed to the Rumanian Consul, who, accompanied by a German officer, went to the Crown Prince and suggested that he should return to the headquarters at Jassy.

"Your presence here," said the German officer, "is objectionable. It is assumed that you are arranging serious intrigues in the Ukraine. This cannot be tolerated."

Prince Carol listened to this speech with admirable dignity, and then, opening the door of an adjoining room, called Mlle. Lily Peropski.

"Gentlemen," he said, "I have the honor of introducing to you my wife. We are married, and, whatever may be the result, we will never be parted. I do not know what effect the announcement will make on my father, the King, but after all there are things which are mightier than dynasties, and greater than kingdoms. My wife is more to me than a throne, though I do hope that my father and my country may reconcile themselves to the fact of the marriage."

The Rumanian Consul protested, and spoke of trouble that was sure to arise in consequence of what he styled "an ill-advised union."

The German agent was beside himself with anger. Mlle. Lily Peropski took the whole affair with extraordinary coolness. When she was told that for reasons of state it was desirable that the Prince should at once proceed to Jassy, she replied with affecting simplicity, "He is my husband, and wherever he goes I shall accompany him as his wife."

Prince Carol and his wife lived in a quiet suburb of Odessa, where they had rooms. Their life was quiet and uneventful, and they were apparently unmindful of the great world war, which is altering the map of Europe for all time.

ADMITS FALSITY OF CITIZENSHIP PAPERS.

MAN INDICATES HE LEFT ENGLAND TO AVOID MILITARY DRAFT LAW.

Albert Holdway, alias Conrad Winters, indicted by the Federal grand jury for having committed perjury in connection with the filing of his first papers for American citizenship, when arraigned before United States District Judge Trippet asked for the privilege of making a statement before offering his plea. He was accommodated.

Holdway admitted that he had falsified his papers and misrepresented the name of the place of his birth in England, his age and his name, but thought he ought to be admitted to probation, in spite of the fact that there is no such thing in the Federal court.

He indicated that he had left England in order to avoid the British military draft law, and, after coming to America, sought to evade the draft here by shifting the place of his nativity and age.

He claimed that he had come to the United States on a passport and had lost it, and had contributed to the support of his mother in England, but could produce no receipts from her. He alleged that he began working for the Los Angeles Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Company in May, 1917, and was told there that if he did not take out his first papers he would lose his job.

Holdway asserted that he was in Cuba at the time of the first draft, on June 5, 1917, and not in Los Angeles, but denied that he went there to avoid registration. Later he left Cuba for Los Angeles, he said. He worked in the local shipbuilding plant before going to San Francisco where he was arrested, and removed here. The matter will be disposed of tomorrow morning.

SUSPENDS PATROLMAN.

He Arrests Two Men When They Attempt to Restrain Him from Striking His Wife.

On the charge of conduct unbecoming an officer, Patrolman William A. Culiver was yesterday suspended from the police force by Capt. A. W. Murray, in charge of Central division.

The patrolman's conduct was brought to the attention of his superiors when he arrested two men for "resisting an officer" when they attempted to restrain him from striking his wife in a family quarrel.

One of the two men—Frederick C. Jones, an automobile painter of Covina—who was visiting near by received a blow on the head from the butt of former Patrolman Culiver's revolver. It was feared the blow might result seriously. On telling his story at Central Station he was at once released and taken to the Receiving Hospital for treatment.

Police Surgeon Dunsmore dressed the wound and kept Mr. Jones there for several hours for observation as to the condition of his head. His brother, A. L. Jones, then removed him to a private hospital, declaring that the injured man would press charges of assault with a deadly weapon against Culiver.

SWEEP OUR FLAG OFF THE PACIFIC

The War Department Cancels American Ship Sailings.

Trade is Left to British and Japanese Vessels.

Only Transports Fly "Old Glory" on Western Sea.

BY ROBERT B. ARMSTRONG,
[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—In spite of the signing of the armistice and the abrupt ending of the stream of troops to Europe, the War Department still insists in sweeping the American flag off the Pacific. No passenger freight steamers can sail from the West Coast except the [illegible] line, which is British, whose boats sail from San Francisco, and the Japanese liners from Seattle and San Francisco, and likewise the Canadian-Pacific boats from Victoria and Vancouver. Except on army transports, the American flag is absent from all trans-Pacific sailings.

Steamers with cargo loaded and passengers on board ready to steam through the Golden Gate and on out across the western ocean to the Far East, were caught in the War Department order to cancel all trans-Pacific sailings. That was last week—a few days before the armistice was signed.

Protests came in by the hundreds, and the number grew when the fighting on the other side stopped, but still the War Department would not change its attitude or re-establish the regular sailings of American lines. Appeals of all kinds were of no avail, and the order still stands.

When hostilities came to an end the War Industries Board cancelled the importation of Chilean nitrates, and thus more than 80,000 tons of the modern steel ships were released for use by the army in lieu of the trans-Pacific vessels commandeered by the army and taken off the regular runs. These the army refused to accept.

The commandeered liners instead were ordered brought through the Panama Canal and used in the trans-Atlantic service. This, however, was refused by the Shipping Board officials, who insisted that the ships of the Pacific be kept in those waters. Therefore, the commandeered liners will be sent to Siberia with cargoes for the Czecho-Slovak army of the associated powers.

Every effort is being made to re-establish the trans-Pacific service on American lines under the American flag at once, and it is hoped that the vessels being sent to Siberia will be restored to service so that on the return trip they will come back as liners and not as government transports.

The effect of the armies' insistence on the cancellation of the trans-Pacific liner sailings is to leave the western ocean dominated by the Japanese and British shipping, and is one of the evidences that the American government is not alert and aggressive to secure for the American merchants and manufacturers all the export trade there is to be had in the great markets of the world.

ARMY LIEUTENANT VISITS PARENTS HERE.

Lieut. Clarence A. Voight of Camp Wadsworth paid a flying visit to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Albert H. Voight of No. 936 Westlake avenue, during the past week. He left on Thursday to take up his new duties in the Quartermaster's Department at Atlanta, Ga., in charge of one of the largest army warehouses in the country.

Lieut. Voight has had a successful career in the army service. He left Camp Kearny a few months ago for intensive training at the officers' training school at Jacksonville, Fla. From there he was ordered to Camp Wadsworth, Spartanburg, S. C., from which he has now been promoted to his higher post. His father, Albert H. Voight, is president of the California Furniture Company.

STRONG, VIGOROUS MANHOOD

Catarrh in some form, either neglected or improperly treated, is undermining the health and sapping the strength and vigor of ninety-seven per cent. of the people.

An inflammation and congestion of the mucous membranes, whether in the nose and throat, the stomach, bowels, kidneys, bladder or any other part of the body is Catarrh. Unless checked by the right treatment, the condition grows worse and chronic, perhaps incurable, disorders result. Physical fitness, strength, vigor can be possessed only through health perfection.

For Catarrh of Every Description Take

PE-RU-NA

For forty-five years Peruna has been recognized as the standard treatment for Catarrh. It acts directly upon the mucous linings, induces a healthy action of all the organs and fortifies the system generally against disease. You can avoid expensive and dangerous experiments by taking Peruna first.

A Child Doesn't Laugh and Play if Constipated.

Look, Mother! If tongue is coated, breath feverish and stomach sour, give "California Syrup of Figs."

Mother! Your child isn't naturally cross and peevish. See if tongue is coated; this is a sure sign its little stomach, liver and bowels need a cleansing at once.

When listless, pale, feverish, full of cold, breath bad, throat sore, doesn't eat, sleep or act naturally, has stomach ache, diarrhoea, remember, a gentle liver and bowel cleansing should always be the first treatment given.

Nothing equals "California Syrup of Figs" for children's ills; give a teaspoonful, and in a few hours all the foul waste, sour bile and fermenting food which is clogged in the bowels passes out of the system, and you have a well and playful child again. All children love this harmless delicious "fruit laxative," and it never fails to effect a good "inside" cleansing. Directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups on bottle. Remember name "California."

Calomel Users! Listen To Me! I Guarantee Dodson's Liver Tone

Your druggist gives back your money if it doesn't liven your liver and bowels and straighten you up without making you sick.

Ugh! Calomel makes you sick! It's horrible! Take a dose of the [illegible] drug tonight and tomorrow you may lose a day's work.

Calomel is mercury or quicksilver which causes necrosis of the bones. Calomel, when it comes into contact with sour bile, crashes into it breaking it up. This is when you feel that awful nausea and cramping. If you are sluggish and "all knocked out," if your liver is torpid and bowels constipated, or you have headache, dizziness, coated tongue, if breath is bad or stomach sour, just try a spoonful of harmless Dodson's Liver Tone tonight.

Here's my guarantee—Go to any drug store and get a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone for a few cents. Take a spoonful and if it doesn't straighten you right up and make you feel fine and vigorous I want you to go back to the store and get your money. Dodson's Liver Tone is destroying the sale of calomel because it is real liver medicine; entirely vegetable, therefore, it cannot salivate or make you sick.

I guarantee that one spoonful of Dodson's Liver Tone will put your sluggish liver to work and clean your bowels of that sour bile and constipated waste which is clogging your system and making you feel miserable. I guarantee that a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone will keep your entire family feeling fine for months. Give it to your children. It is harmless; doesn't gripe and they like its pleasant taste.

MAY LIFT 'FLU BAN THIS WEEK.

Health Commissioner Hopes Conditions will Warrant.

Number of Cases Here Shows a Continual Decrease.

Council's Closing Plan Brings Protest and is Rejected.

Coincident with the filing yesterday with the City Council of a vigorous protest by the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association against any action on the part of the Council towards closing for five days, all places of business in the city, because of influenza, records of the office of the Health Commissioner showed that for the week ending yesterday 882 fewer cases of the disease were reported than for the previous week.

The communication of the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association points out that such action as the Council asked of Health Commissioner Powers would tend to interfere with and harass the business interests of this city and might create almost a commercial panic.

Dr. Powers, to whom the Council proposed the closing of all places of business for five days, or the lifting of the present ban entirely, said:

"After consulting with Judge Stephens, City Attorney, I find that I cannot legally comply with the suggestion of the Council, and will wait until later for further developments.

"I desire to say that I do not know when we can open up, under the existing conditions. I have said that if things continue as they appeared to be at the beginning of this week, we hope to open up some time the latter part of next week."

THE WEEKLY RECORD.

While the number of influenza cases reported yesterday was more than for the day before, the total number for the week was considerably less than for any like period since October 12. The weekly record of cases shows that the peak of the epidemic passed after the week of November 2, after which the number of cases began to decrease.

According to the health office, the only way to tell whether the disease is actually declining is to compare the total number of cases each week. The epidemic began here with the week ending October 5, when twenty-six cases and nine deaths were reported. The number steadily increased until the week of November 2, when 6144 cases and 382 deaths were recorded, and since that time the number has decreased, until the week ending yesterday, with 3964 cases and 301 deaths.

The reports by weeks show October 12, 1118 cases, forty-eight deaths; October 19, 4805 cases, 129 deaths; October 26, 5467 cases, 293 deaths; November 2, 6144 cases, 382 deaths; November 9, 4846 cases, 309 deaths; November 16, 3964 cases, 301 deaths.

These figures, say the health authorities, show that the disease is on the decline here, in spite of the fact that yesterday 731 cases of influenza and eleven cases of influenza and pneumonia were reported. The total for the week of November 16 includes the cases and deaths reported yesterday. Sixteen straight pneumonia cases were reported yesterday as were four deaths, fifteen from influenza and pneumonia, and seventeen from influenza.

STATE BOARD FIGURES.

Figures given out by the State Board of Health at Sacramento yesterday showed that Friday night, although Los Angeles had more cases reported than San Francisco the northern city had 526 more deaths. The figures are: Los Angeles, total number of cases to date, 25,425; total number of deaths, 1398; San Francisco, 23,421 cases and 1928 deaths.

State figures for yesterday showed 1176 cases and mail reports show 224 deaths, twenty of which are in San Francisco, nine in Sacramento, eight in Oakland, seven in Fresno, two at Santa Barbara.

The City Trustees of Azusa informed County Health Officer Pomeroy yesterday that that city has 150 cases of influenza, and only one physician. Dr. Pomeroy outlined the conditions to the Board of Supervisors, which authorized him to take charge of the situation. Enough money will probably be appropriated to employ competent help for those down with influenza.

ZEEHANDELAAR'S NOTE

The message sent by Secretary F. J. Zeehandelaar of the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association to the Los Angeles City Council yesterday was, in part, as follows:

"The Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association, comprising nearly 1000 of the principal business and industrial firms of this city, hereby presents a strong and emphatic protest against any action of your honorable body that will in any way interfere with or harass the business interests of this city and that would create a commercial panic.

"It is evident that some members of your honorable body desire to pass an ordinance that will be so obnoxious to the general public that a demand will be made to open every theater and every place of business and thereby expose the general public to greater dangers of infection than now exists.

"We repeat, that the closing of business establishments for any period of time will produce such a financial condition and general opposition of the public, that will convince you that the statements herein contained are not exaggerated."

RED CROSS AFFAIRS

Foreign Service Closed.

Owing to the fact that the requisition for foreign service for women ambulance drivers and women stenographers has been filled, the bureau of personnel of the American Red Cross will, until further notice, discontinue taking applications from women for these two positions. The bureau will, however, continue to take the applications of candidates for all other positions.

Headquarters Notes.

Owing to the influenza epidemic the Second Los Angeles Red Cross Institute has been postponed, and will probably be opened the latter part of the week if conditions are then normal. The work in salvage will continue to go on and every one is asked to keep up usual donations except for peach pits, which will be discontinued.

On account of the tremendous rush at the Christmas parcel bureau, No. 930 South Main street, they have decided to remain open on Sunday from 8:30 a.m. to 1 o'clock. Harry Sepulveda will be in charge.

All women from ages 20 to 45 who have had elementary hygiene and wish to sign for active service (army,) please call at Red Cross headquarters at Tenth and Main streets, at once.

Still to "Carry On."

The war council of the American Red Cross has just issued a statement to all divisions calling attention to the necessity for all Red Cross workers to bear in mind the solemn obligation which rests upon each and every one to continue to "carry on" even though the war has ended. It is important that every Red Cross worker be impressed with the idea that he or she is in no way to slacken the present activities and that each be prepared to accept any new orders that may arise through emergency.

WIDOW OF B. FAY MILLS DIES.

Information has been received here that Mrs. Mary Russell Mills, widow of the late B. Fay Mills and well known in this city as author and lecturer, died in Grand Rapids, Mich., last Tuesday. Mrs. Mills was one of the organizers of the Los Angeles Fellowship and was the author of "The Divine Art of Living," a manual of spiritual ethics, and other works. During recent years she had been living in seclusion at Grand Rapids. She is survived by six children—Thornton, Ethelwyn, Henry, Mary, Charles and Faith.

FLU MASKED THRONGS TO SING FOR VICTORY.

FIFTY THOUSAND SAN FRANCISCANS EXPECTED TO ATTEND MUSIC FEST.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 16.—Weather permitting, San Francisco is to set its peace aftermath to music tomorrow afternoon, when at least 50,000 people are expected to gather at the municipal band stand in Golden Gate Park for a community "sing."

The Board of Health has put its official endorsement on the celebration, stipulating only that all attending wear the gauze influenza masks.

"It will be in the nature of an experiment to see what effect music has on the influenza bacillus," Dr. William C. Hassler, City Health Officer, said.

The municipal band, church choirs and various other musical organizations will participate. The affair will be under the direction of the war camp community service and will be conducted by Alexander Bevani, operatic impresario.

BLAME I.W.W. IN BIG FIRE.

Beans, hay, grain, seed and other feeds valued at $20,000 and warehouse No. 3 of the Farmers' Grain and Milling Company, No. 1337-39 Santa Fe avenue, were destroyed by fire of a mysterious origin at 7:30 o'clock last evening. Three loud explosions, which shook dwellings for several blocks, preceeded the fire and cause the belief by the police that I.W.W.'s or enemies of the grain association "set" the blaze.

The huge warehouse, which has a frontage of 235 feet and a depth of 250 feet, was filled to the roof, and because of the nature of the contents, the fire department had great difficulty in bringing the flames under control. The valuation of the property is estimated at $15,000, and the contents of the building at $20,000.

Mrs. Frank Sparro of No. 2330 Hunter street, in the rear of the warehouse, was standing in her back yard when she heard the terrific explosions, which shook dishes from the table of her home. She immediately ran to call the fire apparatus, and found Frank and J. M. Harvey of No. 2346 Hunter street summoning the department.

By the time the first engines had arrived at the warehouse the flames were beyond control. Continued minor explosions, said by Battalion Chief O'Donnell to have been caused by "back draft," or hot air, which had become confined, caused greater damage than would otherwise have resulted.

Acting Captain of Police R. L. Heath directed a score of officers, under Police Sergeant Hollowell, in an investigation to determine the origin of the explosions, but at midnight nothing had been determined as to their cause.

The warehouse and contents were the property of the Farmers' Grain and Milling Company, with principal offices at No. 724 South Spring street. Efforts by the police and detectives to reach W. B. Waterman, president of the corporation, and B. W. Shipman, secretary and treasurer, failed last night. A further investigation of the fire will be made today.

BRAZIL HAS TWO YEARS RUBBER ACCUMULATION.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 16.—Otto C. Choitino of the Pan-American Union, who arrived here today from Rio Janeiro, asserted there is a two-year accumulation of raw rubber in Brazil, waiting for ships to deliver it to countries where there is a rubber shortage. The accumulation, he said, is the result of wartime shipping restrictions.

Mr. Choitino reported that the Brazilian coffee crop will be only two-thirds of its normal, because of storms which ravaged coffee fields.

WHY THE NATIONS FOUGHT.

Striking Similarities in Their States Suggest League of Nations.

President Wilson and Lloyd George have jointly declared that the league of nations which is to serve as a future guaranty of the peace of the world must be organized at the same time the peace treaties are drawn and signed. They urge that the peace which has been won at such a sacrifice of blood and treasure must enable the nations to do something bigger, wider and better than the world has ever done before. If nations are to live in amity with their neighbors they must necessarily avoid the rivalries and misunderstandings that occasioned the present war. And it logically follows that a knowledge of the events immediately preceding the declarations of war is necessary to draft legislation for avoiding armed conflicts in the future.

Most interesting of the documentary evidence available are the addresses made by the different rulers to rouse the great masses of the people to that patriotic fervor which is necessary that a country may engage whole-heartedly in war. In these there is a striking similarity. Every people was assured that no war of conquest was premeditated, that the government was taking up arms solely in self-defense, that the country was attacked by powerful and envious neighbors and that they must fight or perish. National honor and national security alike demanded an instant resort to armed force.

When one reads these utterances one seems to be listening to a popular anthem played by different musical instruments; the theme and the harmony do not vary.

WHY PEOPLES FIGHT.

There is a deeper meaning in this than a mere series of coincidences. It reveals that the same ideals of justice, honor and national security fill the breasts of every people, that a foundation is laid in the human heart for a league of nations and that it is only by a confusion and distortion of facts by unscrupulous autocrats and political demagogues that one people can be induced to take up arms against another.

If the nations assembled at the Vienna peace conference can evolve some plan that will assure the people of each nation, big and little, that they will not be attacked by some unscrupulous neighbor then the peace of nations will be assured. For the world has grown sufficiently civilized that no people will knowingly begin a war of aggression on a neighbor. Fear is the compelling force in modern war. A people is persuaded that its liberties are threatened and the only chance to escape destruction is to strike first.

As the war draws to its close interest will turn, if only by way of contrast, to the methods used by the different governments to rouse the great masses of the people to that patriotic fervor which is necessary that a country may engage whole-heartedly in war. In every case the spokesmen for the government assured the people that the war was a purely defensive one, that the government entered upon it with great reluctance, but that national honor and national safety demanded a resort to armed force. When one reads these utterances one seems to be listening to a popular anthem played by different musical instruments; the theme and the harmony do not vary.

This fact records something more than a series of coincidences. It reveals that the same ideals of justice, honor and national security fill the breasts of every people, that the foundation is laid in the human heart for a league of nations and that it is only by a confusion and distortion of facts by unscrupulous autocrats and political demagogues that one people can be induced to take up arms against another.

Germany is known to have prepared for the war of 1914 for more than a generation. To follow out the Teuton plan for a Mittel Europa and a Berlin-to-Bagdad railroad controlled for its entire length by Germany and her allies, a war of aggression was indispensable. Yet when the time for the actual declaration of war came the Kaiser and his imperial Chancellor were more profuse in their protestations that Germany was attacked and must take up arms to defend her integrity than were the rulers of any other country.

During the first month of the war the Kaiser made frequent public addresses, appealing to his subjects to stand united behind the monarchy. Reading those appeals now, one is reminded of that line from Shakespeare: "Methinks the lady doth protest too much!"

KAISER BLAMED ENTENTE.

On the evening of July 31, 1914, the Kaiser spoke from the balcony of the imperial palace in Berlin to an assembled multitude numbering many thousands. He said:

"A fateful hour has fallen for Germany. Envious people on all sides are compelling us to a just defense. The sword is forced into our hand. I hope that, with God's help, we shall so wield the sword that when all is over we shall again sheathe it with honor.

"War will demand of us enormous sacrifices in property and life, but we must show our foes what it means to provoke Germany."

Four days later the Kaiser convoked a special session of the Reichstag and delivered a message formally declaring war against the Entente nations. In this address he said:

"What human insight and power could do to arm a people against the last extremities has been done with your patriotic help. The hostility that has been smoldering for a long time in the east and in the west has now burst into bright flames. The present situation did not proceed from transient conflicts of interest or diplomatic entanglements; it is the result of an ill will which has for many years been active against the strength and the prosperity of the German empire. We are not inspired by lust for conquest, we are inspired by the unyielding determination to keep for ourselves and the future generations the place which God has given us.

"To the people and the races of the German empire my call goes forth to defend with all their strength and in brotherly co-operation with our ally that which we have created by peaceful labor."

(Did he remember Schleswig-Holstein and Alsace-Lorraine?)

As one reads those utterances he realizes the deeper meaning of that warning voiced by Abraham Lincoln: "Our opponents want you to judge them by their professions; but I warn you to judge them by their practices."

MUST FIGHT OR PERISH.

Emperor Francis Joseph of Austria issued on July 28, on the occasion of declaring war against Serbia, a manifesto to his subjects beginning as follows:

"To my peoples: It was my fervent wish to consecrate the years which, by the grace of God, still remain to me to the works of peace and to protect my peoples from the heavy sacrifices and the burdens of war. Providence, in its wisdom, has otherwise decreed. The intrigues of malevolent opponents compel me, in the defense of the honor of my monarchy, for the protection of its dignity and its position as a power, for the security of its possessions, to grasp the sword after long years of peace."

BRITONS' HONOR INVOLVED.

Sir Edward Grey, the British Secretary for Foreign Affairs, made a memorable address in the British House of Commons on August 3, in which he asked the support of Parliament and the nation for a policy which would either guarantee the neutrality of Belgium and protect France from an attack by the Triple Alliance, or would plunge the country into the throes of a world war. His address was a model of clearness and frankness. He called upon the people to remember, not England's glory, but Britain's duty. In concluding he said:

"There is but one way in which the government could make certain at this time of keeping outside this war, and that would be if we should immediately issue a proclamation of unconditional neutrality. We cannot do that. We have made the commitment to France that I have already read to the House which prevents us doing that. We have got the consideration of Belgium which prevents us from any unconditional neutrality; and, without these considerations, absolutely satisfied and satisfactory, we are bound not to shirk from the use of all the forces in our power.

"If we did take that line by saying, 'We will have nothing whatever to do with this matter under no conditions—the Belgian treaty obligations, the possible position in the Mediterranean, the damage to British interests, and what may happen to France from our failure to support France—if we were to say that all these things mattered nothing, were as nothing, and to say that we should stand aside, we should, I believe, sacrifice our respect and good name and reputation before the world, and should not escape the most serious and grave economic consequences."

That last clause referring to "economic consequences" was grasped by the enemies of Great Britain as a pretext to assure their subjects that Great Britain was embarking on a purely mercenary war. In the beginning it injured the cause of Great Britain even in this country. Yet when one grasps the whole context of the address it becomes apparent that the "economic consequence" was the least and not the greatest of the reasons advanced for keeping treaty pledges which Great Britain had made. The unfortunate phrase probably cost Sir Edward Grey his Cabinet position.

FOUGHT WHEN ATTACKED.

Premier Viviani addressed the French Senate and House of Deputies on August 4, informing them that a "state of war" already existed. He said:

"Gentlemen, the German Ambassador left Paris yesterday, after having notified us of the existence of a state of war. The government is in duty bound to give Parliament a truthful recital of the events which, within less than ten days, have brought about the war in Europe and obliged France, peaceful and strong, to defend her frontier against an attack the premeditated suddenness of which emphasizes its odious injustice . . . What is being attacked, I repeat gentlemen, is the independence, dignity and security which the Triple Entente has restored to the balance of power in the interest of peace.

"What is being attacked are the liberties of Europe, whose defenders France, her Allies and her friends are proud to be.

"We shall defend these liberties, for it is they which are in jeopardy; all else is merely a pretext.

"France, unjustly provoked, did not desire war. She had done everything to prevent it; but since it is forced upon her, she will defend herself against Germany and against every power which has not yet announced its position, but shall later take sides with Germany in the war between the two.

"A free and strong nation, strengthened by venerable ideals, firmly united in defense of its existence, a democracy which has known how to discipline its military acts, and did not fear last year to impose on itself additional military burdens to offset those of neighboring countries, an armed nation fighting for its own life and for the independence of Europe—that is the spectacle which we are bound to show the witnesses of this formidable struggle, which has been in preparation for some days amid methodical quiet.

"France has often proved, under less favorable conditions, that she is a most formidable adversary when she fights, as she now does, for liberty and right.

"WE ARE WITHOUT REPROACH. WE SHALL BE WITHOUT FEAR."

On the same day President Poincare thus addressed the French Parliament:

"Our nation is in arms and trembling with eagerness to defend the land of our fathers. France is faithfully supported by her ally, Russia. She is upheld by the loyal friendship of England, and, already, from all points of the civilized world, go out to her expressions of sympathy and good will, for she represents today, once again before the universe, liberty, justice and reason. Lift up your hearts! Vive la France!"

FOR HONOR AND SAFETY.

Czar Nicholas II of Russia issued on August 3 a manifesto in which the following appears:

"The fraternal sentiments of the Russian peoples for the Slavs have been awaked with perfect unanimity and extraordinary force in these last few days, when Austria-Hungary knowingly addressed to Serbia claims inacceptable for an independent state. (Here follows a recital of Russia's protest and mobilization.) Contrary to our hopes in good neighborly relations of long date, and disregarding our assurances that the mobilization was undertaken in pursuance of no object hostile to her, Germany demanded their immediate cessation. Being rebuffed in this demand, Germany suddenly declared war on Russia.

"Today it is not only the protection of a country related to us and unjustly assaulted that must be accorded, but we must safeguard the honor, the dignity and the integrity of Russia and her position among the great powers. . . . With a profound faith in the justness of our work, and with humble hope in omnipotent providence, in prayer we call God's blessing upon holy Russia and her valiant troops. . . . War has been forced upon us. I hereby take a solemn pledge not to conclude peace so long as a single enemy remains on Russian soil."

ITALY FOUGHT TO LIVE.

Speaking in the Italian Chamber of Deputies on May 29, 1915, Premier Salandra said:

"Gentlemen, I have the honor to present to you a bill to meet the eventual expenditures of a national war. . . . Italy must unite at this moment when her destinies are being decided. . . . Since Italy's resurrection as a state she has asserted herself in the world of nations as a factor of moderation, concord and peace, and she can proudly proclaim that she has accomplished this mission with a firmness that has not wavered even before the most painful sacrifices. . . . In the last period, extending over thirty years, she maintained her system of alliances and friendships chiefly with the object of thus securing the European equilibrium, and, at the same time, peace."

"The ultimatum which the Austro-Hungarian empire addressed last July to Serbia annulled at one blow the results of a long-sustained effort by violating the act which bound us to that state, violated that pact in form, for it neglected to conclude a preliminary agreement with us, or even give us notification, and violated it also in substance, for it sought to disturb, to our detriment, the delicate system of territorial possessions and spheres of influence which had been set up in the Balkan peninsula. But, more than in any particular point, it was the whole spirit of the treaty which was wronged, and even suppressed, for by unloosing on the world a most terrible war, in direct contravention of our interests and sentiments, the balance, which the Triple Alliance should have helped to assure was destroyed, and the problem of Italy's national integrity was virtually and irresistibly revived."

WHY AMERICA FOUGHT.

President Wilson addressed a joint session of both houses of Congress on April 2, urging the adoption of a resolution containing the statement that "the state of war between the United States and the imperial German government, which has thus been thrust upon the United States, is hereby formally declared." In the support of that resolution, the President said, in part:

"There is one choice we cannot make, we are incapable of making; we will not choose the path of submission and suffer the most sacred rights of our nation and our people to be violated. The wrongs against which we now array ourselves are no common wrongs. They strike at the very roots of human life.

"It is a fearful thing to lead this great, peaceful people into war, into the most terrible and disastrous of all wars, civilization itself seeming to be in the balance. But the right is more precious than peace, and we shall fight for the things which we have always carried nearest our hearts—for democracy, for the right of those who submit to authority to have a voice in their own governments, for the rights and liberties of small nations, for a universal dominion of right by such a concert of free peoples as shall bring peace and safety to all nations and make the world itself at last free.

"To such a task we can dedicate our lives and our fortunes, everything that we are and everything that we have, with the pride of those who know that the day has come when America is privileged to spend her blood and her might for the principles that gave her birth and happiness and the peace she has treasured.

"God helping her, she can do no other."

Excuse which the peoples of the Central Powers accepted as plausible and sufficient was offered by Germany for the violation of the neutrality of Belgium. That excuse was "the necessity that knows no law."

It was the application of the autocratic theory that might makes right.

A BANDIT'S DEFENSE.

Speaking in the Reichstag on August 3, 1914, Chancellor Von Bethmann-Hollweg said:

"Our troops have occupied Luxemburg and, perhaps, have also found it necessary to enter Belgian territory. This is contrary to international law. The French government has declared in Brussels that she will respect the neutrality of Belgium so long as she respects the opponent. We knew, however, that France was ready to invade Belgium. France could wait. We, however, could not, because a French invasion in our lower Rhine flank would have been fatal.

"So we were forced to disregard the protests of the Luxemburg and the Belgium governments. We shall try to make good the injustice that has been done as soon as our military goal has been reached. Who, like we, are fighting for the highest must only consider how victory can be gained.

"We have assured England that as long as she remains neutral our fleet will not attack the northern coast of France and that the territorial integrity and independence of Belgium will not be violated. This declaration I repeat before the whole world, and I can add that so long as England remains neutral we are prepared, in case of reciprocity, to refrain from all hostile operations against French merchant vessels."

The "scrap-of-paper" episode in regard to the treaty agreement of Germany to respect the neutrality of Belgium was not referred to publicly in the diplomatic negotiations or addresses at the time when the nations of the Triple Alliance and the Triple Entente were hesitating on the verge of war. It played a powerful part later, however, in moulding public opinion in the English-speaking countries against Germany. It became as potent as President Wilson's declaration that America was fighting "to make the world safe for democracy."

Slesvig or Schleswig?

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 14.—[To the Editor of The Times:] The European cables announce that the ban has been lifted in Copenhagen, which for four years has suppressed discussion of the hope of all loyal Danes of regaining the territories looted from her by the Huns. I know that The Times has no sympathy with Germany's diplomatic banditry, and I am making this appeal to you to use your columns in aiding to restore to that territory at least its lost Danish names.

May I not ask that you abandon the practice of using the purely German spelling "Schleswig" in referring to South Jutland and adopt the proper and only spelling, "Slesvig?" That was the spelling used by both English and French encyclopedias before it was Germanized? Why not return to it now?

Germanization of Danish names began in 1864, and was confirmed in the notoriously unjust treaty of Vienna. It was done with deliberation by the conquerors in order to humble the Danes in the territory and exalt the oppressors. Consider the charming island of Als, the loss of which was a deep humiliation to loyal Danes. Its name was changed to Alsen. Tonder became Tondern; Flensborg was called Flensburg, and Abernaa became Apenrade. But the greatest humiliation of all was to have the name of the capital changed from Slesvig to Schleswig. That Germanized spelling offends all Danish eyes. It is the trade-mark of Hun banditry. It commemorates one of the crimes of Prussia under Bismarck. It is a part of the system by which Germany sought to break the spirit of her unwilling subjects, whom she reduced to economic servitude.

If The Times would never again print the ugly word "Schleswig" it would be aiding in the reparation of one of the many wrongs of the Hun. I am, sir, [Signed] DAGMAR GOSSE.

Alsatian-Lorrainers Organize.

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 12.—[To the Editor of The Times:] The purpose of this letter is to call your attention to the happy fact that now has come the time for all Alsatian-Lorrainers and their descendants to come together and form in Southern California a branch of the Alsatian-Lorrainer Society of New York.

Already many Eastern States have taken up this movement, and I am sure that we in Southern California will welcome this idea and will join enthusiastically.

To be a member of a branch society it is first necessary to be a member of the parent organization with which we are affiliated, and I have received a number of questionnaires, which are at your disposal and which supply the necessary information for membership.

I hope that you will respond to this movement immediately and will encourage your friends to do the same.

Of the forty-seven years that Alsace-Lorraine has been in the hands of its oppressors, now is the most opportune moment for us to show our patriotism and love for our country, and it is fitting for us to come together at this happy moment and celebrate that Alsace-Lorraine has been restored to its rightful place among the heroic departments of France.

Very sincerely yours,
ALFRED MAY.

Changing the Name of a Park.

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 15.—[To the Editor of The Times:] All honor to Gen. Pershing, the wise and brave soldier and Christian gentleman! But for the third time to "christen" a prominent city park does not appeal to the judgment of a considerable number of persons. Just at this time some of us are apt to be swayed by excitement or sentiment rather than by prudence. Men pass away and are more or less forgotten, but principles are more abiding, and liberty is the goal of the nations. Therefore if a change in the name of Central Square is desirable, why not call it Liberty Park?

Respectfully, A. W. ORWIG.

Being Square With the Public.

REDLANDS, Nov. 14.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Permit me as an old subscriber to express in my poor way the great satisfaction it has been to me during the past week to see the confidence the people had in The Times. When the bells rang and the whistles blew on Thursday, on every hand you heard people say, "Something is wrong. The Times is quiet." The next day the same story, "I thought it was not true, for The Times siren did not blow." And Sunday night, when the siren burst forth and that great crowd gathered around The Times Building, satisfied because the siren was blowing, but waiting for The Times special that they might read with their own eyes and be sure that it was true. The other papers came up by the truckload, and people bought them, but they were not satisfied until they really saw the glorious news in The Times. It seems to me it was the greatest tribute that could possibly be paid to any paper, the absolute confidence this great crowd, made up of all classes of people, had that what The Times said was true. Long live The Times. AN OLD SUBSCRIBER.

Woman Who Appealed Case, so She Could Have Liberty to Aid Sick Mother, Dismisses Action.

When the appeal of May Clark was called before Judge Willis yesterday, her attorney, W. O. Tyler, requested that the appeal be dismissed, as she is ready to serve her sentence of 180 days, following her conviction before Police Judge Crawford on charges of having narcotics in her possession.

When asked the reason for making an appeal and then not prosecuting it, Attorney Tyler stated that it was taken merely for the purpose of releasing the Clark woman from jail so that she could go to Inyo county and nurse her sick mother. It is understood that, in view of the action of the defendant, she may soon be granted probation.

DRAFT BOARDS HAVE FIRST HALF-HOLIDAY.

ARMISTICE RELAXES TENSION; MANY EXAMINATIONS TO BE HELD YET.

For the first time in many weeks Los Angeles draft boards yesterday were able to take a Saturday afternoon rest. Until the armistice was signed the boards worked not only Saturday afternoons, but many nights in the week, to keep pace with the speed-up programme adopted to keep men on their way to France. Not only have members of the different boards kept steadily at work, but large forces of volunteer clerks have also given their time.

That men between 37 and 45 years old on September 12 do not have to fill out their questionnaires before returning them to their draft boards has been decided by all local boards as the proper construction of orders from the Provost-Marshal-General. Board No. 17, the members of which believed it necessary that all questionnaires should be filled out, yesterday posted a notice that men of that class need not fill them out, but to mail them. The board, however, as do all other boards, informs all registrants that they should notify the board of any change of address.

Several boards will begin next week on the physical examinations of registrants who on September 12 had not reached their nineteenth birthday. Board No. 17 will probably begin these examinations next Friday, in accordance with the instructions of the Provost-Marshal-General that examination and classification of 18-year-old registrants be completed quickly.

Registered men who were notified to appear before local boards for physical examination and have failed to do so are not relieved of the responsibility, according to Robert B. Shearer, secretary of Board No. 11. This board has about 300 men who are delinquent, and these men were yesterday given until the coming Wednesday to report. All of these men, it is pointed out, are in the 18-to-36 class, and therefore, according to the draft rulings, are still required to complete their questionnaires and examinations.

ILLNESS PROVES FATAL.

Ten of the employees in the office of Collector Carter are ill from influenza, but none are seriously so. Only one new case was reported during the week, and three that had been previously stricken have returned to their official duties.

Alleged Incendiary Fire Case Brings Out Remark.

Insurance Adjuster Charges Failure of Justice.

"The Supervisors have no more jurisdiction over criminal matters in this department than Mr. Hohenzollern. The members of the 1917 and the 1918 grand juries have gone into the matter very fully, voted on it, and no true bill was returned."

This was Dist.-Atty. Woolwine's reply to a communication sent to the Board of Supervisors yesterday by E. Farrar, a fire insurance adjuster of No. 926 South Westmoreland avenue, severely attacking the District Attorney for alleged failure to prosecute the authors of an alleged incendiary fire in Glendale.

Mr. Farrar said he had submitted to the District Attorney in July, 1917, reports and data with reference to the partial destruction of a house and its contents owned by Mrs. Mary Garrett Shaw at No. 1100 Vine street, Glendale, on May 5, 1917. He said that the reports and data comprised a clear, authentic, prima facie information of felony or felonies. To the best of his knowledge and belief, "effective, intelligent and proper official action has not been had in the alleged felony or felonies."

The evidence indicated, Mr. Farrar says, that the fire was of incendiary origin. The fire was preceded by a violent explosion, the premises at the time being unoccupied. The total insurance on the building and contents taken by the National Fire Insurance Company of New York was $14,750. This claim, he says, appeared to be excessive. The claim of proof of loss filed appeared to be an excessive amount. The information in his hands indicates that Luther Kessling, the brother-in-law of Mrs. Shaw, lost his life through burns at the time Mrs. Kessling committed suicide.

"The case appears to be out of the ordinary and withal a pathetic one," Mr. Farrar says. "There was a hearing before the Criminal Complaint Committee in 1917, and the matter referred to the grand jury. During the hearing before the grand jury, the petitioner was informed that a private detective was assigned upon the case by persons connected with the District Attorney's office. Their action was adverse to the prosecution of the case and destructive of justice."

This detective, according to Mr. Farrar, appeared to sustain extremely friendly relations with the District Attorney "and certain persons in the District Attorney's office. He appeared to be strangely and unduly informed as to the status and progress of the investigation."

He says failure to present the case properly to the 1917 grand jury was a travesty. Mr. Farrar avers he was constantly annoyed during this time by the espionage of "dicks" employed by a private concern, his family annoyed and his business injured. He says he was charged with attempted blackmail and threatened with ruin and disgrace if he did not drop the matter. The detective appeared to have desired to cast suspicion upon an innocent woman relative to the owner of the burned building.

The communication was not read by the Supervisors, but laid over until Monday morning's session.

EXPLAINS POINTS IN BORING PATENT SUIT.

COMPANY SAID TO HAVE MONOPOLY ON OIL-WELL APPARATUS.

Raymond Ives Blakeslee, attorney for Wilson & Willard in their litigation against the Union Tool Company, involving the patent on oil well-boring apparatus, sends to The Times a letter regarding the features of the mandate of the United States District Court of Appeal, received here last Thursday.

Mr. Blakeslee states that four claims of his clients have been found valid and infringed upon, and that for years the Union Tool Company and the Oil Well Supply Company "have been using the matter of these four claims found infringed, and the damages and profits for which they will be accountable to Wilson & Willard should run into hundreds of thousands of dollars, let alone the value of the claims during the remaining period of the patent."

The attorney also states that as to claims 6 to 9, these claims include the table and the string and the collar and the drive bushing and are not merely for the use of a collar on the pipe or stem.

"The Union Tool Company interests brought a suit against the Wilson & Willard interests," says Mr. Blakeslee, "under a patent to this man Griffith for a rotary oil-well apparatus, and Judge Cushman found the patent void, and the interests owning it did not even appeal the case. He did not even claim this matter which it is found Willard & Willcox invented, and which is covered by the four claims sustained by the Circuit Court of Appeals, who reversed Judge Cushman. The defendant cannot use the slips in combination with these combinations of claims 6 to 9, and, therefore, it would seem that Willard & Wilson have an effective monopoly either with or without the slips."

FORMER ATTORNEY IS PROMOTED TO CAPTAIN

Los Angeles friends of Henry O. Wheeler, Jr., formerly a well-known attorney of this city, yesterday received word from him that he has been promoted to a captaincy in the artillery and is now at the field artillery school of instruction in France.

Mr. Wheeler's father, the late Henry O. Wheeler, was the first man in Vermont to enlist in the Union Army at the outbreak of the Civil War, and when the United States entered the war against Germany, Mr. Wheeler, Jr., had an ambition to be the first man to enlist from California. He made a special trip to San Francisco for this purpose, but was rejected because of an accident some time before to his leg. Later, he succeeded in enlisting, and was soon sent overseas. His father and wife died here a short time before his enlistment.

ONE INDORSEMENT ENOUGH, SAYS JUDGE.

"I wrote a letter indorsing Judge Myers for the new Appellate Court, and I don't want to complicate my support of him by supporting anybody else."

This was Judge Monroe's reply to a circular sent out by the San Bernardino Bar Association in furthering the candidacy of Byron Waters of that city for appointment by Gov. Stephens to one of the three offices of justice of the District Court of Appeal for the Second District, Division No. 2. Mr. Waters was a member of the constitutional convention that framed the Constitution of this State in 1879.

Drive to Aid Christians in Western Asia.

First Work is to be Through Sunday-Schools.

General Campaign to Follow in January.

As an immediate result of the stopping of the war, the number of refugees in Western Asia that can be reached by philanthropy today is increased from approximately 1,000,000 to 4,000,000, in round numbers, according to a statement made yesterday by Dr. J. P. McNaughton of Los Angeles, secretary for the Armenian and Syrian Relief Committee for Southern California.

That the need is terrific and the situation a pivotal one in the lives of Christian Armenians, Syrians, Greeks and Jews in that war theater is borne out by the most earnest appeals sent out last week by the American Committee for Armenian and Syrian Relief of New York City, of which James L. Barton is chairman. A drive throughout the nation for $30,000,000 is in process of preparation, and the first activity is to be evinced in the 200,000 Sunday-schools of North America, asked to raise $2,000,000 as their share.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL CAMPAIGN.

Work in the Sunday-schools will begin definitely on Sunday, December 1, when 1200 public speakers will tell of the tremendous need of these earliest Christians of the orient, an all-day session of education that will embrace the whole of this portion of the State. This date is the opening one for a nation-wide Sunday-school convention that will continue until December 18, jointly participated in by the Sunday-school associations of the State and the members of the Laymen's Missionary Movement. But particular stress is to be placed throughout these convention days on the conditions obtaining in Armenia and Syria, here, just before the war, 1,000,000 Christian people were starving, homeless and without clothing, and where now the number has been increased nearly four times because of the surrender and retirement of the Turks and Huns from that region and along the Mediterranean shores.

RELIEF ORGANIZATIONS.

Relief organizations within the Sunday-schools are being arranged for in Southern California by Dr. W. A. Phillips, secretary of the Sunday-School Association; C. W. Kinnear, acting secretary for the Laymen's Missionary Movement; Dr. McNaughton, of the Armenian and Syrian Relief; Dr. J. C. Worley and Prof. John C. Shedd, all of whom are completely familiar with the need for haste in raising funds in order that the remnant of Christian civilization in Western Asia may be saved.

Acting with them is H. N. Wells, manager of the War Savings Stamp Speakers' Bureau, who has given freely of his time in organizing and directing war work in Southern California. He will call upon his large force of speakers to help put the drive over for the sufferers in Asia Minor, Mesopotamia, Persia, Armenia and Palestine, and will direct the fund-raising campaign in January, when $30,000,000 will be raised in the United States. Southern California will be called upon to contribute $500,000. Committees will be organized in every city and community south of the Tehachepi.

A special appeal is being sent out by Dr. McNaughton to all churches, asking that Thanksgiving Day this year be a time when, in conjunction with the voicing of solemn thanks for the cessation of war, the urgent need of Western Asia be emphasized.

POETIC INSPIRATION AT CENTRAL STATION.

LIGHTLESS AUTO AND A LOOSE SCREW BRING POLICE MUSES INTO VIEW.

The "poetic" correspondence between Patrolman W. H. Box and F. G. Schreiner, chief driver of the police department, was given out at the Central station yesterday. It relates to "Eighteen-Twenty," a small but useful automobile of a well-known make, and is as follows:

Sergt. Slaughter: Reports I've made plenty
About no lights on Eighteen-twenty;
There's one thing I wish you'd do,
Have Schreiner tighten that lightless screw.
W. H. BOX.

In due time the following came back from the chief driver's office:

11-8-1918. Officer Box:
Your poetry secured, its use insured;
That flivver of yours is well matured.
It is subject to abuse
From your daily careless use
And with ordinary care
It will do its humble share
And every night have lights to spare.
You speed the poor jit in low, to be sure,
Till no lights made could hold secure;
The voltage's too strong, the juice so strong
That no high-voltage lights could last very long.
So use more sense when you run in low
And give this poor jitney a ghost of a show.
The low speed is made to start the car off,
But not made to race with, so please lay off.
When the car gets to rolling, use your high speed
And you will have all the lights you may need.
A word to the wise should be enough,
So please lay off this burning-out stuff.
F. G. SCHREINER, chief driver.

In the meantime, it appeared, the said "Eighteen-twenty" continued to remain without lights. Document No. 3 then was dispatched to the chief driver. It read:

The lights on eighteen-twenty are still on the bum,
But I took the old boat out and gave it a run.
The night was dark like the Kaiser's doom,
But from the flivver came nothing but gloom.
A copper stopped me at Sixth and Flower,
And I had to argue with him for an hour
I told him that Schreiner said the lights are all right,
And he answered, "Maybe, but not tonight."
You explain, sir, the lights burn out while in low,
But there's one little thing that I'd like to know—
How do these high-priced globes burn out without light
And stay dark and dreary the whole blessed night?
W. H. BOX.

Reporter's note: Final reports show car No. 1820 still without lights.

FOR SOLDIERS' CHILDREN.

Los Angeles Elks' Lodge, No. 99, is planning this year to keep up its usual distribution of Christmas good cheer to the children of all the orphanages, estimated at about 2300, and also to see that the children of soldiers and sailors are not disappointed at Christmas time because "daddy went to war."

The Christmas Committee is composed of George M. Adair, Charles M. Cook, Tracy Q. Hall, Ray Laswell and Tom Abbott. By addressing the chairman of the Christmas Committee, Elks' Club, No. 300 South Olive street, and giving information of children of soldiers and sailors who might be missed in distribution of gifts at Christmas time, each case will be investigated and every worthy case will be cared for.

December 11 is the date set for the "Christmas Riot" at the Elks' Club. There'll be the "big show" that night, larger than even that of last year, and then there'll be some of the same old games, and some new ones, and general amusement for every member of the order.

"Our pet hobby is taking care of the kids," says the announcement. "Not only orphans, this year, but the kiddies of every soldier and sailor in the service of our country whose little ones might miss their usual Santa Claus because their daddy went to war.

"It's our absolute duty to double our efforts to make those kiddies have the best time possible, and you and the rest of us are going to do it, even if our own kiddies have to forego some of their presents. They would do it in a minute if you put it up to them; but you don't have to—just stretch a little harder."

MAY RETURN SILVAS TO FOLSOM PRISON.

MAN ALLEGED TO BE ESCAPED CONVICT MUST ANSWER TO CHARGE OF ROBBERY.

An important arrest became known yesterday when Officer George Moore conferred with Deputy District Attorney Randall relative to the prosecution of Edward Silvas, who was arrested by Officer Moore after he had held up a Mexican rooming-house on North Main street on November 8, and taken several hundred dollars and a violin from the inmates.

According to Mr. Randall, Silvas is an escaped convict from Folsom, and has been convicted of felonies on two previous occasions, once in Ventura county for grand larceny in 1913, and sent to Folsom in 1916 for robbery. After serving two years he is said to have made a daring escape from the chain gang through a hail of bullets from the penitentiary guard.

According to Officer Moore, the present charge against Silvas is that he entered the Mexican rooming-house and, while holding the inmates in fear with a large knife, forced them to give up their money. At the same time he is said to have seriously cut Jose Lopez across the back when Lopez protested against Silvas taking his violin. It was when Silvas attempted to sell the musical instrument the next day that he was arrested.

A preliminary hearing will be held before Justice Summerfield tomorrow.

The authorities at Folsom have asked that Silvas be returned to them, which will be done in case the prosecution fails to establish his guilt in connection with the robbery charge.

SHRINERS TO GIVE BIG CHARITY BALL.

EVENT WILL OCCUR ON THANKSGIVING EVE AT SHRINE AUDITORIUM.

The Shriners of Los Angeles, always noted for their leadership in matters philanthropic, are making preparations for their annual Christmas charity ball to be given Thanksgiving Eve, the 27th inst., at Shrine Auditorium.

Members of Al Malaikah Temple, before the armistice, decided that this local charity, planned to bring cheer and happiness into the hearts of hundreds of little children in Los Angeles, must not be abandoned. With peace assured, they are expecting to make this twelfth annual event one of the greatest ever given under their auspices.

Without Al Malaikah charity, Los Angeles unfortunates would be more desolate than ever this Christmas, for the war has fallen heavily upon them. In addition to those ordinarily dependent upon the Shriners' philanthropy for their Christmas gladness, the families of many soldiers and sailors will need assistance this Yuletide—so the clarion call of W. E. Bush, Potentate of Al Malaikah, is sounded for a grand rallying in order that the Christmas charity party to be given Thanksgiving Eve may prove an unprecedented success and provide a generous fund for the kiddies' Christmas cheer.

Motley H. Flint, chairman of the Christmas relief work, and F. R. Silverwood, chairman for the Christmas tree festivities, are both devoting their time and energies to assuring the success of the big event, and a splendid programme will be featured for the ball.

Give Candy Cascarets to a Bilious, Constipated Child

"Mother gives me a candy Cascaret when I am cross, sick and won't play."

TO MOTHERS! Each ten cent box of Cascarets, candy cathartic, contains full directions for dose for children aged one year old and upwards. Nothing else "works" the nasty bile, sour fermentations and constipation poison from the tender little bowels so gently, yet so thoroughly. Even cross, feverish, bilious children gladly take Cascarets without being coaxed. Cascarets taste just like candy. Cascarets never gripe the little bowels, never sicken, never injure, but above all, they never disappoint the worried mother.

INJURIES PROVE FATAL.

Man Hurt in Collision of Electric Cars Expires at the Receiving Hospital.

Rafael Henriquez, one of the five people seriously injured Friday night when a Santa Ana electric train crashed into the rear of a stalled San Pedro train, died at the Receiving Hospital yesterday morning. He was crushed in the collision, and an attempt to save his life by amputating a leg was unsuccessful. He was a longshoreman of the harbor district.

The other persons injured are resting easily at the Crocker-street Hospital, it was stated there last night. Investigation of the wreck and an endeavor to place responsibility for it will be made tomorrow by Coroner Hartwell and officials of the Pacific Electric.

CITY STILL LAGS IN DRIVE.

Two Hundred Thousand Needed Yet to Keep Soldiers Smiling.

President Wilson, in a telegram received yesterday by the Los Angeles committee, has appealed to the American people to contribute generously to the United War Work Fund. The telegram was as follows:

"I cannot but believe that our people, from one end of the country to the other, will rally in generous and sacrificial giving to complete this fund and to give our men this fresh and unmistakable evidence that we are still behind them and with them during their patient and long vigil in our behalf and in the sole interest of completing the high and patriotic duty on which we sent them forth.

"WOODROW WILSON."

The people of Los Angeles must subscribe $209,514 before Monday night to the United War Work fund or this city will be branded to the American soldiers and sailors as unwilling to "keep them smiling." This announcement and appeal for the hardest efforts possible today and tomorrow were made yesterday to the team captains of the United War Work campaign at their luncheon at the Hotel Alexandria by Chairman Harry H. Haldeman.

The returns announced at yesterday's meeting were as follows, as up to noon, Saturday, Los Angeles' (city) quota being $915,201:

Returns from precincts, teams, etc., $655,687.91.

Subscription of Edward L. Doheny, $50,000.

Total subscriptions, $705,687.91.

Remaining to be subscribed, $209,514.

The meeting was a most stirring one, the announcement of the subscription of Mr. Doheny and of the returns of the team captains being received with great enthusiasm, but Chairman Haldeman seriously impressed on the captains the task that remains, if Los Angeles is to do her share in making American soldiers and sailors happy and comfortable during the two years of demobilization.

BY TEAM CAPTAINS.

Team captains' reports yesterday of subscriptions they had taken since Friday noon were:

Stoddard Jess, $6516.65; Arthur Letts, $6697.05; Harry Chandler, $31,599.50; E. A. Doran, $3149.75; R. H. Lacy, $31,181.50; L. S. Rounsaville, $2052.65; H. W. O'Melveny, $35,487.15; Sim Crabill, $1863.75; Karl Triest, $4373.75; P. E. Sawyer, $2397.25; W. P. Jeffries, $1360.25; Sollie Aronson, $959.50; H. M. Burgwald, $1027.02; W. J. Dodd, $740.50; G. G. Greenwood, $7107.

Los Angeles county, outside the city, is contributing generously, Chairman Haldeman announced, and there is no doubt that the county (outside) will go over its quota of $296,299. Among the county cities which have already oversubscribed are Pomona, 129 per cent.; Beverly Hills, 112 per cent.; Claremont, 108 per cent.; El Segundo, 102 per cent.; Azusa, 108 per cent.; Glendora, 125 per cent.

The duty Americans at home owe to their soldiers, especially from now on until they are safely back, was vividly and feelingly told to the team captains by Mrs. Richard Emrich, a Young Woman's Christian Association secretary, just returned from France.

"War-service work among our men is just beginning," said Mrs. Emrich. "The boys are not home and war is not really ended, so far as our care of our soldiers is concerned, until the boys are at their homes again. The period we are entering upon is, for the soldiers, a dangerous one. They are in France, and how they do all think of the little old U.S.A., as they call it! They are lonesome and homesick and the service of the Y.M.C.A., the K. of C. and the others, showing that Americans at home are with them, must continue. This service brings to these boys a home, cleanliness, cheer.

Rev. J. W. Brougher, pastor of Temple Baptist Church, told how the people of Los Angeles must understand that the American soldiers are depending on the people at home to stay with them until the work is done.

REAL WORK NOW.

"I was recently asked," said Dr. Brougher, "to speak for the Y.M.C.A., and I replied that I spoke not for the Y.M.C.A., but for all of the organizations which are helping make our soldiers and sailors happy—Knights of Columbus, Jewish Welfare, and all.

"I had a letter from the head of one of these organizations since the armistice was signed saying that now their real work in France had begun. That work must go on. We must not disappoint those boys."

H. W. O'Melveny read a letter from his son, Donald O'Melveny, now in France, telling of how the soldiers crowded into a Y.M.C.A. hut, and how much the entertainment there meant to every American soldier.

Chairman Haldeman assigned the team captains to co-operate today and tomorrow with the precinct organizations in order that every man and woman will be reached between now and tomorrow night and asked to subscribe.

"We have now," said Mr. Haldeman, "subscriptions from 76,775 persons, or just one-fourth of the number who subscribed to the second Red Cross drive. This means that there are thousands of persons who are not doing their duty. We must find these people and get their subscriptions.

HOPE TO CABLE WORD.

There will be another luncheon of the team captains tomorrow and a dinner in the evening, at which the workers hope to be able to announce that Los Angeles has subscribed its quota to the United War Work Fund.

A cablegram has been prepared to be sent to Stars and Stripes, the official American soldiers' newspaper published in France, announcing to the boys that Los Angeles has contributed its share to keep going the home activities of the seven organizations who work among the soldiers under the auspices of and at the request of the soldiers and sailors, and of the War and Navy departments. This cablegram to France will be sent if the quota is reached.

WHAT FAILURE MEANS.

"Do the people of Los Angeles realize the seriousness of the situation confronting the United War Work Campaign, and what it means to fail?" asked Chairman H. M. Haldeman yesterday in a statement to the public. The statement continued:

"To acknowledge rank failure at this time is to turn down the boys in France when they need us most. Because you are not privately in sympathy with a certain one of these organizations is no excuse for you at this time to hold back your subscription. If our soldiers refused to fight or work alongside of one of another faith, how far would we be today toward winning this war? It would be termed slackerism of the worst sort. Yet it is asserted that many citizens of Los Angeles are taking this unpatriotic stand.

"The fund that is now being raised will be apportioned among these seven big organizations in proportion to the workers that they have in the field. Considered on this basis, each one is profiting equally with the other.

"A telegram arrived yesterday stating that Los Angeles was behind the other cities of its grade. Is this going to be our first failure? The boys are waiting for your answer—what will it be?"

POLISH SPEAKER HERE.

Dr. Justine Klotz of the War Work Council, National Board of the Y.W.C.A., has arrived in Los Angeles, and will address the campaign workers at the Alexandria tomorrow. Dr. Klotz is a young woman lawyer, graduate in law of the University of Paris, and was an international law expert in Paris before the war. She is a native of Poland, and has seen her home city of Kalisch, formerly with a population of 70,000 people, destroyed by the Germans. She has worked long among the refugees.

"The people of Europe are calling for American aid in the work of reconstruction," said Dr. Klotz yesterday, "and the Y.W.C.A. is already organizing units to answer this call for our expert help. A unit of sixty women of Polish birth or descent is now being organized, to be called the Polish Gray Samaritans, to go into Poland. Similar help is needed by Serbia.

"Russia, the Czecho-Slovaks and other peoples are face to face with problems of their new-found liberty. For this work the money given in the United War Work Campaign goes. America cannot fail to answer the call."

START BALL ROLLING.

Owners of Fine West-side Subdivision Anticipate Coming of Prosperity by Offering Lots.

The Country Club Park Company, owner of the attractive residence subdivision of that name in West Los Angeles, is signalizing the return of peace by starting an active campaign for the sale of lots. Members of the company declare that the mighty events of the past week have made it certain that the United States is about to enter into an era of wonderful prosperity and they believe that Southern California is going to get its full share. The fact that the greatest tourist influx in the history of the section is now assured beyond question clinches the thing in their opinion and they are striding out ahead of all other subdividers handling their class of property in again offering sites to the public.

"The scarcity of vacant houses for rent or sale has started things moving in improved property," said Isaac Milbank, president of the company, yesterday, "and now the removal of the Federal ban on building has opened the way for builders to erect more houses and flats. That means that desirable sites of all kinds are bound to be in demand in short order. In fact, they are in demand now. We decided only a few days ago to offer some of our unsold Country Club Park lots and we have sold several of them already. Three on Fourth avenue, between Tenth street and Country Club drive, and one on Fifth avenue, between Eighth and Ninth streets, were sold the first day we offered them through our advertising."

Country Club Park was placed on the market about seven years ago, following the removal of the Los Angeles Country Club from this location to Beverly Hills. Scores of fine residences, large and small, have been erected in different parts of the property since that time. The building of the Los Angeles High School, just west of the tract, greatly stimulated building in the district up until the time of the government restriction on construction operations. The tract is bounded by Western avenue, Country Club drive, Eighth street and Fifth avenue.

RESUME BUILDING.

The Los Angeles Investment Company is now resuming building operations on the same basis as was in force before the government ban on construction was put into effect, according to W. H. Harrison, manager of that corporation. "We are again taking up the building work we left off at the request of the priority board," said Mr. Harrison yesterday, "and we will be in a position to increase our plans and endeavor to meet any demand. In fact, we hope to be able to announce some extensive development plans soon. Tourists are coming here this season in unprecedented numbers and this is going to keep Los Angeles busy supplying places both for rent and for the market."

TO EASTERNERS.

The McCarthy Company reports the following sales: To Mrs. I. W. Phelps, house at No. 828 West Seventy-seventh street, $1700; to Samuel Epson, house at No. 315 East Seventieth street, $1500; to H. R. Butler, house at No. 4115 Monroe street, $2050; to R. R. Seeling, house at No. 1448 West Fifty-first street, $3000; to Mrs. Anna Stitson, house at No. 3531 South Fourth avenue, $3750; to Mrs. L. B. Carwell, house at No. 837 West Seventy-ninth street, $900; Mrs. Del Rosa, house at No. 5007 Elmwood avenue, $6500; to Mrs. St. Larne, house at No. 5011 Elmwood avenue, $6500; to J. H. Parks, house at No. 120 Stanley avenue, Eagle Rock, $1000. Several of the buyers, it is announced, are recent arrivals from the East.

J. G. When he responded to inquiries as to what California produced, among other things he said "smiles."

THANK LAWYERS FOR THEIR LOYAL WORK.

LEGAL ADVISORY BOARD ISSUED STATEMENT AT CLOSE OF ITS TASK.

The Legal Advisory Board of Los Angeles county yesterday issued a statement acknowledging the services of attorneys of the Los Angeles county bar in helping registrants under the selective service law. This statement is signed by Gavin W. Craig, Thomas C. Ridgway and Milton K. Young, board members, and Will Mays, executive secretary. It reads:

"The Legal Advisory Board, appointed by the President to conduct the work of assisting registrants in Los Angeles county in the preparation of their questionnaires, being about to conclude its work by reason of the ending of the war and the orders of Provost-Marshal-General Chowder, wishes to make public acknowledgment of the services rendered by associate members of the board in the carrying on of the work just completed.

"This work has been accomplished by the painstaking, faithful and untiring labors of the members of the bar of this county, more than 1500 members of the legal profession having been engaged in giving assistance to registrants in the preparation of their questionnaires. It is impossible to make personal mention of the names of those persons who have in the manner indicated done their part in the war work. It should be known, however, that the members of the bar have, without compensation, given most freely and generously of their time. We know that in many cases members of the bar have, at the sacrifice of their practice, served at the exemption boards and at headquarters, to the end that registrants might have the legal assistance contemplated by the law and selective service regulations.

"Furthermore, the government provided no funds for the carrying on of this work, and finances for necessary clerical, telephone and other disbursements have been raised entirely by voluntary contributions from lawyers, these sums approximating $1000. While personal mention of names cannot generally be given, for the reason indicated, it is proper to acknowledge that such funds were gathered by a committee consisting of W. J. Hunsaker, Henry W. O'Melveny and Olin Wellborn, Jr., the first named being chairman thereof.

"In conclusion, we feel that the work committed to this board has been fully accomplished, and that the success thereof is to be credited to the continuous and untiring efforts of the members of the bar, and also to some others who are not lawyers, but generously gave their time and attention."

GOLF SCORES AT ANNANDALE CLUB.

Fifty-four entries marked the medal play tournament given at the Annandale Country Club yesterday for the benefit of the United War Work drive. About $150 was realized for the cause and a good crowd attended. A. S. Rendell won the eighteen holes with a score of 82, handicap 12, net 70. F. E. Day scored 84, handicap 12, net 72; H. C. FREE BOHEMIA CZECHS' PLEA.

Nation Demands Complete Independence at Last.

Wilson's Note to Austria Applauded in Siberia.

Slovak Troops Desperately Need Assistance Now.

[PACIFIC CABLE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]
[Copyright.]

VLADISVOSTOK, Oct. 22. (Delayed.)—In Russia where thousands of Czecho-Slovaks are fighting for national independence, President Wilson's reply to Austria was received with great enthusiasm. The Czechs think it opens the way to Prague. The next was translated and telegraphed immediately 5000 miles across Siberia to the Czech headquarters. Extras were issued here and the President's terms posted over the billboards where the crowds are reading constantly.

At the Czechs' offices Wilson's note and the formation of the Czech government at Paris were heralded as final steps before actual return of all Czechs to Bohemia to unite and establish a government in their land.

It is a thrilling sight to see the Czechs who are looking forward to their return to their native land after being four years or more away but it is pathetic to see their downcast expression when they mention their disappointment because the Allied troops could not reinforce their front and open the road across Russia to Austria, but they are not downhearted.

Contrarily, they are more determined to fight the Bolsheviki and Germans until there is a break with the Central Powers which will open the railroads and frontiers.

Dr. Krisek, captain of the Czecho-Slovaks and representative of the national council at Vladivostok was enchanted with Wilson's reply to the Austro-Hungarian armistice request. He said:

"We are delighted at the turn our national affairs have taken. We are quite sure the President's ideas will be sufficient basis for the realization of our national aspirations. We will go through to Prague as soon as we can.

DEMAND COMPLETE FREEDOM.

"We shall not stop our efforts until unconditional independence of our country is assured. We cannot, will not, stop our efforts one moment because the Bolsheviki, pressed by the Germans, are now trying to force their way into Siberia."

"How long do you think the Bolsheviki can hold out?"

"I believe the Bolsheviki will hold as long as Germany sustains them, no longer. Whether an armistice would have the effect of stopping all financial and military help to the Bolsheviki from Germany is doubtful. We are fighting for our freedom. We will go through to our home as soon as possible. We know from the news received from Austria that the situation even there is very favorable to our national aspirations.

"The present central government is too weak to resist our strong organization. The Austrian army is disorganized, weak and without fighting spirit. It is only a question of time now until we succeed. Whether our army in Russia reaches Prague, sooner or later Czecho-Slovak independence will be realized because our people throughout the world are fighting for the same cause."

Replying to the question whether the Czechs would be satisfied with independence under the Hapsburgs even if offered now, Krisek said:

"The whole Czecho-Slovak army in Russia favors complete independence of the Czecho-Slovak republic."

SITUATION UNSATISFACTORY.

The situation on the Czech front, however, is not satisfactory as some time ago the Bolsheviki were pressing the Czecho-Slovak troops back along the Samara-Cheliabinsk railroad, the Czechs being forced to withdraw gradually, Krisek said.

"Our troops are weakened after almost five months of continuous fighting. Our reserves are small and our war material is insufficent. We are trying to hold, although everything does not depend on us, but on the enemy's strength and on the Allied assistance."

The American assistance is about ready to leave Vladivostok for Cheliabinsk. Instead of a Red Cross train it is being made an all-American, including army aid. The Red Cross is scheduled to leave Thursday, stopping at Harbin, Irkutsk and Omsk, a day or two in each city and carrying all kinds of materials supplied for the Russians and Czechs.

Afterwards another train carrying only supplies leaves.

The all-American special carrying United States guards, the Red Cross director staff, doctors, nurses, French and British, has already moved to Omsk. Siberian authorities here are calling out an army which was already training prior to the arrival of Gen. Janin, who assumes command of the Russians and Czechs.

"It fell to my lot," says Private Boos' letter, "to fight the first skirmish that took place between the American and enemy troops. I was walking post between 10 and 12 o'clock on the night of September 3 when suddenly I was fired upon from ambush. One of the shots tore off my bayonet. 'GIVEN HONOR CROSS.

Redlands Man Wins Decoration for Acts of Bravery Facing Enemy Fire.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

REDLANDS, Nov. 16. — Capt. Frank Purvis of this city, a brother of Mrs. William Laten Thornquest, who enlisted in the Canadian Engineers soon after the outbreak of the war, has been awarded the Military Cross for bravery. He has been in the service four years and recently was sent with General Headquarters in the North Russian Expeditionary Force.

His major-general said in conferring the honor on him, "I hereby have the honor of conferring upon you, Capt. F. R. Purvis, Canadian Engineers, the Military Cross in recognition of your gallant conduct. The following is the official account of your conduct for which the award has been made: 'During the operation north of ——, extending over the period from August 31 to September 6, this officer showed remarkable courage and devotion to duty. The enemy had destroyed bridges and blown up railway tracks over a distance of twenty-five miles, which was holding up the complete column. This officer collected small parties of men and pushed forward under heavy fire, repaired both bridges and track and thus enabled the column to proceed. The success of all recent operations have been largely due to this officers' efforts.'"

HELD FOR ROBBERY.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

BAKERSFIELD, Nov. 16.—Surrounded by detectives after they are alleged to have stolen a large quantity of clothing from an aged Chinese, two men are in custody here on charges of burglary. They are Antonio Rojas and Herbert Bostello. Answering the call, the detectives rushed to the scene and surrounded the block. The men, say the authorities, attempted to escape, but halted and hid after they were fired upon.

WOMAN LOSES EYE.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

MONROVIA, Nov. 16.—Mrs. Marion W. Young of No. 224 West Orange avenue has lost her right eye as the result of a peculiar accident. While superintending the pruning of orange trees at her home, she stooped to pick up a fallen branch, when one of its smaller offshoots struck her fairly in the eye, necessitating the removal of the optic.

HINT WET-DRY ISSUE.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

SANTA MONICA BEACH, Nov. 16.—There is a well-defined movement here to once more put up the wet-and-dry issue to the voters. Despite the fact that a bone-dry ordinance carried here a year ago by more than two to one, the liquor men in the Ocean Park district, as well as a number of hotel man, are agitating another try at the voters.

The argument being put up is that the vote a year ago was really directed against the Sunset Inn and the presence of liquor stores in the north end. The present plan is to confine the sale of intoxicants to perhaps six places in Ocean Park and to eliminate bar-rooms.

It is maintained by a number of the hotel people that the majority of tourists like a glass of beer or wine with their meals and to have the amusement district an arid waste summer and winter results in driving patronage to Venice cafes and hotels.

If the initiative petition is pressed and an election is obtained the drys declare they will not only fight the plan as hard as they can, but that it is entirely possible that some of them would favor annexation to Los Angeles as well.

INFLUENZA STAYS OPENING OF SCHOOLS.

AT LEAST ANOTHER WEEK OF VACATION, LONG BEACH BOARD DECIDES

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONG BEACH, Nov. 16.—Although the influenza ban on the amusement places has been lifted by the city safety and health departments, and the doors of the theaters and dance halls were thrown open this afternoon, the churches and schools of Long Beach will remain closed for another week at least. Children under 16 years of age, however, will not be admitted to the amusement houses, Safety Commissioner James R. Williams announced.

In the briefest session on record, the Board of Education held a special meeting this afternoon and voted to keep the schools closed, following such a recommendation from City Health Officer Dr. Ralph Taylor and Commissioner Williams. The latter announced today that the churches of the city could hold services tomorrow if they desired, provided they observed the rule of barring children under 16 years of age. Late this afternoon, however, practically all the large churches issued statements declaring their intention of remaining closed at least another week.

POSTPONES DATE.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

MONROVIA, Nov. 16.—After a joint conference of members of the Ministerial Association, A. R. Clifton, Superintendent of Schools; Dr. C. D. Gaylord, city health officer, and members of the school and health boards, it was decided to postpone the lifting of the ban on public gatherings for another week in order that there might be no opportunity for a relapse in the present encouraging situation. The Board of Health had earlier in the week announced that public worship might be held this Sunday and that school sessions would resume on Monday.

GLENDALE BOARD ACTS.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

GLENDALE, Nov. 16.—In spite of the fact that the health authorities have lifted the ban on public gatherings, the city Board of Education has decided not to open the grade schools here until later. A meeting of teachers and principals was held at 4 o'clock this afternoon, which was addressed by Health Officer R. E. Chase, who was in favor of the opening of the schools, stating that the influenza was decreasing right along, but it was stated that public opinion is largely against the reopening at this time. The Board of Education decided to postpone such action until it was seen what effect the opening of the theaters and churches has on the situation. The High School, however, will have at least one session on Monday, and it will be announced at that time whether or not they will continue.

ONLY PAROCHIAL SCHOOLS.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SAN DIEGO, Nov. 16.—The quarantine for the influenza will be lifted tonight at midnight and only the public schools will be closed for a longer period. Parochial, private schools will open Monday and the public schools December 2. There were sixty-two new cases and two deaths today from the influenza.

REDONDO PARENTS OBJECT.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

REDONDO BEACH, Nov. 16.—At a joint meeting of the grammar and high school Boards of Trustees of this city last night it was decided that the influenza ban on the schools shall not be lifted for at least another week. It had previously been decided to open the schools on Monday. The danger of contracting the disease is considered practically past, but a canvass of the parents of the district showed that a large number of parents would forbid their children to attend school at this time.

NETS FROM JAPAN; CATCH FISH HERE.

HARBOR FIRM PLACES ORDER IN ORIENT; SHIPMENT TO COST $100,000.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

LOS ANGELES HARBOR, Nov. 16.—Orders have been placed by one Japanese firm for $100,000 worth of nets and webbing made in Japan from cotton sent from America. The fishermen will pay $4.50 a pound for the nets that were formerly made in America and sold for $1.10 per pound.

This is one of the results of the war that became known last night at the meeting of the Advisory Committee appointed by Capt. W. C. Crandall, Fish Administrator for Southern California, to assist in enforcing the regulations of the Food Administrator. The committee is made up of canners, fishermen and disinterested parties. I. G. Lewis, secretary of the San Pedro Chamber of Commerce, is chairman of the committee.

Because of the increased cost of nets and other items, the fishermen demanded an increased price for sardines over last season, which was granted by the committee. Other matters under consideration at the meeting were facilities for handling the fish at the canneries faster. While appliances are provided for handling tuna, it has been found that it often takes the greater part of a day to discharge a load of thirty tons of sardines from a boat, which, in the glaring sun, is good for neither fish nor fishermen.

All contracts between canners and fishermen are to be recorded with the Food Administration to check the receipt of fish by one cannery that may have been contracted by another.

OMIT VACATIONS TO MAKE UP LOST TIME.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

REDLANDS, Nov. 16.—The school trustees here have decided that it will not be necessary to hold school on Saturdays to make up for the three weeks lost during the influenza epidemic. It is believed that all the time can be made up by cutting out one week of the Christmas holidays, the spring vacation of one week and then holding school a week later in June. H. G. Clement, superintendent of the schools here, says that the influenza among the school children is limited to two or three cases now.

GOES TO ARCADIA.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

ALHAMBRA, Nov. 16. — A. Roache, one of the most active workers of the Alhambra-San Gabriel chapter of the Red Cross, has just been assigned to a wider field of service, having been made assistant field director of the American Red Cross at the Arcadia balloon school, with the title of captain. On account of his new duties he has been obliged to give up much of his local Red Cross work, but he will remain a member of the Executive Committee of the salvage department, with which committee he has been associated since the beginning of its work.

BEQUEATH TO NURSE.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

WHITTIER, Nov. 16.—Miss Dora Patterson, a former Whittier College girl, and a graduate of the Pacific Hospital nurses' training school, has received word that she is the recipient of the personal property and allotment of Elliot C. Hines, a member of the Twelfth Aero Squadron, who was killed in action on June 24. Miss Patterson is at present assistant superintendent of a Syracuse (N. Y.) hospital. The will has just been probated at Buffalo.

WILL AUCTION LINEN.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

TAFT, Nov. 16.—Dozens of sheets, pillows, pillow cases, blankets, comforters, mattresses and hospital needs, which were purchased for the seven Red Cross hospitals of the West Side during the influenza epidemic here, many of which were used but slightly, will be auctioned off within a few days and the fund obtained will go to aid the Red Cross in meeting the expense of the campaign to stamp out the epidemic just closed.

ABOUT SEVEN MILLION PAID UTAH BEET MEN.

SUGAR OUTPUT OF STATE WORTH $30,000,000 AT PRESENT PRICES.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SALT LAKE CITY (Utah) Nov. 16.—Nearly $7,000,000 was paid to beet growers throughout the intermountain country today and yesterday by sugar-manufacturing companies. Farmers received their checks for their first month's deliveries of beets to twenty-two factories in this region.

One company, the Utah-Idaho Sugar Company of this city, paid out $3,540,000 at their eleven plants, located in Utah, Idaho and Washington.

The Amalgamated Sugar Company of Ogden on the same day sent out checks aggregating $2,600,000.

Four other Utah companies, each operating one plant, made payments of $1,000,000 on the same day.

The beets paid for represent about one-half of the 1918 crop, it is said. A second and final payment will be made about December 10.

The total output of the twenty-two factories, it is estimated, will be about 2,000,000 sacks of sugar, with a value, according to prevailing prices, of about $30,000,000. The beet tonnage for Utah, Idaho and Washington is estimated at 1,200,000 tons for the 1918-1919 season.

WILL LOWER TRADE BARS.

Harbor Business is Expected to Largely Increase at Early Date.

In the mater of imports, it is believed that the present armistice situation will operate to loosen up the drastic regulations affecting the shipping of goods into this country that has for some time reduced arrivals from foreign countries at the local port.

The constant diminution of imports and exports, as reported by Collector of Customs Elliott, has been largely due, so far as imports are concerned, to the scarcity of bottoms to bring the shipments across, all of the available shipping being employed in the carrying of troops and war supplies, and to the danger from submarines.

Another feature that operated in the same direction as to imports were the numerous embargo orders which cut off trade entirely in some instances. It is believed that these orders will be loosened up a bit in the near future, but this has not been officially determined.

The embargo shutting off the shipment of Japanese foodstuffs to this country has been a source of hardship to many Japanese who are accustomed to the consumption of purely Japanese foods, and it has been necessary in many instances for local Japanese to appeal to the Chinese for food that appeals in common to their palates. This is an unusual situation, possibly the first time it has occurred in the history of the local customs house. The Japanese embargo was recently ameliorated in a measure, and there may be concessions in other directions as permanent peace looms.

It is known that a number of Los Angeles merchants have large shipments of goods waiting on the other side, which will be brought here as soon as proper shipping facilities can be provided.

The total value of commerce passing through the port of Los Angeles for the month of September was $7,375,958, and the tonnage amounted to 222,546 tons, according to a detailed report just issued by Clarence H. Matson, traffic manager for the Los Angeles Harbor. This report is compiled from monthly tonnage reports of wharf and steamship companies.

The total of all inbound commerce at this port for September was 83,825 tons, valued at $3,676,586. The outbound commerce amounted to 138,721 tons, valued at $3,699,372.

There was inbound domestic merchandise amounting to 21,810 tons, and valued at $2,720,971, and inbound domestic lumber to the extent of 61,996 tons, valued at $954,641. Outbound domestic commerce was 100,642 tons, valued at $3,286,825.

The total inbound foreign commerce was 19 tons, valued at $940. The outbound foreign commerce was 38,076 tons, valued at $412,547.

During the month 158 commercial vessels arrived at this port, and there were 163 departures of this class. The net tonnage of the vessels arriving was 147,449, and that of departing vessels was 162,882.

The outbound foreign commerce included shipments of automobiles, cement, lumber, general merchandise, oil and fuel.

FIND RUGS HID UNDER GROUND.

Leo Gotch's Cache is in the Public Highway.

Figures on Cigarette Paper Give the Clew.

Two Thousand Dollars' Worth of Loot is Restored.

"PLP—159868, C.H. 15 ft. N in shadow."

This cryptic notation, marked with pencil on a wadded cigarette paper, led to the recovery of nearly $2000 worth of Persian silk rugs, part of the plunder obtained by Leo Gotch and the Delaney brothers in their midnight activities in the exclusive residence sections of the city.

Detective H. F. McCarron is the hero of the story, occupying the same relative position as Sherlock Holmes in Conan Doyle's tales, and Dupin and Lecocq in those of Poe and Gaboriau.

It seems that when Detectives McCarron, Carl Williams, Bernand and Louis Canto arrested Leo Gotch, the last of the burglar trio to fall into the hands of justice, and a victim of his own courtesy, they took him to a room in the detective bureau and searched him thoroughly.

DISCLOSES NUMERALS.

Among the keys, rings, coins, matches and scraps of paper taken from his pockets was this wadded ball of yellow paper, and it lay in the pile of loot unnoticed. While the detectives questioned Gotch, however, Detective McCarron idly unrolled the wad with his fingers and straightened it out. The mysterious-looking jumble of numerals and letters written in lead pencil on the crumpled slip, appeared.

When Detective McCarron walked a beat in his patrolman days, he had often noticed the tin number plates tacked on telephone and telegraph poles, and which identified their ownership. He interpreted the message as referring to Pacific Light and Power Company's pole No. 159,868 on the county highways. This was located beyond the western city limits, Seventh-street way.

FIVE PERSIAN RUGS.

The detectives reached the pole about 1:30 o'clock in the afternoon. The shadow of the pole was then thrown due north, and, measuring fifteen feet along this shadow, they found that the ground had been recently disturbed and an attempt made to hide it.

Feverishly (in which manner our best treasure hunters proceed) the detectives spaded up the earth, and two feet below the surface uncovered a package wrapped in heavy paper and burlap, inside of which were five Persian rugs. Three of these, valued at $900, were taken from the home of Mrs. C. Lantz, No. 2622 South Figueroa street, on the night of the 7th inst. The two others are worth $1000, and were stolen from Mrs. Martha Johnson of No. 1811 Harvard boulevard.

Riley and James Delaney were captured last week, after the former stuck a gun against the abdomen of Officer Dan Saylor of the South Pasadena force and attempted to make his escape. He was wounded by Officer Saylor before his arrest. Leo Gotch was taken at Seventh and Broadway, when a woman slipped and he stopped to help her up, the passing detectives observing the bulge of his revolver under his coat.

JAPANESE ON BAIL.

Alleged Misinterpreter in Examinations of Japanese Medical Students Gives Bond.

T. G. Nakayama, arrested a few days ago charged with having incorrectly translated the answers of Japanese medical students at examinations for licenses to practice medicine in California, with the object of insuring their passing the State "quiz," was released from the County Jail late yesterday on $5000 bond. He will have his preliminary hearing on the charge tomorrow.

It was explained yesterday by H. J. Castellaw, attorney for the State Medical Board for the southern district, that none of the Japanese medical students involved in the charges against Nakayama and others had been granted licenses by the board, as had been erroneously reported. The translated answers of the students, which were written by the interpreter, were in most of the cases so much longer than the answers written by the students in Japanese that suspicion was at once aroused and new translations sought. The alleged fraud was then discovered, Attorney Castellaw said.

QUICK RELIEF FROM CONSTIPATION
Get Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets
That is the joyful cry of thousands since Dr. Edwards produced Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.
Dr. Edwards, a practicing physician for 17 years and calomel's old-time enemy, discovered the formula for Olive Tablets while treating patients for chronic constipation and torpid livers.
Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets do not contain calomel, but a healing, soothing vegetable laxative.
No griping is the "keynote" of these little sugar-coated, olive-colored tablets. They cause the bowels and liver to act normally. They never force them to unnatural action.
If you have a "dark brown mouth"—a bad breath—a dull, tired feeling—sick headache—torpid liver and are constipated, you'll find quick, sure and only pleasant results from one or two little Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets at bedtime.
Thousands take one or two every night just to keep right. Try them 10c and 25c per box. All druggists.

BASEMENT
An Innovation in Retail Furniture Merchandising.
This novel department has been installed to assist the home-loving public by affording an opportunity to exchange, or in other words, apply as part payment toward new, articles of furniture which their owners have no further use for.
This makes possible an economical and wise disposition of furniture which one may wish to "pass along."
It also places within reach of a large number of prospective purchasers an extensive and varied assortment of desirable used furniture which is still suitable to fulfill many years of useful service in other homes.
If you have furniture you would like to dispose of toward new, phone our Exchange Department Manager—10423, or Pico 1840.
If you have a need for one or more pieces of good used furniture visit this department and see if we have not exactly what you seek.

HOW TO FIGHT
SPANISH INFLUENZA
Avoid crowds, coughs and cowards, but fear neither germs nor Germans! Keep the system in good order, take plenty of exercise in the fresh air and practice cleanliness. Remember, a clean mouth, a clean skin and clean bowels are a protecting armor against disease. To keep the liver and bowels regular and to carry away the poisons within, it is best to take a vegetable pill every other day, made up of Mayapple, aloes, jalap and sugar-coated, to be had at most drug stores, known as Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. If there is a sudden onset of what appears like a hard cold, one should go to bed, wrap warm, take a hot mustard foot-bath and drink copiously of hot lemonade. If pain develops in head or back, ask the druggist for Anuric (anti-uric) tablets. These will flush the bladder and kidneys and carry off poisonous matter. To control the pains and aches take one Anuric tablet every two hours, with frequent drinks of lemonade. The pneumonia appears in a most treacherous way, when the influenza victim is apparently recovering and anxious to leave his bed. In recovering from a bad attack of influenza or pneumonia the system should be built up with an herbal tonic, such as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, made without alcohol from the roots and barks of American forest trees, or his "Irontic" (iron tonic) tablets, which can be obtained at most drug stores, or send 10c to Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., for trial package. "Irontic" is just as good as Dr. Pierce's other medicines.

PREDICTS END OF 'FLU BY DECEMBER FIRST.

STATE HEALTH BOARD SECRETARY SAYS NEW CASES DECREASING DAILY.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SACRAMENTO, Nov. 16.—"We are getting reports which indicate deaths in California from Spanish influenza will exceed 10,000," Guy P. Jones, assistant secretary of the California State Board of Health, said today.

"In San Francisco and Los Angeles, where a total of 49,402 cases have developed since the outbreak of the epidemic, there have been a total of 3326 deaths."

Jones predicted the epidemic will be practically ended by December 1. The number of new cases is decreasing daily, he said. A total of 147,464 cases had been reported up to today.

Conditions in Sacramento improved to such an extent today that the City Commission authorized churches to hold indoor services tomorrow. Theaters may be permitted to reopen next Wednesday, it was announced.

DECLINE CONTINUES.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 16.—Decline of the influenza epidemic continued, according to twenty-four-hour figures announced at 5 p.m. today by the health department. These showed a total of eighty-seven cases reported today, eighteen of them being cases developing today, and eighteen deaths. This would bring the grand total of cases since the outbreak of the epidemic to 23,487 and of deaths to 1962.

Thirty emergency doctors of the United States public health service have been relieved in the last few days in various parts of the State, Dr. W. C. Billings, surgeon of the service for California and Nevada, announced here today. But twelve of the service doctors are now on duty on influenza cases. The situation in the State is clearing up rapidly, Dr. Billings said.

All of the theaters reopened here today.

VISALIA STAYS CLOSED.

VISALIA, Nov. 16.—Health, City Council and school representatives at a conference late today ordered all places of public assemblage to remain closed until Monday, December 2, as a result of the continuance of the influenza epidemic.

UNIONS TO FIGHT ANY REDUCTION IN WAGES.

GOMPERS SERVES WARNING THAT AFTER WAR PAY AND HOURS MUST REMAIN SAME.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

LAREDO (Tex.) Nov. 16.—Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, in the closing hours of the Pan-American labor conference here today, served formal warning that no general reduction of wages nor increase in working hours after the war would be accepted without a bitter fight by organized labor.

He issued a statement inspired by a recent utterance of William H. Barr, president of the National Founders' Association, that a reduction of wages and longer hours would be the only means to enable American manufacturers to continue to cope with foreign industries after the war.

"Notice is given here and now," Mr. Gompers said, "that the American people will not be forced back by either Barr, his association or all the Bourbons in the United States."

"The American labor movement wholeheartedly supported this world struggle and we knew just what was involved," added Gompers. "The American labor movement will cooperate with all other agencies to help in this reconstruction time. Our movement is not to destroy, but to construct. And all may just as well understand now as at any other time that the advantage which the workers of America and of the Allied countries have gained and which we hope to extend to the people even of the conquered countries are not going to be taken away from us. And we will resist in that attempt to the uttermost."

The conference adjourned after a Pan-American federation of labor had been formed and Gompers elected its chairman. The new organization is to be composed of delegates from the representatives of the American Federation of Labor and delegates from the labor organizations of other Pan-American republics.

The objects of the new labor federation are the establishment of better conditions for working people who emigrate from one American country to another; the establishment of better understanding among the working people of all the Americas, and the utilization of every means for the promotion and welfare of the peoples of these countries. Each country will be entitled to at least two delegates. The federation will maintain permanent headquarters in Washington. The federation will meet annually on the first Tuesday in July.

Berlin Asks Wilson to Modify Anglo-Turkish Terms.

PARIS, Nov. 16, 4:45 a.m.—In accordance with Marshal Foch's instructions conveyed through Maj. Sisteron to the German great headquarters, German military and technical representatives met Belgian officers at Bruges, British at Mons and French and Americans at Nancy yesterday afternoon, says Marcel Hutin of the Echo de Paris. The purpose of the meetings was to arrange the details of the withdrawal of the Germans and to discuss questions relative to railroads, rivers, canals and telegraph and telephone service.

The Germans gave information concerning the different systems of communication and the destruction effected or planned by the Germans. The British and Belgians dealt with the territory limited by the Dutch-Belgian and Dutch-German frontiers, the Rhine and the line of Coblenz.

The French and Americans discussed the region south of Charleroi and Bonn to Southern Alsace.

SOLF APPEALS AGAIN.

LONDON, Friday, Nov. 15.—Dr. Solf, German Foreign Secretary, according to a German wireless message, has sent to Secretary Lansing a note referring to the article in the Anglo-Turkish armistice requiring German civilians to leave Turkey immediately, and declaring that literal fulfillment of the article "must cause severe hardships especially to poor people, and appears unreasonable after the conclusion of a universal armistice."

Dr. Solf says that German hospitals and asylums for the blind and orphans, the latter caring principally for Armenian children, would be compelled to close, "thus causing new suffering among the Christian population." The German government, he adds, requests that President Wilson intervene in favor of these German civilians being permitted to remain in Turkey.

[This note is similar to the unsigned communication from the German Foreign Office received in Washington Thursday concerning repatriation of German civilians in Turkey.]

LANSING SENDS REPLY.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—Secretary Lansing made public today the text of his reply to radio communications from the German government seeking modifications in the terms of the armistices with Germany and Turkey. It is announced that the requests would be referred to the Allied governments and the Supreme War Council, and pointed out that such communications should be sent to all the associated governments instead of only to the President, or government of the United States, and should come through established diplomatic channels instead of by wireless.

Mr. Lansing's note, addressed to Minister Sulzer of Switzerland, follows:

"I should be gratified if you would be good enough to convey the following communication to the Secretary of Foreign Affairs of the German government:

"The government of the United States has received the radio messages addressed to the President of the United States by the German government relative to relief from certain requirements imposed in the armistice with the Ottoman government and the armistice with the German government.

REFER TO ALLIES.

"The communications which have been received will be forthwith communicated to the other governments with which the government of the United States is associated, and also to the Supreme War Council in Paris.

"The government of the United States takes this opportunity to suggest to the German government that communications of this nature, which pertain to the terms of the armistice, or to matters in which all the associated governments are interested, should be sent to all the associated governments and not addressed alone to the President or government of the United States.

"The government of the United States also desires to call the attention of the German government to the fact that these communications should be presented through established diplomatic channels rather than by direct radio communication."

HUNS APPEAL TO POPE.

LONDON, Nov. 16. — German Catholics are appealing to Pope Benedict against the heavy burdens of the armistice conditions, according to a wireless dispatch received here this afternoon from Berlin.

Expectant Mothers View Event Calmly

Time Brings Knowledge That by Use of Penetrating Remedy Suffering Is Avoided.

Thousands of women have found by the application of Mother's Friend, the penetrating external remedy, prepared especially for expectant mothers, that pain and suffering at the crisis is avoided and that in addition the months preceding the crisis are free from nervousness, nausea, stretching and bearing-down pains and general discomfort.

Mother's Friend makes it possible for the expectant mother to herself actually aid nature in the glorious work to be performed, and no woman should neglect to give nature a helping hand. It will mean infinitely less pain and the hours at the crisis will be less. The period is one of calm repose and restful nights.

By the use of Mother's Friend the skin is kept soft and natural, and experienced mothers say that it is much better to keep your health and good looks during the period of expectancy than to try to regain them afterward.

Write the Bradfield Regulator Company, Dept. G, Lamar Building, Atlanta, Ga., for their interesting Motherhood Book, and obtain a bottle of Mother's Friend and begin its use at once.

Make Hens Lay More

Eggs will soon be selling at record prices. Poultry raisers giving their flocks proper attention will make extraordinary profits. Government experts are loud in their praise of a wonderful more-egg tonic distributed by the Stock Yards Veterinary Laboratory. This wonderful tonic shortens the moult, hastens pullets to early maturity, tones up the entire flock, stimulates the egg producing organs and makes every hen lay more eggs.

Prof. R. R. Harnas, poultry expert at the New Jersey station, says: "This tonic is an excellent one. We have used it with great success, therefore recommend it very highly." Prof. R. L. Putins, poultry expert at the Kentucky station, writes: "This is a most excellent tonic—one that cannot be improved on." This marvelous more-egg tonic will surely revolutionize the poultry and egg business. It certainly is a great profit producer. No poultry raiser can afford to be without it.

Send one dollar to the Stock Yards Veterinary Laboratory, 2166 Laboratory Bldg., Kansas City, Mo., and you will receive 100 tablets of this wonderful more-egg tonic. If this tonic does not make your hens lay more eggs, your money will be returned. This is guaranteed; is endorsed by a big Kansas City National Bank. Send for free poultry booklet.—[Advertisement.

IGGEST TOURIST SEASON IN OUR HISTORY ON.

uthern California will be Peace Playground for the War-Weary World; Advance Bookings Heavy and First of the Winter Throngs are Already Arriving; Hotels are Fast Filling Up.

Los Angeles and Southern California will have the greatest tourist business of its history this season, ac- ing to the consensus of opinion of railroad, hotel and resort men who keep their fingers closely on the pulse the traveling public.

Certain conditions that prevailed while the war was in progress made it sure that considerable numbers of ple from the East and Middle West would come to California for the winter; but with the history-making nts of the past week there has come a certainty in the minds of these students of the tourist trade that vast bers of people will visit Southern California this season who would have stayed at home had the war con- d.

Already the forerunners of this great throng of visitors are making their presence felt in Los les and the beach cities. The most noticeable contingent is that of the Canadians, now arriv- numbers in Los Angeles, Long Beach and Ocean Park and Santa Monica. They come mostly the great wheat-raising territories of Canada, where the farmers have been getting war-time for their wheat, and feel that they can well afford to escape the rigors of cold weather. Also the Middle West people have been arriving during the past few days—simply an indication increasing volume of travel that is to come, say the students of the tourist movement, as a cooler weather sets in.

These same students of tourist-ism, if one may use the word, declare that never before have so people of the United States been in a financial position to realize their long-held dreams of g to Southern California. They point out that about 80 per cent. of the billions of dollars have been spent by Uncle Sam for war necessities has been distributed in an area of not over r cent. of the United States; but that area is one where the population is the densest; that nds of the heads of average American families have had their wages advanced from a sched- say $30 a week to as high as $100 and $150 a week, and that workers in war industries where have received such wages as will enable them to make the long-desired journey to the d of Sunshine this winter.

With such a condition there are two special factors that will add to for travel to this territory. Last winter a large area of the d the Middle West that suffers from severe cold for a long winter d a shortage of coal that was very serious. It involved much in- ence and considerable suffering. People who are in a position to possibility of the repetition of such a situation will be more than lined to come here.

n the people of the entire United States have been keyed up to a h for the past two years to meet the necessities of contributing to drives, to curtailment of this and that to which they have been ed, and to generally forego the pleasures of travel. Now that declared there is certain to come the great reaction. People will at it is time to "have their fling;" that they are entitled to relax- the strenuosity of the past year, and that they are better able er before to participate in the delights which we Californians have here.

VERTISING CAMPAIGN.

Los Angeles Chamber of has intensified its cam- of advertising, setting forth ctions of Los Angeles and California, and, through m of motion pictures and articles in the newspa- magazines, this territory is even more advertising than iled by the Federal Rail- Administration cutting off ally all railroad advertising. to 1000 pieces of litera- uthern California are sent day at the Los Angeles of Commerce. Besides the attractions of Southern California that are shown at thousands of motion-picture houses in the reels made by studios here, and which all intensify the desire of the beholder to visit such scenes, the Chamber of Commerce has sent out widely circulated motion pictures on the lemon harvest, the great cotton industry of the Imperial Valley, the largest vineyard in the world, harvesting a record walnut crop, activities in the castor bean crop, raised for oil; growing and harvesting the mammoth bean crops that help to feed America and Europe; the largest aster field in the world, and growing flowers by the acre; the biggest tomato crop ever grown, and similar subjects.

It has secured the wide publication in newspapers and magazines of illustrated feature stories on the world's record swordfishing at Catalina Island, the low mortality of infants in Southern California, the world's record orange, Helen Keller christening a ship, beach bathing and other activities in the winter months, and similar subjects.

RAILROADS LIBERATED.

With the coming of peace the railroad situation also is advantageous for the handling of a large passenger traffic. When war activities were fully upon us, the movement of troop trains had precedence. Had the war continued, more than 300,000 men would have had to entrain by the last of December. All this is now unnecessary. Undoubtedly the Federal Railroad Administration will have equipment now released so that it can provide ample passenger accommodations for all who desire to cross the continent to Southern California.

E. E. Calvin, Federal regional director for the railways west of Chicago, who has been in Los Angeles the past week, looks for a great tourist traffic to Los Angeles and other Southern California points this season.

"The people of the United States have been under great stress for a long period," said Mr. Calvin, "and they have felt that it was their duty, as long as war continued, to confine themselves strictly to business. With the coming of peace, there is a natural relaxation, and the people feel that they are entitled to a change. Large numbers of men and women of the East and Middle West find themselves with more money at their command than ever before in their lives, because of the wages they have received under war conditions. They have long desired to come to California, and I believe that a large percentage of them will come this season. Many of them, I believe, will become permanent residents."

John J. Byrne of the Santa Fe, who returned from the East a few days ago, said yesterday that he is confident the winter travel to California will be a factor of big importance this season. He believes that the people generally will relax from the high tension they have been under because of war conditions, and that they will feel, more than ever before, that this is the propitious time to make the trip to this land of many attractions. He also believes that the lessons learned from last winter's fuel shortage will be such as will send hundreds of families to this section for the cold months in the East and Middle West.

Instances of this have been noted during the past week, it is said, where families in the East have shut up their houses with the first appearance of cool weather; the head of the house has remained there, taking quarters at a hotel, while the remainder of the family has come to Los Angeles to spend the winter.

HOTELS FILLING UP.

The Hayward Hotel reports a quite noticeable increase the past few days in the arrival of winter visitors, especially from the Northern States and the Middle West. Manager Fryman believes that the tourist business this season will far exceed that

SEVEN OVERLAND TRAINS DAILY

Railway officials here state that they believe there will be no difficulty in providing all transportation facilities necessary for the tourists who will flock to California this season. They say that with the placing of the three transcontinental lines that reach Los Angeles under Federal control, the rearrangement of the passenger-train service is such as to prove ample, they believe, to handle the traffic, as it will be more evenly divided than formerly. Orders for any increase of train service must come, of course, from Washington, and the local railroad men believe that these will not be issued unless the volume of traffic proves too excessive a burden for schedules now existing.

The Santa Fe has three overland trains per day coming to Los Angeles. They are the Scout, arriving at 8:30 a.m.; the Navajo, arriving at 11 a.m., and the California Limited, at 5:30 p.m. These come directly through from Chicago.

The Salt Lake Route has the Overland Limited, arriving at 4:30 p.m., and the Pacific Limited, at 5:30 p.m. Both of these trains make direct connection with Union Pacific overland trains at Ogden.

The Southern Pacific's train from Chicago, via the Rock Island, and El Paso, arrives at 11 a.m. The Sunset Limited gets here at 7:30 a.m.; the Golden State Limited arrives at 5:30 p.m., and the New Orleans-Los Angeles train is a daily arrival at 9:05 p.m.

RAILROADS PREPARING FOR RUSH.

Relieved of the Tremendous Burden of Troop Movements, Officials Get Ready to Handle a Record Western Traffic; Government Encourages Travel.

BY ROBERT B. ARMSTRONG.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—California has in sight one of the biggest winters for tourists that it has ever enjoyed. Thousands of families will take a rest this winter from months and years of strain and worry due to the war. Florida, Cuba, the Carolinas and Gulf resorts cannot hold the crowds that are planning to winter there, but California is the lure far more than all. From all parts of the Middle West and from the manufacturing centers of Ohio, Pennsylvania and the New England States many are planning to leave before the first of the year for Southern California.

Railroad Administration passenger traffic officials are now in session in conference in Chicago discussing how best to handle this great hegira of war-weary men and women who desire to recuperate in the world's greatest playground. With the low round-trip rates already fixed and in effect, practically every day in the year the cost of the trip to California and return is scarcely greater than it was the year before the war.

TROOP MOVEMENTS OFF.

Orders have been issued that no more mass movements of troops be made until further notice, aside from movements of troops to embarkation points to replace some details returning from the other side there will be little or no use of equipments for military purposes for some months to come. This will release a large amount of Pullman and passenger equipment.

It is more than probable that at the Chicago conference of passenger officials arrangements will be made to add service to California on the same basis that additional train service will be added to take care of the traffic to Florida. That the Railroad Administration is likely to be agreeable to the wish of the public to relax after the strenuous war-making period is borne out by the changed attitude of the officials regarding hotel and other community advertising.

TRAVEL ENCOURAGED.

While the war was on the Railroad Administration was opposed to any community or other advertising that tended to create new business or result in unnecessary travel. That, it is said here, is now reversed, and instead of simple reminders to the old established clients who have habitually gone to California or other resorts, travel-breeding campaigns will now be permitted and encouraged. Inasmuch as the roads must make money and are under the load of greatly-increased wages and operating expenses it would not be surprising to many here if the Railroad Administration itself would do some advertising to stimulate travel until such time as the empty and unused passenger and Pullman equipment is again needed for troop movements. That is not looked for until spring or summer at the earliest. Practically all the revenue from troop train movement will be cut off and some additional travel must be developed to supply this loss.

As the whole railroad question is certain to become a great issue in the coming Congress, those in favor of continued government operation will do all in their power to please the public. While during the war everything was subservient to the movement of freight, and particularly food, munitions and fuel, the greatest peak load in those commodities has passed with the signing of the armistice, and new and better service for the traveler is certain to be substituted for the war-time privations of comfort, speed and de luxe trains. How far this change will go is not known, and no one in the Railroad Administration will talk now for publication. Nevertheless, it is certain that travel to California this winter will need extra trains. If the traffic develops as it now promises it is believed that most of the pre-war accommodations to the West Coast will be restored without the competitive features.

NEW TRAINS LIKELY.

An announcement of the policies of the government in this respect is expected within the next ten days and by the holidays it is expected a number of new trains will be announced on the various roads leading from Chicago to the West and Southwest.

While the policy of the Railroad Administration during the war period has been to route both passengers and freight by the most direct lines to their destinations, it is believed that there will be a modification of this rule, so far as passengers are concerned. It is probable, it is believed here, that a policy of allowing passengers to choose their routes of travel to the Pacific Coast, even though they may not be by the most direct line, will be allowed, and that it is even possible use of one route going and another returning will be permitted as an additional stimulus to immediate increase of travel to the Pacific Coast.

CUT STRING OF COUNTY PURSE.

Liberal Spending Promised by the Supervisors.

Big Projects Kept Back by War to be Started.

Improvement Plans Call for Outlay of Million.

The county's purse strings, which have been drawn tight due to the $1,250,000 deficit and the ban on buildings during the war, are going to be loosened and county money pretty liberally spent in needed improvements. The last month of this year will see unwonted activity according to Supervisor Dodge in whose charge lies the County Hospital, the County Farm, the County Jail and the new Sylmar sanatorium.

The 454 acres at Sylmar, in the San Fernando Valley and the various buildings will cost approximately $240,000. The main hospital building and the two large ward buildings now under roof, will be finished at once. It is proposed to start a service building at a cost of $30,000 and two buildings for the help, including a garage, at a cost of $10,500. The sewer plant, water system and roads will cost $10,000.

CONTRACTS LET.

At the County Hospital the ten residences for the nurses, costing $50,000, will be completed. The contract for the addition to the contagious pavilion has been let for $12,000. An overhead walk from the service building at the hospital to the nurses' homes will be built to cost $7000. The new service building will be finished and furnished and put in operation at a cost of $15,000.

Four cottages will be built at the county farm for the use of employees, who will pay rent for them. The cost will be $6500. A double psychopathic building for the harmless insane and chronic invalids, will be constructed in the near future, Supervisor Dodge says. The cost will be $50,000.

Much road work will be done in 1919. For the care, maintenance and improvement of roads and bridges, the Supervisors will spend next year about $500,000.

NEW COUNTY JAIL.

Another big thing planned and which may come next year is a new County Jail. The present structure is inadequate, unsanitary and too dark. If a new jail is not built, the Supervisors will construct a large addition to the present jail, with the view of accommodating women prisoners. There is plenty of room for a new building, which will have many windows and be constructed on the latest humanitarian model. Plenty of room is an essential in the new jail.

An office building will be one of the features of the new jail. This is designed to relieve the crowded conditions in the Hall of Records. This addition will house the public library, probably the mechanical department and other departments.

There will be great activity in flood-control work. The government will spend $1,080,000 for the new channel in Long Beach which is intended to relieve the harbor industries from the flood waters next spring. The flood-control district will spend $400,000 at Devil's Gate, Pasadena, which will be a great dam to imprison the waters and prevent them ravaging the lowlands bordering the Los Angeles River.

FIRST ACE A CAPTAIN.

Douglas Campbell, Who has Seven Enemy Planes to His Credit, Receives Promotion.

Former First Lieutenant Douglas Campbell of the American aviation service is now a captain, according to word received here yesterday. Capt. Campbell was America's first ace, and has seven enemy planes to his credit.

He received his training at Rockwell Field, North Island, and was then sent to France. He got his first enemy machine on April 15, and on May 31, after a twenty-minute battle, he bagged his fifth plane, making him America's first ace. He returned to this country, and was sent to Rockwell Field, where he was an instructor in advanced aviation work. Later he returned to France. He has been decorated with the Croix de Guerre, the Crossed Palms and four bronze oak leaves besides a "pilot mitrailleur" medal from the French government.

Capt. Campbell's father, Prof. W. W. Campbell, is director of Lick Observatory.

ELEVEN MILLION DOLLARS.

That is Total Value of City Work Made Imminent by Peace.

With the lid off on industrial activities and public works, Los Angeles is already planning to play her part in the vast peace-time activities of future weeks, months and years by making preparations to do $11,000,000 worth of public improvements, which have been hanging fire from one month to two years.

There are about 125 contracting jobs rolled up in this gigantic bundle of engineering plans. Half of them were shelved at the request of the Capital Industries Committee, which refused to approve bond issues for their financing, and most of the others were placed on deferred lists and held back from the committee because there seemed to be faint chance for them to be approved before the end of the war.

There is almost no end to the variety of work that Los Angeles has ahead of her, now that all kinds of construction materials are available. There is street grading and paving, sewer construction, street opening and widening, tunneling, water main construction, power plant jobs, substation building, flood-control work, harbor dredging, dry dock erection, wharf construction and channel widening. The contracts will doubtless task the resources of Southern California material dealers and absorb as much brawn as can be provided.

STREET WORK.

The street department alone has upwards of $3,346,900 worth of deferred work to put through as soon as possible. The harbor department has $3,312,300 worth of necessary improvements hanging fire, and practically all of this work is to be done with State and government appropriations, the money being available right now. The Bureau of Power and Light has $1,235,000 worth of contracts under consideration; there are $1,420,286 worth of street openings and widenings to be done, and $612,500 worth of deferred sewer work is to be done. Eight hundred thousand dollars are available at present for county flood-control work. This will likely be spent for rights of way in the vicinity of Long Beach, but about $2,000,000 worth of additional bonds have been approved by the Capital Issues Committee, and the work can be started as soon as the bonds can be disposed of.

The Capital Issues Committee will now permit almost any kind of improvements to go forward, it being necessary only in certain instances to secure the consent of the State Council of Defense.

City Attorney Stephens expresses the belief that a sudden revival of construction work will not be possible, because the Capital Issues Committee will still exercise for some time a certain amount of restraint where big jobs are concerned. He says, however, that he looks for a gradual easing up of government control, and thinks that there will be no difficulty along the line of selling bonds for public improvements as soon as the United States is through floating Liberty loans and raising Red Cross funds.

AT THE HARBOR.

Harbor Traffic Manager Matson enumerates the following projects, which are slated as improvements, to take place in the harbor district during the next twelve or twenty months perhaps, at a total cost of about $3,312,300:

Construction of an immense dry dock for the Los Angeles Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Company, in west basin, $1,250,000.

Dredging in preparation for the dry dock now under way and will cost about $204,000.

Widening the main channel, $150,000 now available. Rights of way and dredging will cost another $623,000.

Dredging of the west basin will cost perhaps $500,000, with $204,000 now available. This work is under way. The channel will be made thirty feet deep and 200 feet wide, and reaches across the front of the dry dock site.

For east basin dredging, $130,300 is now available to create a deep channel along the south line of the east basin as far as Los Angeles city boundary, to form part of a connection with Long Beach Harbor.

For the diversion of storm waters from the Los Angeles and San Gabriel rivers so they will not carry deposits of silt into the harbor $500,000 is now available. This is government money, but there is an additional appropriation of $250,000 from the State to carry on this same project.

Mr. Matson will ask the Council to place before the voters at the spring primaries a proposition to vote $4,500,000 for harbor improvements. This, he says, would be a carrying out of the pledge made by the people at the polls in 1909 to spend $10,000,000 on harbor improvements. Only $5,500,000 has been expended. Mr. Matson says that the remainder is sorely needed for the construction of bulkheads, coal bunkers, oil tanks, wharves, sheds, roads and streets in order to keep pace with shipping now that the war is over

POWER BUREAU.

President Howard Robertson of the Public Service Commission outlines $1,235,000 worth of construction work for the Bureau of Power and Light which is either under way at the present time or will be started as soon as money for the purpose is available.

The biggest item of this work will be the construction of Power Plant No. 2 in San Francisquito Canyon. The commission recently proposed to the City Council that it be permitted to spend upwards of $600,000 out of its revenue fund this year to begin the $1,250,000 job of building Power Plant No. 2. Several members of the Council expressed themselves in favor of the proposition, and it has the approval of the State Railroad Commission, but there is some doubt of the availability of the money for that work this year.

In preparation for the undertaking, however, the Bureau of Power and Light has just prepared specifications for $100,000 worth of steel pipe which will create the penstock line for the power plant. President Robertson expresses the hope that this pipe can be secured in Southern California.

In connection with this work $100,000 worth of tunneling and surge chamber work is to be done in the near future.

The bureau is just completing at San Pedro a reservoir which is costing about $50,000. The dam at San Fernando, which is in course of construction, will cost $50,000. To complete the task of raising the dam at the Chatsworth reservoir in order to create greater storage capacity $40,000 will be paid for materials and labor.

If the bureau is permitted to undertake such work in the near future it will lay a new line of pipe on Los Feliz road to replace a line which is now in bad condition. This job will call for $225,000 worth of material and labor.

At least $60,000 is now being spent on the Haiwee reservoir, and $10,000 worth of transformers have just been purchased for the San Pedro and local substations.

BIG CITY JOBS ON FOOT.

Following are some of the city's big jobs, held up by the war, which will go ahead now:

Nine street opening and widening projects, as follows:

Opening of Broadway from Tenth to Pico street, to cost $1,200,000.

Opening of Sixteenth street from Pacific to Normandie avenues, to cost $150,000.

Opening of Hollywood boulevard at Vermont avenue, to cost $11,000.

Opening of Vermont avenue between Slauson avenue and Fifty-ninth street, to cost $2500.

MONTEBELLO SCHOOL WINS STAMP PENNANT.

HAS HIGHEST WAR SAVINGS RECORD OF SALES DURING THREE MONTHS.

The Montebello High School has just been awarded the pennant for having sold the largest number of Thrift and War Savings Stamps per pupil of any school in the State. The award was made by the National War Savings Committee, of which G. A. Davidson is the chairman for Southern California.

The award is the outcome of a series of contests arranged by the National Committee with the object of stimulating the sales of these stamps by school pupils. Last May was the first month of the contest, when Montebello's record was an average sale of $51.97 worth of stamps per pupil. The June contest also was won by the Montebello school, with a record per pupil of $61.69. In October Montebello's figure—$80.32 per pupil—was the highest average any school in the State has made during any month.

As a result of its victories for three months, Montebello High School has won red, white and blue streamers, with a strong bid for the permanent possession of the State pennant, which will be decided by the total average of the three past monthly contests and the November drive, which has been extended till December 15.

The Montebello stamp campaign, during the past month, was managed by Principal Mark R. Jacobs and Burt E. Cannon, faculty representative.

FROM PACIFIC NORTHWEST.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

PORTLAND (Or.) Nov. 16.—The Pacific Northwest is sending by train and boat between 300 and 400 tourists for the winter, most of them destined for Southern California cities. Prominent railroad and steamship men give this estimate of figures and the latter go so far as to say there is a decided falling off over previous years of steerage passengers, due entirely to the fact that everybody now has money and they are traveling in style, or at least cabin style.

The big steamers are averaging between 100 and 150 cabin passengers each trip south and more are expected to follow now as the winter draws nearer in this part of the country. The smaller boats average from forty to fifty passengers each way.

Ralph E. Towle, manager of the travel department of the American Railway Express, a Portland visitor now on his first official tour of the Pacific Coast, expects a great exodus to California this year. The travel department of the express company is a new creation and has taken on important responsibilities in the travel of the world in the few months since it was put in operation.

PLANS FOR TRAVELERS.

Through the operation of the 11,000 offices of the company in this country and the more than forty general offices in principal cities of the world, the department makes every provision in detail for the tickets, accommodations on train, ship or resort hotels, arranges for passports and discharges every service for those who tour the United States or go abroad.

Foreign travel is greatly restricted, owing the lack of steamships for South America, the Orient and Europe, and there are such restrictions as prevent issuance of passports except to those who have the best of reasons for traveling.

"The Pacific Northwest Tourist Association and California have done some very effective advertising in the East this year," said Mr. Towle, "and it has been of a character to arouse a lot of interest in this part of the country."

FOR LENGTHY VISITS.

News from Seattle and Tacoma indicates that the travel from those two cities is also heavy, and reports are that it will be considerably heavier now that peace is in sight and the influenza scare is over. The ban on the epidemic is being lifted all through the Pacific Northwest and people feel more free to travel. Thousands had trips contemplated when the "flu" struck the cities or towns and called off all plans. These will now be resumed.

The better classes of travelers are planning protracted stays in the south, as they have found that they cannot plan on European travel for some time to come, due to the matter of bringing back the troops and taking over supplies, particularly food, for the Allies. California and the Pacific Northwest seem destined to have a big winter, from reports received at the various railroad anu steamship centers.

FUNERAL OF ATTORNEY.

Body of Elmer R. McDowell will be Laid to Rest Tomorrow at Forest Lawn.

Elmer R. McDowell, well-known attorney of this city, passed away Friday evening after an illness of five months. The funeral, which will be private, will occur at his late residence, No. 767 Edgemont boulevard, at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning, and the interment will be in Forest Lawn Cemetery.

Those nearest to Mr. McDowell in this city are Mrs. Florence E. Walker, his aunt, with whom he made his home for many years; Mrs. Sarah T. McDowell, Misses Lottie and Leona McDowell, Fred H. McDowell and A. J. Pearce.

Mr. McDowell was greatly beloved for his rare qualities of mind and heart, for his keen appreciation of the good and beautiful, and for his spiritual understanding of life. He had a brave, optimistic spirit and a love of humanity that found expression in his kindness to people without means who were in distress.

PREDICTS TOURIST RUSH.

Returning from a sojourn of many weeks in eastern cities, and especially in New York, D. A. Hamburger, senior member of the firm of D. Hamburger & Sons, predicts a great tide of tourist visitors to Southern California during the present season.

"I talked with many business men of large interests while I was in the East," said Mr. Hamburger, "and almost without exception, they declared their intention of spending either all or a part of the coming winter in Southern California.

The past two years have been so strenuous for business that those who have given it their undivided attention, are weary and feel that they need rest and recreation and California spells that to them, more than does any other place. Hundreds of these men are planning to come here—were doing so, even before the cessation of the war, and now that peace has been declared this number, unquestionably, will be augmented."

During his stay in the East, Mr. Hamburger, together with his three sisters, Mrs. P. L. Nathan of New York, Mrs. J. H. Marx of Los Angeles and Miss Evelyn Hamburger, enjoyed a sojourn of several weeks at French Lick Springs. "Our government has taken over the great hotel at West Baden," said Mr. Hamburger, "and will use it for the recuperation of shell-shocked soldiers. About 3000 such soldiers can be accommodated there, where they may enjoy the benefits of the healing waters."

ALL ROADS LEAD THIS WAY.

of last year. As an indication of this faith, the Hayward will open its 200-room annex on the 1st of January, thus giving it a 400-room house. In this connection it has provided a series of sample rooms for commercial travelers that are said to be the latest word in this line of hotel accommodations.

W. J. Colopy, manager of the Baltimore Hotel, says that there is no doubt that the people of the East and Middle West will come to California this winter on a more extensive scale than ever before. They have had a bitter lesson as to the sufferings and discomforts that come in the trail of fuel shortages, and they will figure, thinks Mr. Colopy, that it will be real economy, from several points of view, to come here for the cold months.

The Hotel Men's Association has appointed a special committee composed of W. J. Colopy, Baltimore Hotel; Vernon Goodwin, Alexandria; Walter Raymond, Hotel Raymond, Pasadena; Charles A. Cook, Hotel Hollywood, and F. W. Paget, Angelus Hotel, to look after special details for forwarding the tourist business here this winter. This committee has been working in conjunction with the board of directors of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce.

The apartment-houses—there are 1600 of 'em in Los Angeles—are also active in their preparations for a great crop of winter tourists. Never before was Los Angeles and Southern California so well prepared to provide for the tourist housing and food. The record of this part of the State in supplying food products for war demands has been a proud one. Its all-the-year-round vegetable farms, its great dairy herds, its acres and acres of poultry ranches, its miles of fruit orchards, provide the menus that will please thousands of tourist palates. And its sunshine and flowers and balmy air are thrown in for good measure. Southern California has her house swept and garnished; she is receiving her first guests, and she's ready for all who'll accept her hospitality.

BIG BUILDING PROJECTS.

Several Million Dollars' Worth of Jobs Wait Word to Go Ahead.

The lifting of the more stringent war restrictions on building operations is certain to result in a great revival along construction lines in the next few months. There will be three stages in the picking up process, according to leading builders. For the next few weeks many projects that have been held up awaiting the time when Uncle Sam would permit intending builders to go ahead with their plans will be announced in rapid order. Then will come a slowing down to current requirements, followed by a constantly increasing activity as business conditions become readjusted and the demand for new buildings and the consequent incentive to builders increases.

Among the important structural enterprises that have been held up for varying lengths of time awaiting the return of more favorable times and the lifting of the government restrictions are a million-dollar theater for the Pantages Circuit, a $200,000 mercantile building for J. E. Carr on Broadway between Sixth and Seventh streets, a large mercantile building for I. W. Hellman on West Seventh street, the new half-million-dollar house of worship for the First Methodist Episcopal Church, the buildings of the projected new academic group for the University of Southern California, a church for the Asbury Methodist Episcopal congregation and a number of public schools for the city of Los Angeles.

Many architects, contractors and builders have closed their offices in the past two or three years, especially since the now lifted war restrictions on construction were put into effect. Some of them are in military service. Numbers of them had projects on their draughting boards before the temporary closing of their desks. Those of the profession who have retained their offices and working organizations through the lean times almost without exception have had enterprises afoot that will now be revived and can go ahead. In the aggregate these "status quo" projects represent structural work running into the millions. That many of them will have to be delayed somewhat pending the readjustment of structural labor conditions and the realignment of the building material situation is anticipated, but enough will go ahead to give Los Angeles an early reminder of the lively days of the past.

Just now the biggest demand for new buildings in Los Angeles proper exists in the residence districts. The over-supply of houses with which Los Angeles found itself five years ago when the financial slump just preceding the war swept over the country has been cleaned up and but little building, comparatively speaking, has been done in the entire half decade and yet the population of the city has gone right on increasing, with the biggest increase of all certain to be witnessed this winter and next spring. Los Angeles would have had something akin to a building boom in the residence section ere this but for the government's restrictions on structural work.

EXPECT NEW RECORD IN TOURIST TRAVEL.

HOTEL MANAGERS OF SOUTHLAND TELL OF RESERVATIONS MADE.

The greatest tourist season of the past in Southern California was the winter period from 1916 to 1917. Hotel and apartment operators estimated the number of visitors from 150,000 to 200,000. They anticipated much of this travel by the number of reservations received prior to the opening of the season itself.

During the last few days, J. D. Minster, publisher of the Pacific Coast Hotel and Apartment Record, a technical journal devoted to these interests, completed a trip to various California coast cities, including Santa Barbara and San Diego. In these places, careful inquiry among the principal operators developed the fact that inquiries are from three to five times as great as they were just prior to the record season.

"In one of the tourist hotels, I actually found reservations just eight times as large this month as they were a year ago at the same date," he said. "At the 'millionaire hotels' of Santa Barbara, the El Mirasol, with its minimum daily rate of $12 per day per person, has completely sold out its accommodations, unless some later developments should cause cancellations. C. P. McAllaster, general manager of the property, has leased seven of the magnificent bungalows to single families.

"El Encanto, a similar resort hotel, now operated by C. C. Loomis and Charles A. Cooke, with reservations limited to seventy-five persons, had not been quite filled. Proprietor E. P. Dunn of the Arlington was very optimistic and stated that were it not for the present epidemic, his hotel would at this early date be doing a record business. Milo M. Potter, proprietor of the Hotel Potter, stated that his reservations are well above the average. Smaller hotels of the community were also recipients of many inquiries.

"The three principal hotel men of San Diego, J. H. Holmes of the U. S. Grant, Sam S. Porter of the San Diego and William Kamps of the Maryland, all had indications of substantial winter travel in actual future rentals. John Hernan, manager of Hotel Del Coronado, declared that with a let-up of travel restrictions, occasioned by influenza, a very large group of easterners will be on their way here.

"I never like to talk about what is coming until it gets here, but indications are for a very substantial season," he said.

For a time, Mr. Fiske, owner of Nichewaug, the fine resort house of Redlands, had thought of keeping closed this season, but the early demand for reservations and the change in general conditions brought about a difference in his intentions and he hurried here from Petersham, Mass., where he operates a large summer hotel.

At Riverside, the Glenwood Mission Inn and the Reynolds, as well as a number of smaller houses are headed by optimistic landlords and managers as a result of the general trend of inquiry and the indications for a good winter tourist season.

FOR CHILDREN OF POOR.

Federation of Parent-Teacher Associations Needs Blankets and Warm Garments.

While the general activities of the Los Angeles Federation of Parent-Teacher Associations closed with the closing of the public schools, the need of many of the city's children and sick parents, who have been supplied through the School Co-operative Committee of this organization, have become so urgent that they have reopened their emergency headquarters at No. 311 New High street, under the supervision of Mrs. J. D. Taylor.

Mrs. Charles F. Gray, president of the federation, and the members of the executive board are working to alleviate the situation in many homes of the public school children. The Publicity Committee, having asked each of the 120 associations to contribute one warm comfort or blanket, new or old, and a few warm garments to the emergency department, has met with generous response, yet the supply remains inadequate, and every Monday the headquarters will be open for any contributions.

Men! This is the sure way

LAST year over three million men were made comfortable by President Suspenders. And they received the utmost in suspender wear and service. Their suspender dollars were put to the best possible use.

Notwithstanding war-time conditions—scarcity of labor, and higher cost of materials—President's national reputation as the ultimate in suspender-quality will be maintained.

Many more than three million men will demand Presidents this year.

Because of the conditions affecting distribution we feel justified in asking our friends, old and new, to take a little extra precaution to see that their Presidents have on the buckle and that the President Suspender Company's Money Back Guarantee Band is on each pair they buy.

The dealer who sells Presidents will be glad to point out to you our guarantee. If your Presidents are not entirely satisfactory, we will repair, replace, or (if requested) refund your money. Most Pacific Coast Dealers sell Presidents.

ASKS TO BE PERSHING.

Herman W. Pfersching Petitions Court to Make His Name Same as General's.

Herman Wishman Pfersching petitioned the court yesterday to change his name to Pershing. This to include the other members of his family, Mary Scull Pfersching, Richard and Myra.

The family name in Germany was Pfoersching. It was changed to Pfersching, and then in this country Anglicized to Pershing. Mr. Pfersching is a direct descendant of Philip Pfoersching, who lived in Alsace-Lorraine about 1749. He is president of the National Engraving Company.

JUSTICE MARRIES TWO MINISTERS.

Usually when ministers of the gospel decided to marry they have the ceremony performed by one of their own profession, but Rev. Thomas R. Simpson of San Bernardino, said to be an ordained minister of the Methodist denomination, and Rev. Amanda J. Thurman of Los Angeles, also of the Methodist faith, appeared before Justice Summerfield yesterday morning and stated that they wished to be "joined" by the justice who gained the most votes at the last election.

"I believe it will be lucky," said the bride.

"It isn't luck in married life," responded her new helpmeet. "It's faith that makes the ship of matrimony sail on even keel."

RUB 'EM OUT. The philosopher at our elbow reminds us that everybody makes mistakes. Therefore they make lead pencils with rubber tips.

CALL OF THE WILD. So far as known woman is the only wild animal that wears furs in the summer and chiffon in the winter. Maybe that's what makes them so wild.

WONDERS OF SCIENCE. Two more chemical triumphs are recorded. It was discovered some time ago that glycerine could be made from sugar and now a scientist finds that he can produce sugar from glycerine. Thank God the world has been made safe for democracy.

NOT ON INVITATION! What has become of the old-fashioned real estate man who used to bring an extra-large apple, pumpkin or ear of corn into the editorial room of his favorite newspaper and expect, by the exhibition, to get $100 worth of free advertising? Have the farms all been cut up into city lots—or is the realty man merely paying for his "ads"?

HOME, SWEET HOME. The Kaiser has some sixty palaces or estates, but there is no welcome on the door mat of any of them for him. With a whole raft of homes he has none to go to nor can he find an honest welcome in any corner of the earth. Remembrance of days of prosperity is a frail support in hours of adversity. But he can still go to hell.

THEY'RE COMING BACK! Chairman Hurley of the United States Shipping Board has gone to Europe to arrange for the return home of a large portion of the American Expeditionary Forces. Small consolation will this news prove to the slackers who are now either serving prison terms or suffering social ostracism for their refusal to take up arms in liberty's cause. The cowards will be made to feel like thirty cents, Mex. "when Johnny comes marching home."

A WARNING TO REDS. Another excellent decision has been made by the people of Los Angeles. There are to be no red flags displayed in this city. "If there is not sufficient legislation now on the city's statute books to prohibit such displays an ordinance will be passed to cover the matter," declares Councilman Olsen. There is no great danger of anarchistic demonstrations in peaceful Los Angeles, Council or no Council, but "'Tis good to have the law on our side."

AS IT SHOULD BE. Although the "work-or-fight" order has been suspended by the government, Los Angeles officers recently arrested as vagrants two men who deserted their work in the Ventura bean fields in order to come to this city and live an idle life. With millions of starving people yet to feed things should be made just as hard for the idler now as in war time. Regardless of government orders, Los Angeles never did and never will have any use for the I-Won't-Worker.

TROUBLE STIRRERS. One thing that has come out of the war is that Bolshevism is as bad as autocracy. Misled intellectuals and self-appointed individuals who find it more profitable to stir up trouble than to work are going to have hard sledding in this country. The little red schoolhouse on the hill and an unshackled press have been getting in their work and the knowledge therefrom has created a common sense that is dangerous to ignorance and destructiveness masking under the garb of freedom.

THE BIRTH OF THOUGHT. Everyone is doing some thinking now. This has been a bitter struggle for the nations of the world, but the percentage of people taking note of themselves and their relationship to life has increased measurably.

There is nothing more encouraging for the progress of civilization than that thought is now throbbing in the great mass of people. There has been a searchlight playing upon the world illuminating mankind.

Were we living badly in 1913? Were we losing what wisdom we had gathered? Were unworthy, selfish people; people of chicanery, getting the upperhand? Had prosperity and a little knowledge made us thoughtless of life and duty? There has been a great change since then. A sense of responsibility sweeping upon more and more of us. We are feeling that we must have been offending a great law and that we had to be purged.

But what a sacrifice! Millions of wonderful men and women on the pyre. By this sacrifice we have had a great life upward towards being happier people. It has left us the legacy of unselfish thinking; if we can only hold it!

ENTER THE STATESMAN.

EXIT the soldier; enter the statesman. The swords are back in their scabbards, the throats of the guns are silent. The soldier returns to the walks of peace. He passes the statesman on the way—the statesman with his portfolios and his tomes of international laws.

The soldier has done his work well. He fought heroically. He suffered and endured. He buried his dead. He won the war.

And now the question arises: Will the statesman do his work—the work that awaits his hands—as well as the soldier did the work that was cut out for him?

It is a question as grave as was the other when the war began. Indeed, it is even a graver question, because the work of the soldier was to win the particular war in which he was engaged. The work of the statesman now is to end war forever.

That's it—to end war forever, no matter what other questions may arise. The statesmen, who are now soon to gather at the peace table of the world, have a responsibility on their shoulders so far greater than the responsibilities ever borne by statesmen before that there is no comparison.

This is also exactly what they are scheduled to do, but will they do it? Or will they, instead, involve the parleys and the proceedings of the conference in squabbles, as it has been the custom of peace conferences to do, immemorially?

There is the possibility that the peace table may fail in the big task before it while doing many things for the world's future good. But, there is a way to head off the possible misfortune.

That way is for the peoples of the democracies of the world, whose representatives the dictators at this peace table will be, to issue their orders to the plenipotentiaries; to say to them that they must, first and foremost, make a peace that will be lasting; that they must take full advanage of this one opportunity afforded in all the ages, to put an end to war forever.

II.

THAT the fear of the failure of the peace conference to accomplish the one great blessing that no peace table ever had a chance to accomplish before is not without foundation, we have but to quote the words of Lloyd George, uttered a few days ago.

"Vigorous attempts will be made to hector and bully the government," said the British Premier, "in an endeavor to make them part from the strict principles of right and to satisfy some base, sordid and squalid ideas of vengeance and of avarice."

And he added this tremendous sentence to his speech: "Are we to lapse into the old national rivalries, animosities and competitive armaments, or are we to indicate the reign on earth of the Prince of Peace?"

No more satisfying and comforting utterance than this could be asked for, and it is all the more assuring since it comes from one of the men who will have as much to say as any other when the peace conference meets.

Clemenceau, Lloyd George and Woodrow Wilson—these are the men in whose hands are mainly now the destinies of the world. With the collapse of Germany, fate transferred its string and scissors from the soldier to the statesman.

But these three men are not kings or czars or kaisers. They are merely the servants and the spokesmen of the free peoples of the nations they represent. So, it is not so much what they are, themselves, as it is what the people are who are behind them.

These three men are in full accord. Not one of them desires vengeance; not one of them desires to see the world lapse into ancient animosities and squalid rivalries; each one would welcome the reign of the Prince of Peace on earth.

But, have they the peoples of their nations solidly back of them in these sentiments? Did Lloyd George speak not alone of a class in England who differ with his ideals, or did he speak of a class of the same kidney in France and America, as well?

III.

THERE must be no Junkers at this peace table, which is now to be set up. And the Junkers, who will not sit at the peace table, must be barred from a voice in the settlements that are to be made.

A Junker wants spoils, and he favors wars as the surest means of providing those spoils. The Junker is a grabber; he advocates force or any other means that will add to the territory of the nation of which he is a part, whether such aggrandizement is just or unjust.

And, it would appear from what Lloyd George says, that all the Junkers are not in Germany.

Maybe there are Junkers right here in America, but we trust that this is not the case. We think we are free of them, but we are not so certain that there is not a class in this country that fails to grasp the profound vision of this great hour.

If there be a man in all America today who thinks still that wars are a necessity, let him hold himself in patience until the boys who went "over there" and who endured the hell of Chateau Thierry and the Marne, come home.

Let him ask them whether they think wars are necessary and whether they are in favor of or against the abolition of wars forever.

Wars were never necessary. It was simply impossible to prevent them, that's all.

But, it is not impossible to prevent them in the future. The opportunity to do so has come at last, after all the ignorance and squalid hatreds engendered by the mistakes and misunderstandings of the past.

Perhaps we shall never see the time when the heart of the individual man will be free of hatreds and animosities. That no man shall hate another man because of his race or religion or politics or his good fortune, is perhaps too much to expect.

But, nations are bigger than individuals, and more important. And they can do what the individual may not be expected to do. They can put an end to animosities between one nation and another, and now is the acceptable time.

Before the world had the experiences of this war, the contentions here put forth were laughed at as the moon-gazings of idealists. Now an innumerable company of "practical" people have joined the idealists' ranks.

There is no man, high or low, rich or poor, strong or weak, who has escaped the agony and the sorrow of the war which has just now ended. In the wide sweep of its sufferings and cruelties it gathered the universe in its withering arms.

And who shall say that in this God's purpose is not plain? Who shall say now that "an occasional war is advisable and good for the world?"

Those who said it before were those who had not tasted the bitter fruits of war. Now, all have tasted those fruits. Wherefore, the task of the statesman should be, in a way, easy.

IV.

THERE will be many problems to be solved at the peace table, and some of them will be extremely delicate, but they will all lead up to the main problem—a universal peace that will be lasting.

The militaristic nations of yesterday will have nothing to say in these settlements. The old Germany is a thing of the past. Austria-Hungary, Turkey and Bulgaria are also things of the past. Democracies have already risen from the ashes of those once proud autocracies.

The peace-table decisions will be altogether in the hands of the conquerors, and these are America, Great Britain and France. The fate of the world is now in the hands of the statesmen of these nations.

There have been enmities between them in the past—enmities between France and America, even. They have all warred upon one another.

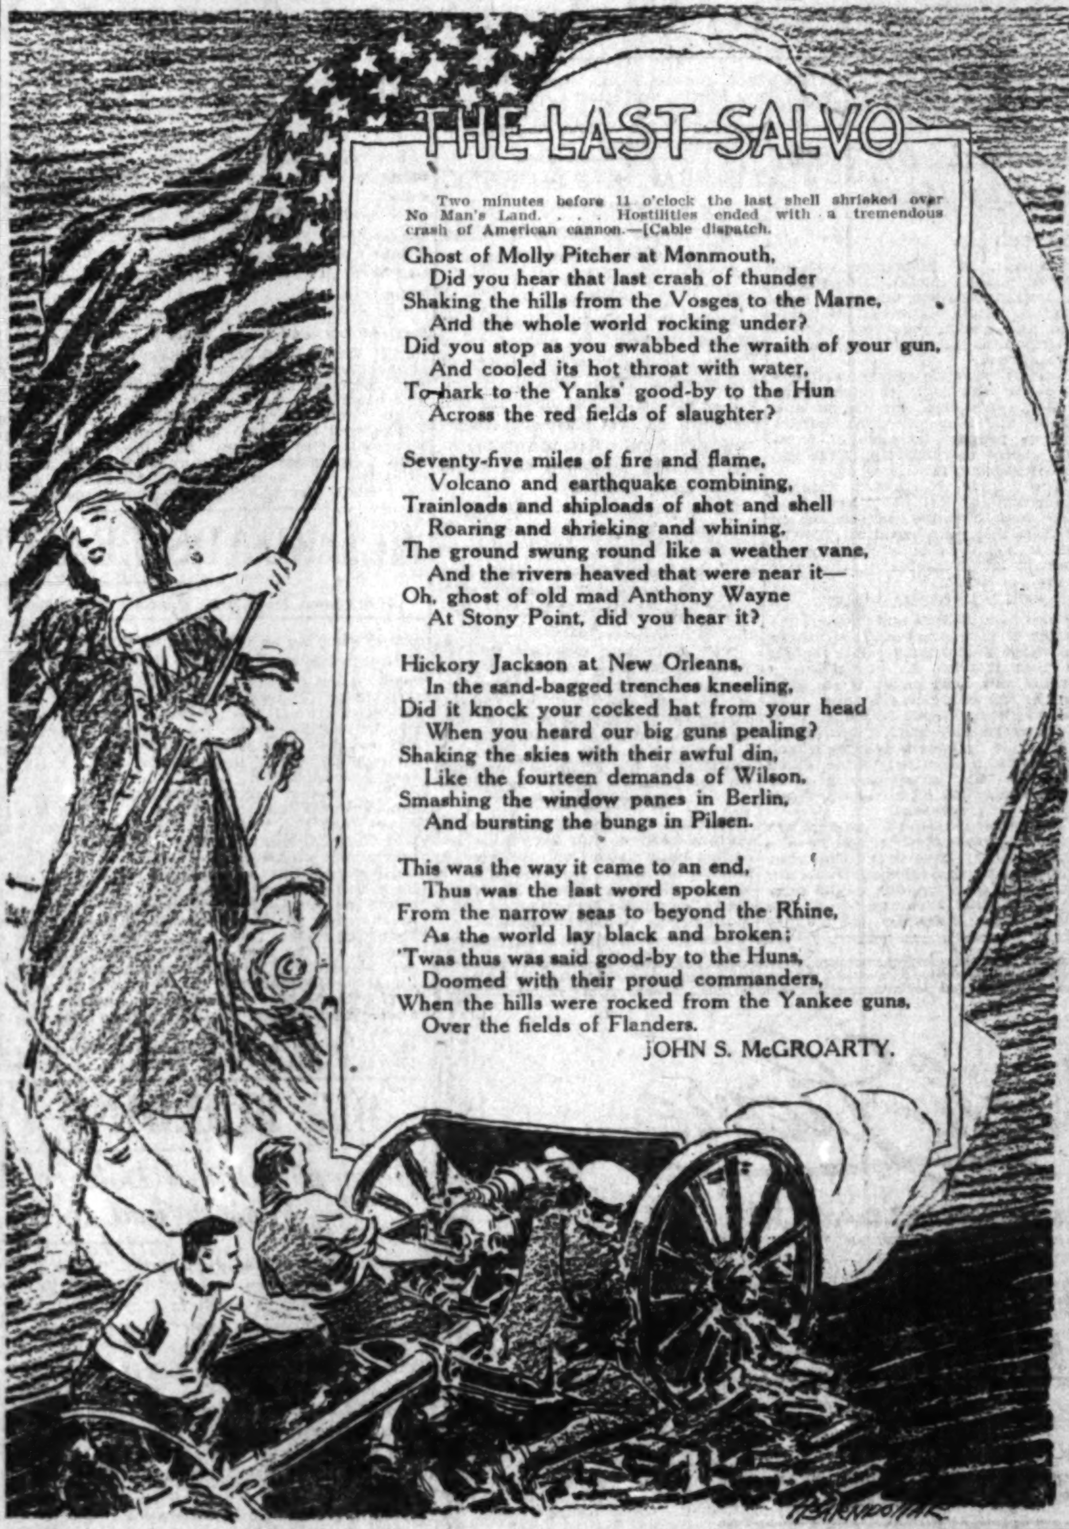
But, during the past four years, through a common cause and common sufferings and the blood that they spilled in common, and their sons that went down to death in common graves together, they have been united in a bond that is stronger and holier than any welded by the blood of men before.

United, they have swept autocracy from the face of the earth. They have freed countless millions from subjection. They have set the world again in the sun.

Shall they now forget all this and sit down to quarrel between themselves at a peace table? Shall they rise from that table and leave the sword still unbroken; the helpless peoples still helpless?

If so, then a million graves in France are filled with British dead in vain; Serbia, Greece, Italy, France, America and all have poured out blood and treasure for naught.

And America, whose honored dead—the flower of all the world—sleep today between the Vosges and the Marne and in Flanders fields, will she rise from the peace table and leave the world again a prey to war?



THE LAST SALVO

Two minutes before 11 o'clock the last shell shrieked over No Man's Land. . . . Hostilities ended with a tremendous crash of American cannon.—[Cable dispatch.

Ghost of Molly Pitcher at Monmouth,
  Did you hear that last crash of thunder
Shaking the hills from the Vosges to the Marne,
  And the whole world rocking under?
Did you stop as you swabbed the wraith of your gun,
  And cooled its hot throat with water,
To hark to the Yanks' good-by to the Hun
  Across the red fields of slaughter?

Seventy-five miles of fire and flame,
  Volcano and earthquake combining,
Trainloads and shiploads of shot and shell
  Roaring and shrieking and whining.
The ground swung round like a weather vane,
  And the rivers heaved that were near it—
Oh, ghost of old mad Anthony Wayne
  At Stony Point, did you hear it?

Hickory Jackson at New Orleans,
  In the sand-bagged trenches kneeling,
Did it knock your cocked hat from your head
  When you heard our big guns pealing?
Shaking the skies with their awful din,
  Like the fourteen demands of Wilson,
Smashing the window panes in Berlin,
  And bursting the bungs in Pilsen.

This was the way it came to an end,
  Thus was the last word spoken
From the narrow seas to beyond the Rhine,
  As the world lay black and broken;
'Twas thus was said good-by to the Huns,
  Doomed with their proud commanders,
When the hills were rocked from the Yankee guns,
  Over the fields of Flanders.

JOHN S. McGROARTY.

THE IDLERS. The present and all that it holds belongs to the worker. Man power is at a greater premium than ever before. During the war there has been a complete destruction of more than $190,000,000,000 of the world's wealth. The greater portion of that wealth consisted in the accumulated products of labor. As the end of the war approaches, the labor and industry of each country must set itself to work to replace the loss. Federal paternalism must be abolished as rapidly as military exigencies will permit. Neither labor nor industry can thrive under the economic vassalage which paternalism establishes. Autocracy, pursued to its logical conclusion, destroys itself. But labor and industry are not to be turned free to idleness. They must be freed in order that they can work to a greater advantage; then organized government and organized public opinion must unite to force them to keep working.

There is no place in the reconstruction era for an idle class, neither for the idle rich nor the idle poor. Idleness is a crime against society. Every idle man represents a unit of economic waste. The greatest good of the greatest number demands that each individual shall produce something with his time. The loafer in the streets and parks, whether he be clothed in tweeds or rags, is a public offender. Society must cease to distinguish the idler who lives on public charity and private thefts from the idler who is living on the accumulated labor of other persons and generations.

Because a man is wealthy is no reason that he shall be permitted to evade the responsibility of taking part in the reconstruction of the world. Neither shall a man be permitted to loaf because he is willing to live the life of a coyote.

Bolshevism is the greatest menace of the reconstruction period, and Bolshevism is a disease propagated by idleness and filth. Social sanitation is the best known preventive, and that can be secured only through labor. The I.W.W. movement never secures a foothold in a community of workers. Sabotage and the torch are I.W.W. tools; and no civilization can ever be constructed with such implements. The losses of the war cannot be retrieved by destroying more. During the intense war period the freedom of the nations of the earth was preserved solely by reason of the accumulated capital in the Allied countries. If there had been no accumulation of wealth in this country force without stint or limit never could have been applied. The conscription of wealth by the government did not add half as much to the Federal war chest as the voluntary subscriptions made by men of wealth in the country, and the greatest industrial service rendered to the government was that of the dollar-a-year volunteers.

Labor was equally responsive. The workers of the nation proved their patriotism by doubling and quadrupling the production in many of the essential war industries.

But there are still slackers both in tweeds and in rags.

There is work for every able-bodied man in the world to do. In a very short time there will be more work to do than there are workers to do it.

It will be for organized society to see that every man physically and mentally able to work is right up in the collar pulling with every ounce of his strength.

SCIENTIFIC PACKING IN THE ARMY.

BY FREDERIC J. HASKIN.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

WASHINGTON (D. C.) Nov. 14.—For years Americans have had the undesired distinction of being bad packers. Fragile American fabrics have been sent about the world in equally fragile American cardboard boxes; American machinery has been permitted to travel absolutely unprotected; American cotton has been dispatched across the Atlantic with no greater safeguard than American luck. The consistent carelessness of American manufacturers in the matter of packing has been at once the despair of our Department of Commerce and the delight of our commercial competitors.

But the war has rescued American manufacturers from their own bad habits. For the first time the government has ceased scolding and has shown them how. Today Americans enjoy the distinction of being the most expert packers in the world—a distinction that has been won for us during the past year by that greatest of American business enterprises, the Quartermasters' Corps of the Army. And it is willing to tell other American business organizations how to pack for export.

As soon as the United States entered the war the responsibility of supplying the Allies with food and munitions was immediately transferred to the government. The distribution of shipping space was under its control. And it was the desperate need for making every inch of that space carry the greatest possible amount of supplies which caused a revolution in packing methods.

Up to that time American concerns had packed their goods by the traditional American method. They had no particular specifications. They used whatever containers were at hand, and sometimes when none were obtainable the supplies were sent across without any adequate protection. This accounted for the numerous complaints that were received during the first part of the war. One heard from time to time of American shipments of spoiled food on the other side; of American munitions that did not work and of American machinery that arrived broken and rusty.

The standard specifications for canned-food boxes, for example, call for "boxes well manufactured from lumber which is sound (free from decay or dote) and well seasoned. Boxes when stored after mailing should not be placed in a heated room. Lumber must be free from knot holes, loose or rotten knots greater than one inch in diameter. No knots will be permitted which will interfere with the proper nailing of the box." The variety of woods which may be used in the manufacture of these boxes is also given, and the number of nails to be used in each. Similar specifications are provided for everything from packing cases for high-power guns to those for cold storage eggs.

These specifications, as has been said, are given to the factories. Copies are also furnished the quartermaster of every army depot, who is made responsible for the inspection and shipment of the supplies.

If a packing case comes in with only five nails where the army specifications call for eleven the manufacturer is promptly reminded of the terms of his contract. The matter of nails may seem a small one, but experience has shown that it is extremely important. Without a certain number of nails for a certain amount of weight a box is apt to fall apart under rough treatment and a valuable item of cargo be lost.

Under the regime of the packing department of the Quartermaster's Corps of the army packing has been made a science. It has been so carefully worked out that thousands of tons of space have been saved and the business of war expedited by weeks if not months. For example, the packing department soon discovered that it was a waste of time to box clothing. All army clothing is now subjected to heavy pressure in a hydraulic press, placed in bales of certain specified sizes, wrapped in burlap and a waterproof covering and sent across in 60 per cent. less space than it formerly took. Moreover, the burlap covering has a special purpose. Formerly, large bundles of burlap occupied a great deal of space on board ship, because this material is in great demand for making sandbags. Now the burlap is cut into the sandbag size in this country and used as the wrapping for other cargoes. On the other side these individual burlap wrappers are collected, fed into a machine and come out sandbags.

Another improvement instituted by the packing department is in the shipment of motor cars and trucks. A motor truck is no longer shipped in its whole state. It is taken apart, its various pieces packed in the smallest possible space and crated. A crate containing one motor truck takes up only 268 cubic feet of shipping space, whereas by the former method it occupied about 1000 cubic feet of space. Machinery is taken apart and packed in the same way, with a similar proportion of saving. A ship's ton is forty cubic feet; the freight rate to Europe per ton is $150 to $200. Thus the saving in money alone is considerable.

The work that the packing department of the army has done to aid the shipment of supplies for war is of lasting benefit. It has shown Europe that Americans can pack. It has shown the American manufacturer that the question of packing is one that is well worth studying. Furthermore, the Quartermasters' Corps stands ready to co-operate with manufacturers by supplying them with the results of many costly experiments that have been conducted in the army. Capt. H. R. Moody, who is in charge of the Washington headquarters of the packing division, has already had several inquiries from manufacturers concerning the packing of their products and he is anxious to receive more.

Doubling Up on Him.

"Hey! Come down, there—yer pinched! Who d'ye think you are, anyhow? Barney Oldfield?"

"No, sir," replied the frightened motorist, "but I was——"

"Yes, I know. You was makin' fifty-two miles an hour. What d'ye mean?"

"Well, sir, I was arrested back there about two miles by that officer just going over the hill on that motorcycle. He said 'Follow me, and hurry up,' and that's what I was doing when you got me."—[Boston Transcript.

Your boy is coming—

Secretary McAdoo has asked the heads of the various departments at Washington to prune down their estimates from the figures that were supposed to be necessary if the war had not come to such a sudden end. Retrenchment ought to be the order of the day.

President Wilson has replied to the local Democratic delegation made up mostly of office-holders congratulating him upon his dominating influence in the war. As we understand the communication the President admits that he was the whole works.

There will be a number of great stories coming out of the war showing the magnificent work of the American soldier. And among the best will be the narrative of how they waded waist-high across the River Aisne and then plunged knee-deep in mud to take Grandpre. Did they take it? They did.

At the recent election the official vote in Ohio shows that but one of the Democratic candidates on the State ticket was elected, Gov. James Cox. His opponent suffered from an attack on his patriotism in the war. Frank B. Willis ought to have made his fight in the Ninth California Congressional District—it would have been a boost there.

BIG DEMAND FOR WORKERS HERE.

Federal Employment Service Reports Many Orders.

High Salaries Offered for Good Stenographers.

Community Labor Board is New Departure.

The month of October, which was expected to be dull from the employers' standpoint, proved to be the [illegible]. The United States employment service in Los Angeles found work for 7527 persons during that month, as compared with 6483 for the corresponding month a year ago. This service, since its organization July 1 of this year, has been [illegible] upon for 38,274 employees, directed 38,165 candidates and [illegible] in the actual placing at [illegible] of 37,783 of them.

In spite of the fact that many of the service's best customers in Southern California have been quarantined for the last several weeks on account of influenza, the service has directed large numbers outside Los Angeles city.

At present, in the men's industrial division there are city orders for [illegible] casket coverers, printers, [illegible] and nickel polishers, plumbers, engineers, auto mechanics, mattress makers and janitors. From [illegible] outside the city there are [illegible] for linemen, battery men, painters, coopers, ranch blacksmiths, turbine engineers, bridge carpenters, machinists, section foremen.

This service also has orders for [illegible] laborers at $3.60 for nine [illegible] work, and there are also orders for fifty laborers at $4.16 for eight [illegible] work in the shipyards at San Pedro.

In the women's household and industrial division there has been a [illegible] demand for help of all kinds, [illegible] an oversupply of applicants [illegible] to go outside of a single [illegible] limit. That division now has orders for seamstresses, cooks, [illegible] cooks, housemaids, domestics [illegible] kinds, factory work, janitresses, [illegible] maids for apartment-houses. In the commercial division they have present orders for several [illegible] machine operators at $2.75; stenographers, from $90 to $135 a month; book-keepers, $65 to $85; comptometer operators, at $65; dictaphone operators, at $80; five lens [illegible], at $20 a week; several surveyors, at $30 a week; stock [illegible] at $60 to $75 per month; [illegible] salespeople, at $85; several [illegible] and grocery clerks, at $70. We also have orders for several [illegible] operators, shipping clerks, [illegible] and office boys ranging [illegible] a week to $75 a month.

The local Federal Community Labor Board, which commenced its [illegible] about ten days ago, has [illegible] separated hundreds of men [illegible] nonessential work and has placed them in essential work, many [illegible] being transferred to the [illegible] in the San Francisco Bay [illegible].

THEATERS ALL FIXED UP.

During "Flu" Embargo They Were Redecorated, Improved Sanitation.

BY GRACE KINGSLEY.

You won't know those familiar places, the theaters and picture houses, when you enter them again!

A spring housecleaning in New England is an orgy of dirt compared to the drastic cleansing which the city's theaters have undergone during the space of time when King Flu has been reigning on the Rialto and the theaters were merely dark holes in the wall.

And as for decorations, every theater owner has apparently been doing nothing but cudgel his brains and read The Theater Beautiful Magazine. Besides which, every known device suitable for a theater which could add to the comfort and convenience of patrons, has been installed.

At the Orpheum, Col. Bray, the local manager, reports everything clean as a goldfish. Draperies and carpets have been cleansed, and in addition a new lighting system has been introduced on the stage which promises to be a thing of beauty and a joy forever.

As you enter Grauman's not only will your artistic soul be made happy, but you may rest easy regarding your health. Mr. Grauman has introduced a new $7000 ventilating and sanitary system, which will be as popular with germs as a cat with a wounded canary. A new lighting system has been installed, which Sid Grauman says will make you gasp with admiration, and a number of oil paintings and other objects d'art now garnish staircases and restrooms.

A beautifully-decorated stage will greet the patrons of Tally's Broadway, where two large paintings will be on view flanking the screen. The stage itself has been cut back, and new seats installed. A thorough cleansing, fumigation and airing have been given his house every day, says Mr. Tally, to such extent that germs would have no more use for his house than a mermaid would have for a buttonhook. The lobby has been completely redecorated.

At Quinn's Rialto not only will your eyes be gladdened by the sight of fresh draperies and new lighting effects, but your ears will be soothed by music of a large symphony orchestra. A new ventilating system, which promises to give you air like that of the mountains for purity, has been installed.

William H. Clune has been busy during the past five weeks, making his two theaters, the great Auditorium and his Broadway theater, more healthful and more attractive than ever. At the Auditorium, the stage has been redecorated, the interior has been entirely repainted, draperies and carpets have been cleaned, while an aesthetic impulse seized Mr. Clune when it came to his Broadway theater, so that, when you enter, your sight will be gladdened by viewing pink and white decorations which will be seen under a softly harmonizing light.

At the Kinema, a new drop-curtain is the special delight of Manager Kehrlein's heart. This is something entirely unique, being a transparent creation which yet shows like tapestry under the lights, and is capable of taking on a score of beautiful effects. The stage has been so enlarged that a company of players could be accommodated. The Red Cross Tea Room will be busier and more beautiful than ever, certain new furnishings having been added. An entire new lighting system has been installed throughout the house, and the theater has been cleaned and fumigated throughout, and the ventilating system improved upon.

At the Hippodrome, Manager Fountain says his house smells like a clean baby, so thoroughly has it been fumigated and renovated. It has, in fact, been cleaned from basement to toploft rigging, and besides has been newly decorated throughout with new lighting system added.

The Mason has been thoroughly cleaned, carpets and curtains renovated, and everything made shipshape for the opening of the house.

New carpets and draperies, installed just before the theaters closed, will please the eyes of Morosco patrons, but even though new, these have been cleaned and the house aired several times preparatory to opening, while the heating and ventilating system has been gone over and pronounced in perfect condition.

Both Pantages and Burbank theaters have been refitted with new carpets and draperies, and Pantages has been repainted from garret to cellar.

As the Majestic is shortly to open as a vaudeville house, under the management of Ackerman and Harris, that house is undergoing a thorough renovation and cleaning.

The Alhambra has been repainted with cream-color decorations, and a new lighting system has been installed. Miller's Theater, the name of which, by the way, has been changed to the Garden Theater, has been fitted up with new carpets and thoroughly cleaned. Its heating and ventilating system, being one of the best in the city, needed no renewal.

Purity will be the symbol at the Symphony, where there will be white ceilings, white walls, white floors. The lighting system has been changed so as to harmonize with the decorations, and a brand new heating and ventilating system has been installed.

The Superba did not find it necessary to do more than a general housecleaning, but this was very thorough, with a repainting, for good measure, of the ceiling of the marquise which projects over the sidewalk.

The Victory Theater was entirely cleaned and renovated just before the closing order came; yet, in spite of this, the manager has seen to it that every part of the house was thoroughly gone over.

At the Garrick a new ventilating system has been introduced, and the theater thoroughly cleaned.

The Palace has installed a brand new lighting system, and has also not only given the house an entire cleansing in every nook and corner, but has done some artistic work in redecorating the interior of the theater.

NO LET-UP IN SHIP WORK.

Harbor Yards will Continue to Hum and Housing Problem be Solved.

[illegible] from Edward N. Hurley, chairman of the United States Shipping Board, received by the San Pedro Chamber of Commerce, that there is to be no relaxation in the building of ships because of the end of the war, aroused the enthusiasm [illegible] of those interested in solving the housing problem at the harbor.

When the news was flashed from [illegible] that the war had come to an end, there was for a few days a feeling of uncertainty at the harbor, [illegible] some of the non-resident owners of real estate upon which improvements are needed might [illegible] that the end of the war would [illegible] the activity there.

There is no lack of confidence among the harbor residents, but the demand for new houses and store buildings is so great that outside capital is needed to make the necessary improvements. Not only has shipbuilding increased the demand for houses, but other elements of growth at the harbor, that [illegible] long before the war began, [illegible] it necessary for more houses [illegible]. The fishing industry has [illegible] astonishing proportions. [illegible] years ago when it first [illegible] to grow, San Pedro and Long Beach began to face housing problems that are still far from solution, in spite of the fact that no communities in the Southwest [illegible] shown such rapid growth as [illegible].

SHORT OF DEMAND.

Although houses have been going up at the rate of about 100 a month in San Pedro and at about the same rate in Long Beach, ever since the first of the year, in neither community has the supply been anywhere near meeting the demand. The result is that about 7000 shipyard workers are compelled to ride daily from Los Angeles and other outlying places to the shipyards at an enormous expense of time. A [illegible] of shipyard workers live at Santa Monica and ride to and from their work each day. This means [illegible] travel nearly 2500 miles [illegible] nearly 100 working [illegible] or twelve days each month.

[illegible] and business men at the harbor have felt that even if the shipyards were closed down entirely they would need hundreds of houses to take care of the men who handle the cargoes on the ships that are built, but Mr. Hurley's assurance will, it is believed, have a good effect upon non-resident capitalists who are needed to finance the houses and are not familiar with local conditions. [illegible] canneries, the garrison at Fort MacArthur, the Submarine base, to say nothing of numerous other enterprises that have added to the permanency of a large population at the harbor, have all contributed to the housing problem which cannot be solved until hundreds of homes are added to those [illegible].

MAKES NEW ERA.

[illegible] as the ships are concerned, [illegible], whether the building programme comes up heads or tails, shipbuilding will stop when the demand for tonnage is filled. When the demand for tonnage is filled, the ships will come back with their holds filled with freight to be discharged. This means a revival of trade that will mark the beginning of a new era for the harbor.

That the revival of shipping will be gradual and correspond to a gradual decrease in shipbuilding is the belief in shipping circles. Whether or not the shipping revival begins at once is a question, but Mr. Hurley has given assurance that there is to be no slowing down of the shipbuilding programme for some time to come. Upon this point he clearly states:

"We are only now beginning our progress of ship construction. The removal of the emergency cannot and will not bring an end to the world's need for ships, nor prevent us from carrying out our programme to a successful conclusion. We shall continue to use all the facilities of shipbuilding that business economy will permit.

"I mean by that, that all shipbuilders who live up to the expectations placed in them by the government will be expected to continue to build ships. They shall be encouraged to do so. There will be plenty of work for every efficient yard.

TO SUPPLY MATERIAL.

"On the other hand, the government expects to continue to supply the material and direct the vast energies now devoted to shipbuilding. The end of the war will mean only the removal of the menace which confronted the world's shipping; it will not and cannot mean the immediate elimination of the need for ships.

"To take advantage of this established industry and restore to the world its lost tonnage is a natural and business-like procedure. It offers America the chance now to save humanity by putting ships on the high seas to carry materials for reconstruction, and to be of service to our own people and to our Allies.

"So, I can say with frankness that our shipyards will be kept going to their capacity, and they must not let up. The inefficient plants, which have been permitted to operate because of the war emergency and the immediate need of ships, will, as a matter of business expediency, drop out when the emergency is removed, but efficient yards will be encouraged and supported because we can depend upon them to carry out their promises and produce ships economically. In this way we will be able to compete in the markets of the world with our ships on a price-per-ton basis, as compared with the ships of other countries."

It Gained.

Mess sergeants are just the same, whether they're in Kansas City or Chateau Thierry, France—always suspicious that the whole army is trying to edge in on their company mess.

The beans ran low—which will indicate the gravity of the situation—in a company that was having its first hot meal out of the lines.

"Three hundred and seventeen men I've fed," finally exploded the mess sergeant. "Three hundred and seventeen! And when we went into line we were only 250 strong. You'd think a company would lose when it's fighting, but it don't. It gains."—[Stars and Stripes, France.

City's Pastors in Home Sermons Call Upon the People

With but few exceptions the city's pastors took for their Times "home-sermonette" themes for today the imminence of peace and the problems which will arise for the church out of the readjustment of the world's affairs. Some of their thoughts on the subject follow:

DR. LEWIS THURBER GUILD.
HOBART BLVD. METHODIST.

Lewis Thurber Guild

"The twilight of the kings has come. Democracy has won its coronation. After a little, when the peoples freed from imperialism have sobered up, the world will have only government by the people, of the people and for the people.

"Just now the strong wine of liberty has gone to their heads. The cruelties practiced for ages upon the people at the bottom have been so enmeshed in their souls that they know no better way than that of the massacre and the torch, a la Bolshevik; but the Allied nations will bring order and law back; gradually institutions will be established, and the day dreamed of by the fathers of our republic will have arrived.

"Democracy is in its nature intensely missionary. Its evangel must be proclaimed on every side and in the end it is impossible that despotism should survive. Autocracy is an anachronism, and ony remaining vestiges of it are but survivals of a discarded past.

"The fundamental of democracy is the soundness and reliability of human nature. That interpretation of Christianity which predicated that humanity was hopelessly depraved was congenial to autocracy; but democracy believes that the heart of the race is sound, and risks everything upon its inherent goodness. God brings progress through the improvability of men and women, and he plays no favorites. All are alike equals before him; all are equally dear to Him; He is the Father of all spirits."

HIGHLAND PARK CHURCH.

"The view that has obtained for so long a time in the orthodox churches that salvation is alone through the blood of Jesus is no longer tenable, in the opinion of and ever-increasing number.

"This change has come about very largely through the influence of war. We are being told directly and indirectly that the man who dies in battle for a righteous cause, no matter what his personal relation with Jesus may be, will pass through the gates of the City of God, and no questions will be asked. In other words, a German bullet is, in some strange way, endowed with power that can open the gates of God.

"But such teaching cannot stand a moment in the light of the word of God. Its doctrines are not affected by a soldier's death, no matter how heroic he may have been, or noble the cause for which he laid down his life. It is not the soldier's blood that saves, but the blood of Jesus.

"Words that need to be spelled out in large letters on the front wall of every public hall, in all the marts of trade, and across every shining sky, are these: 'God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on Him should not perish, but have everlasting life.'"

DR. HERBERT BOOTH SMITH.
IMMANUEL PRESBYTERIAN.

Rev Herbert Booth Smith

"The shadow of personal selfishness or individualism, is lifting from the broader battlefields of life. As long as you can keep an animal or a man thinking about self-protection and self-interest, fear and hate will be present. But just as soon as consciousness becomes dominated by interest in the welfare of others, courage supplants fear.

"The shadow of civic selfishness, or nationalism, is lifting. The nation is one of the milestones on the avenue of human progress, but not the end of the journey. Looking back along the roadway of evolution, we see first the mile-stone of the individual, then of the family, then of the tribe, and finally of the nation. The next milestone is the stone of the world, or internationalism.

"The shadow of ecclessiastical selfishness, or denominationalism, is lifting. Denominationalism has not been an unmitigated evil, but many of the differences which divide us are unworthy of the great day of federation and co-operation and alliance in which we live. I believe one result of the great war is going to be a closer approximation to the great brigading together of the Christian forces than we have ever had before. For Jesus Christ has promised not to any one denomination, but to His Church, that the gates of hell shall not prevail against it.

"The shadow of religious selfishness, or Atheism, is lifting. Just as the world has gone beyond personal selfishness into brotherhood, beyond state selfishness into internationalism, beyond church selfishness into the Kingdom of God, so may we not hope that humanity will go beyond soul selfishness into harmony with the God and Father of our spirits, and His Son Jesus Christ?"

REYNOLD E. BLIGHT.
CHURCH OF THE PEOPLE.

Rev Reynold E Blight

"We stand at the threshold of a new era. The old world is dead. The new world is not yet born. The chaos that seems to be overwhelming Europe are the birth throes of the new time. We are remaking humanity. Our work is not merely refashioning society, but the more fundamental task of relaying the very foundations of civilization. It is the greatest and most far-reaching mission ever given to a generation. Civilization for a thousand years will depend upon the work of the next ten years. Let us not underestimate the significance of our task.

"Religion should play a big part in this work. The former traditions are gone and the old authorities have lost their appeal. Religious forms and organizations must be revitalized, must be energized with spiritual power.

"The church must lay aside its sectarianism and narrowness of mind. It must give up its fetichism of venerating creeds and dogmas. It must surrender its worship of rituals and church organizations. Back to the Great Nazarene it must go, learn again as a little child the power of His teachings, drink deeply of His spirit, be baptized afresh with the power from on high that He promised, and give itself to continuing the work of redemption that He began on the cross and sealed with His life.

"That work of redemption will not be completed until the race is saturated with the spirit of Christ and all mankind in earnestness and truth worship the Father, Who is justice, beauty and love."

DR. J. WHITCOMB BROUGHER.
TEMPLE BAPTIST CHURCH.

Dr J Whitcomb Brougher

"The first message of the angels on Christmas morning was one of peace. One of the last messages that Jesus left for His disciples was one of peace. No more welcome news could have greeted the ears of man than this message of peace. The world today can understand it as never before. The most diabolical and cruel war the world had ever known had come to an end. The Prince of Peace can now be preached to all the peoples of the earth. His message, His principles, His ideals, His spirit will furnish the final solution of all problems of national and international life.

"The Peace that Jesus gives is personal reconciliation with God. The greatest enemy of peace in the soul of man is the conscious guilt of sin. No soul can be at rest when goaded by an accusing conscience. But Jesus came to forgive the past and reconcile man to God.

"It means the individual at peace with himself and his circumstances. The peace which Jesus gives to His disciples is perfect tranquility of soul. Trust Him and in response to that faith He will drive out all petty worries, crush all disturbing thoughts, control your temper and give you mastery over yourself."

FIRST METHODIST CHURCH.

Dr Charles Edward Locke

"The right is more valuable than life. There would be no life if there were no right. When the right is gone men would soon devour and destroy each other. 'Might is right;' 'Force is right;' 'War is beautiful;' 'Weakness is a crime;' 'Hate your enemies;' were the wicked lies of a murderous Prussianism.

"If there were none to stand up for the immortal truths that 'Right is might,' 'and 'the strong must bear the burdens of the weak,' and 'love your enemies,' and 'the meek shall inhert the earth,' the world would soon revert to the jungle, because the law of force is the law of the jungle, and the earth would ere long be the habitation of human brutes who would soon tear each other to shreds, and human life would become extinct.

"Prussianism was in defiance of the laws of God, and of the laws of the brotherhood, and of the laws of peace and progress, and it had to fail—it had to be made to fail—and the war could not end until that demon born out of due time—a reincarnation of the age of wild men and savages—should be destroyed once and forever!

"Let us cease wailing about the world getting worse, and rejoice in the triumphs of the past, and of the mightier conquests of the future. If the world is getting worse, it is a stultification of the spirit of the gospel and a denial of the promises of Christ."

HOLLYWOOD BAPTIST CHURCH.

Rev. John Snape

"Here lies a monster — William Hohenzollern. For thirty years he held sceptered sway over 70,000,000 souls. Swollen with pride and arrogance, and consumed with the lust of world conquest, he plunged the nations into war. For four horrible years his legions stormed the gates of civilization, battered at the foundations of democracy, and trailed their slimy way across the doorways of domesticity. They defiled virginity, despoiled temples, destroyed treasures, deported civilians, depopulated communities, and defied a world.

"But the King is dead, and his dream of cosmic rule lies a-shattered like the crushed fragments of a fragile vase. The monarch departs, but the man lives—a fugitive from his fatherland, the Cain of civilization, the Judas of humanity, the monster monarch of history.

"He claimed familiarity with Deity, yet did the devil's work. He sent his subjects to destruction, and his sons to safety. He started a conflagration that lacked but little of burning up a world. He failed in his ambition only through the sacrifice of $20,000,000,000 and 8,000,000 lives. He lost his crown, his throne, his country—and gained the hatred of mankind.

"God lives, truth endures, peace reigns, freedom is established, justice vindicated, and the defenders of democracy are the saviors of the world."

SOUTH PARK CHRISTIAN.

"In this day of great rejoicing, we may well stop to think of the great responsibilities that peace brings to the victor. The problems to be solved are no less serious than the ones on the battlefield, when the fate of the world hung in the balance.

"The war was won for justice and humanity because of the great principles of Christianity that were incarnated in the ideals and efforts of the Allies. If America had sent a drunken, immoral army to France, the tide of battle would not have been turned at Chateau Thierry. If the Golden Rule had not been implanted in the hearts of Americans by the Great Teacher, we would never have responded to the call of stricken France. Peace has come because we put into practice the principles of the Prince of Peace.

"This all means that the hope of all future ages depends upon our carrying out in this mighty hour of responsibility, the same enduring and fundamental principles. Absolute justice and unfailing mercy must go hand in hand. To do nothing and to demand nothing for vengeance, but to compromise nothing where the rights of the weakest nation are involved; to set ourselves resolutely to the task of righting every wrong, as far as it can be righted, to break down the bars of racial enmity, to permit the strong to have no advantage over the weak, to establish a solemn covenant of brotherhood, is the great and mighty task that Providence has laid upon our shoulders. May we approach it with humility, seeking the wisdom that comes from on high."

REV. EDGAR DAUGHERTY.
FIRST CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

"If God moves specially among the broken-hearted, and we believe that He does, then God was never so much in the midst of the world as He is today, because the number of broken hearts was never so large. With a total of less than 80,000 casualties to American credit, while the last single week of the war brought Britain a but slightly smaller number, we had but nationally crossed the threshold of the house of mourning, while France and Britain and Belgium and other stricken, suffering, martyred countries had dwelt therein through months mounting into years.

"But America's heart had been wholly put on the rack by anticipation; she had elected to pay the full price of millions of lives, if necessary, instead of thousands, for the millions were enlisted, and their unmbers still growing when the pall of sorrow and mourning began to lift. The anticipation of suffering is as poignant as its actual experience, just as the zest of coming joy is as exhilirating as its actual arrival.

"We had nationally thought ourselves aloof from the European maelstrom, but being in the providence of God drawn in, and measurably cleansed of our selfishness and consciousless extravagance, we now need midst the voices and movements of chaos and wreckage meeting the dawn of peace—remembrance, in all humility of spirit, of the sovereignty of God. May we be humbled and consecrated anew to righteousness in the remembrance of that irreducible fact."

TEMPLE B'NAI B'RITH.

Sigmund Dr. Hecht

"November 11, 1918, will go down in history as a day of triumphant achievements, as a day of the greatest victory in the annals of recorded time; a victory of right over wrong, of liberty over oppression, of democracy over autocracy.

"After four years and more of brutal slaughtering, of wanton destruction of life and property, of riding rough-shod over every principle of humanity, and after eighteen months of American participation in this greatest of all recorded conflicts; month will forever testify to the possi ties of a nation, animated by th right spirit, after all these tryi events, the world was aroused the morning of this historic day t welcome the cessation of hostiliti the suspension of the fighting, th glorious vision of peace; peace at any price, but peace with the sults aimed at, achieved.

"But our duty and our respons bility does not end with the sign of the armistice, as some may thi on the contrary, now is the time keep up the work of providing the men overseas and for the in the camps; for their comfort their entertainment, for the educa tion and for their rehabilitation.

"It would be unworthy of our telligence and even of our boast Americanism, if the noisy manifes tion of our joy and of our enthu were all that would testify to triumph.

"Great problems will soon front the peoples of the earth; are part of them; let us not, in midst of this excitement, lose of the fact that a mistake now, negligence now, a disregard of con quences now, might render futile that has been achieved at such mous costs.

"A bright day has dawned civilization, when the eleventh of November, 1918 dawned. give thanks unto God.

REV. A. ROSS KIT
FIRST BAPTIST CHURC

"In the moral and spiritual we must reckon with God's mandments as certainly as physical realm we must reck the laws of motion or gravita of chemistry. To violate them involves sure penalties. To God's laws and set ourselves God, the works of whose hand justice and truth, entails sure bution.

"But our duty and our responsibility does not end with the signing of the armistice, as some may think; on the contrary, now is the time to keep up the work of providing for the men overseas and for the men in the camps; for their comfort and their entertainment, for the education and for their rehabilitation.

"It would be unworthy of our intelligence and even of our boasted Americanism, if the noisy manifestation of our joy and of our enthusiasm were all that would testify to our triumph.

"Great problems will soon confront the peoples of the earth; we are part of them; let us not, in the midst of this excitement, lose sight of the fact that a mistake now, a negligence now, a disregard of consequences now, might render futile all that has been achieved at such enormous costs.

"A bright day has dawned upon civilization, when the eleventh day of November, 1918 dawned. Let us give thanks unto God.

REV. A. ROSS KITT.
FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH.

"In the moral and spiritual realm we must reckon with God's commandments as certainly as in the physical realm we must reckon with the laws of motion or gravitation or of chemistry. To violate these laws involves sure penalties. To violate God's laws and set ourselves against God, the works of whose hands are justice and truth, entails sure retribution.

"In the seventeenth chapter of I Samuel we have the story of a giant who, at the same time was the incarnation of brutality, carnality and the embodiment of might. He thought he had to reckon only with a pigmy-sized boy with a sling. He boasted that he was prepared and trained to the minute, the chief of warriors, but he had to reckon with God. That reckoning upset all his plans. It has been so always; those who defy the just and holy God and arrogantly trample on His commandments should remember as a warning the fate of Golith.

"In this year of our Lord history has repeated itself, and we devoutly thank God that His commandments of truth and justice cannot fail.

"The rewards of obedience to God's commandments are as sure as the penalties of disobedience. As an observance of the laws of health brings ample rewards, so the observance of God's laws brings divine compensations. God's sure commandments set the standards of personal conduct. National and international conduct must be judged by them. All that is in harmony with them shall stand in the security of God's promises."

DR. C. ELLWOOD NASH.
FIRST UNIVERSALIST.

"Religion has commonly been understood as a quest for salvation;" that has been its motive, its mission, its grand objective. Salvation has meant a negation, an escape, a riddance. The stress has therefore been laid upon need, weakness, dependence, unworthiness; the religious expression has been ide fied with submission, patience, meekness, self-effacement, and its chief factors have been prayer (in the sense of begging for succor or clemency,) trust, (in a mystic and supernatural Backer,) obedience, to a self-constituted order of priesthood. It was inevitable that this attitude should produce whimpering, fawning, pride in self-belittlement, fear, and to some extent inertia and general inefficiency.

"The entire outlook is changed when we regard religion as having to do with possibilities, with evolution, with high attainments. Emancipation itself is only a beginning; progress forever, along every line of godlike faculty and in the use of every God-provided opportunity, that is the new beacon and inspiration. The manly man takes God for granted, sees Him in every present law and force and opening that may be utilized for advancement. He communes and adores, but seldom petitions; shows his faith by his words, and finds high and exquisite delight in 'working out his own destiny,' as the ever immanent God gives him his capacity and his chance."

UNIVERSITY METHODIST.

Dr. W. E. Tilroe

After delirium the world is at its task. The captain is artisan. Ruin gives way to building. How it overwhelms us that the master builder has never been off the job. The clangor of battle was the ring of his hammer. It might have been better but the soldier drove some nails.

"Meanwhile what is the spear to be about in the age of the pruning hook? There is but one answer. There is to be no better pruning hook. The man who forgets that he is sent to build a world, that indeed he went out and shot that he might one day drive nails, is an enemy to his kind.

"A Los Angeles soldier boy wrote home that he was coming back from France as clean as when he went. It was his pride to be white. That spear will drive nails.

"The temperance vote will not suffer when the boys come home. They have seen things. To them John Barleycorn will wear a helmet. They will go farther than to intern him. They will leave off one letter. Even the cigarette did not lose its skin in the trenches. Tobacco does not turn world builder by getting baptized. A planet at peace will grow more flowers without it. A disinfectant is rarely used in a parlor.

"Nor is the profiteer to turn gentleman that the germ is out of the trenches. He was always a traitor. The nails he drives are better drawn.

"Even the gospel of a clean plate will be good news. Waste is forever in the smoke of war.

"Nor will the tramp turn brother. But it is sainthood as never in the world. If democracy is to come to stay, the man who will not build will have to be buried."

DR. HUGH K. WALKER.
FIRST PRESBYTERIAN.

"One of the distinguishing marks of a real man is his longing to be strong. His chief ambition is to do valiantly, labor unwearyingly, be competent for every task. Whatever his own limitations, he has no use for weaklings; the world's strong men are his heroes, and he would count it all honor to follow in their train.

"The word of God reveals the wonderful secret of how even the weakest of us may be strong. 'The joy of the Lord is your strength.' That is a mightily inspiring text. Strength then isn't mere muscle; not merely a well-disciplined body, nor is it just will power, a dogged determination to get bravely through the hardest task.

"We know by experience and observation that joy is the secret of strength. But the joy of the Lord that brings abiding strength is something deeper than exuberant, evanescent gladness, which is but the child of favoring circumstance.

"We are facing sterner tasks than ever today. The problems of peace, as difficult and dangerous and delicate in their way as the problems of war, are before us. We must be as strong now as before. Here is our secret: Behind the grim mask of the unyielding commandments and exacting requirements of the Divine Lawgiver is His eversmiling face. Our God is joyous. The walls of His kingdom, like the battlements of ancient Troy, rise to the music of their builders' singing.

"We cannot help being strong when we realize that our mighty God, who knows the end from the beginning, is full of an abounding joy. Possessing this secret, nothing can discourage or daunt us. We will use our strength in blessing the world, even as God delights to bless."

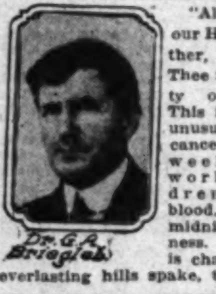
WESTLAKE PREEBYTERIAN.



Dr. G. A. Briegleb

"Almighty God, our Heavenly Father, we worship Thee in the beauty of holiness. This is a day of unusual significance. One short week ago the world was drenched in blood, plunged in midnight darkness. Today all is changed. The everlasting hills spake, the stars in their courses fought for us; we have been surprised with a new light. In the midnight darkness there has come a shining as of the dawn. Wondrous are Thy works, Thy ways are past finding out.

"No longer in fear will we scan the papers to see if our own have travalled in flesh and blood. This day we enjoy great contentment of heart, deep, tender peace of mind. Our mouths are filled with singing. Thine is the everlasting praise.

"How gracious Thou art. The yesterdays revealed a reaper of death unloosing his sickle keen. Thou didst not leave us alone. Sending Thy ministering angels in the form of physicians and nurses, Thou hast stayed the hand of death. As they light their lamps of healing at the compassionate heart of the Great Physician, continue to bless their generous and heroic service.

"Let Thy blessing rest upon Thy church. Born amid Calvary's throes, it is the apple of Thine eyes, Thy peculiar treasure. Within her walls we first learned of the glory of the cross. Help us today, in the light of all we owe unto Thee, if we have not done so before, to begin our journey of life at the cross—keep us ever from wandering from the cross—lead us daily to test everything in life by the cross, and at last, when we pass through airy channels into the homeland of God, let our faith find its eternal anchorage in the cross, through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen."

A SALE!

Embracing $12.000 Worth of the Finest Woolens
In the Most Desirable Patterns and Colors

Consider that under present market conditions it is next to impossible to secure imported or even domestic woolens from manufacturer or wholesaler—Figure out the advantages offered by this sale. We have added to our own enormous stock $12,000.00 worth of the finest imported woolens. Cloths from some of the world's most famous makers. Splendid blue and black serges, blue and black wool and worsted cheviots, West of England cassimeres, novelty worsteds and silk mixtures, Bannockburn tweeds, Scotch homespuns; in fact, every weave and color imaginable. We guarantee the style and tailoring of each garment to be up to our usual high standard.

Men! This is an Opportunity
Such as May Not Come Again in Years
POSSIBLY NEVER

THINK of buying suits made from the finest of woolens from the Henry G. Krohn stock. Tailored to perfection, at less than you are frequently charged for the commonest cloths and slipshod tailoring. Krohn's was one of the highest class tailoring establishments in Los Angeles—catering to an exclusive clientele, specializing on suits ranging in price from $45 to $100.00. We offer you the same materials and the most expert tailoring at just two prices—$26.50 and $31.50.

COLD FACTS

The business of the Universal Tailoring Co. is such that it has never been considered expedient or necessary to advertise Special Sales.

Our customers come to us, season after season, with no further urging or solicitation than the service and satisfaction our materials and workmanship have provided.

On that account we have refrained from advertising.

Having purchased the Henry G. Krohn stock of fine woolens, from the Assignee, and added it to our own large stock of high grade cloths, we feel, that in justice to the former patrons of Henry G. Krohn and for the benefit of our regular customers, we should acquaint the public with the facts of the case. The Krohn stock was purchased from the assignee, at a mere fraction of its real worth, enabling us to offer to the men of Los Angeles, Suits and Overcoats at prices no foresighted buyer can afford to overlook.

Our usual high standard of workmanship will be embodied in every garment that leaves our establishment.

Our designers, cutters and tailors are all experts, and the garments we turn out are not excelled at any price.

Woolens are advancing in price daily, in fact, owing to Government restrictions, wool cloths, for civilians' wear, have become very scarce. With this statement of facts, we announce what we honestly believe to be, from the point of value giving, the greatest Tailoring Sale, ever given publicity, in the City of Los Angeles.

ESPIONAGE ACT STILL ON.

Federal Officials will Prosecute All Enemies; Eyes on the I.W.W.

Although no official instructions, except in one instance, have been received in Los Angeles with regard to the future conduct of Federal activities growing out of the war with Germany, it is understood that there will be no change in the present work until the official declaration of peace, the date of which no one may guess.

Semiofficial advices from Washington have been to that effect, and it is expected that a formal statement as to the future position of the government will soon be forthcoming through the regular official channels. Until such instructions are received, there will be no shift in the programme of looking after the local pacifists and, purveyors of so-called German propaganda. The protection of the government from foes within and without will continue to be pushed to the limit. There is to be no "armistice" in that direction until President Wilson announces that the war is a matter of history and that the cause of world democracy is assured.

PROSECUTIONS GO ON.

There will be no halt in the prosecution of cases arising out of violations of war legislation, according to United States District Attorney O'Connor. The government will pursue the even tenor of its way in this regard until the peace treaty has been signed.

This course will be pursued by the United States District Attorney to provide against any overt or concealed acts of hostility to the peace terms that might be displayed, now that the armistice has been signed, by pro-Germans or members of the I.W.W., in this jurisdiction. It is intended to keep a tight line on any un-American sentiment that may be expressed.

In line with this programme the locally-famous case of the government against Ernest D. Sexton and other members of the "Kingdom News" cult, will probably be set for trial a second time in the local Federal court tomorrow. Not only that, but all of the indictments pending for violation of the selective draft and the espionage laws also will be pushed to a speedy trial.

Arrests will be made for violation of the war laws, just as they have been in the past, and the utmost celerity will be employed in their disposition.

TO ENFORCE WAR LAWS.

With this programme announced by the United States District Attorney, it follows that in the office of C. L. Keep, special agent of the Department of Justice, where many of these war cases arise, a similar arrangement will be carried out.

Within the past year the office force of Special Agent Keep has been largely augmented, and the information is that there will be no change until official peace is determined. Although there has been a diminution of the reported cases involving a violation of the special war laws, there are still many individuals who have to be watched and reported upon, and there will be no cessation of vigilance in that direction.

Agent Keep said yesterday that it will be the special task of his office to look after the I.W.W. members in this city and vicinity, who have recently been encouraged by the outbreaks in Russia, some months ago, and and by the demonstrations now going on in Berlin and other parts of Germany following the signing of the armistice.

It is recognized that what are known as "Reds" and by other appellations in Europe, are nothing more nor less than the lawless I.W.W., as they are known in this country, and a sharp eye will be kept for this class of law violators.

Until the peace proclamation comes, the office of the special agent will co-operate with the United States District Attorney in the apprehension and punishment of all violators of the law. Mr. Keep asks that the loyal people of Los Angeles still keep an eye on the violators of the Espionage Act, and make immediate report to his office. They will be prosecuted if the evidence warrants such action.

United States Commissioner Long, before whom violators of the Federal laws are arraigned, will keep open house for their especial accommodation. There has been a large reduction of late in the number of these offenses, owing to the fact that most of local enemies of the country have been sent to Fort MacArthur, to the County Jail and to the Federal penitentiary at Mo Neil Island, but there will be no let up in the prosecution of all detected law violators.

DESERTS, IS DIVORCED.

Woman Explains Reason She Left Was Spouse Wouldn't Work, But Court Gives Decree.

W. D. Lockhart, said to be the secretary of a local Carpenters' Union, was granted a decree of divorce by Judge Monroe yesterday. Mr. Lockhart charged desertion, but his wife, Mrs. Eleanor Holmes Lockhart, declared in contesting the suit, that she left him because he refused to work. Mr. Lockhart denied this charge. He told how his wife was drinking at a party and wanted the party continued for another occasion at her home. Mr. Lockhart set his foot down on this, asking what the neighbors would think about it. She said she did not care what they said.

She countered by declaring that Mr. Lockhart promised that the honeymoon would extend to Panama. They started north and in San Francisco, he left her there and went on to Ohio, she said. They were married on September 27, 1915, and separated four months later.

GLASS COMPANY LOSES.

Suit to Stop Shipment of Bottles in Transit Fails in the Superior Court.

The suit of the Travis Glass Company against the Pacific Commercial Warehouse Company, the Eureka Dairy and others to enforce a lien and stop a shipment of bottles in transit, was decided in favor of the defendants by Judge Finlayson yesterday.

The evidence showed that the Eureka Dairy Company borrowed about $20,000 from R. E. Ibbetson. The company had ordered a carload of bottles from the Travis Glass firm, worth about $1500. Subsequently Mr. Ibbetson took possession of the dairy company, ordered the bottles placed in a warehouse and later sold them to the Burr Creamery Company.

The court held that the bottles had been delivered and gave judgment against the Travis Glass Company. Attorney J. W. Falkner, representing the glass company, will probably take an appeal.

FOR PYRITES STREET.

Contract Awarded for Paving and Grading That will Eliminate Crossing Peril.

A contract was awarded yesterday by the Board of Public Works to George Oswald for the grading and paving of Pyrites street in the Rose Hill district. The improvement, which will cost $103,320, will eliminate the hazardous Mission road crossing.

Months ago Mr. Oswald submitted the lowest bid for the contract, but final action was withheld because of the policy of the War Industries Board in relation to improvements. Now that the war is over and the money for the improvement is available, the Board of Public Works has decided to go ahead with the job. The cost will be borne equally by the city and the Pacific Electric Company. No bonds will be issued for the improvement.

TO RAISE BETTER POTATOES.

An inspection trip made among the farmers by Dr. J. Elliott Coit, county farm advisor, and other agricultural experts is expected to result in larger yields of potatoes and better grades. Dr. Coit said yesterday that the growers, on the trip to El Monte, Whittier, Artesia and Huntington Beach districts, had an opportunity to study at first hand, new and superior methods for raising potatoes. Old ideas will probably be abandoned in favor of the new intensive methods.

WILL VISIT HAWAII.

Under the direction of D. F. Robertson, a party of Los Angeles people will leave soon for a tour through the Hawaiian Islands. They will include Mr. and Mrs. P. H. Williams, Mrs. Mary Posey, Edward Stiles, Mrs. H. J. Johns, Mrs. M. Prown, F. S. Brown and Mr. and Mrs. H. Anderson.

IS NOW INSTRUCTOR.

Lieut. Roland Phelps Hazeltine, who has recently graduated from the officers' training school at Camp Pike, Ark., has been appointed an instructor at that post.

POLITICS.

THE WATCHMAN.

TREND OF POLITICAL THOUGHT AND ACTION.

By the Sentry on His Beat.

Interest in local politics is confined for the time being to the candidacies of a score or more of Superior Court jurists and other leading lawyers for the Appellate Court bench. A rumor to the effect that Gov. Stephens has decided that the appointees must come from the Superior bench was a bit disconcerting to other aspirants, but they have hope in the fact that the chief executive has made no such formal announcement.

It would certainly be an innovation in California politics if Gov. Stephens selects appointees strictly upon their merit rather than because of the "pull" they may have.

During the past year Gov. Stephens made one blunder in selecting an appointee for the Superior bench, but he excused himself by asserting that he had made his selection upon a basis of qualifications. This did not satisfy a lot of people who disagreed with the chief executive and in the event that he permits political intrigue to influence him this time he no doubt will be severely criticised.

Among the Superior Court judges who is not a candidate for the Appellate bench is "Jim" Rives. He says that he has been in the probate department for so long that he would not feel at home any other place. Judge Rives is being congratulated from all quarters for the remarkable showing he made in the election. As usual he headed the ticket by a comfortable margin. Judge Rives has often been mentioned as gubernatorial timber and I am of the opinion that if he ever runs he will make all sit up and take notice.

I understand that City Attorney Albert Lee Stephens will be willing to fill one of the vacancies on the Superior Court bench, although he would be better satisfied on the Appellate bench. That he is an avowed candidate for one of the two jobs is said to be certain.

While Howard Robertson is still considering, Henry James has about decided to announce his candidacy for City Attorney. If both of these men should run it ought to be a pretty race. Both are well qualified, each having had experience in the office and each has a large following.

reparing for the Home-Coming of "Our Boys"—the Uppermost Pre-Christmas Thought in Many Minds Today!

"WHEN government gives to the arts of Peace the same thought and attention that it gives to the arts of War, we will have peace on earth and good-will among men."

This thought was prophetically expressed nearly a hundred years ago by one of the world's greatest business men.

Because the leaders of the world now see clearly that vast sums of money can be raised as easily as the BILLIONS for war, the promotion of every branch of industry and home happiness is sure to go ahead by leaps and bounds.

Countless money and unlimited energy will be thrown into the development of the peaceful arts and industries, and into the perfection of our homes, cities and countries.

This war has not been in vain if it has taught humanity the immeasurable resources which may be drawn upon to make this earth a pleasurable dwelling place.

We are told this is one big reason why our lovely 14-room furnished home (second floor) is so enjoyed by the many visitors who come here every day. A lady presides over it, acting as artistic home-maker and cordial hostess.

Just now, this well-known, well-loved Model Home at Barker Bros.' is helping hundreds of persons to choose useful holiday gifts that are really suitable and wanted—by an ideally satisfactory and fascinating method of display.

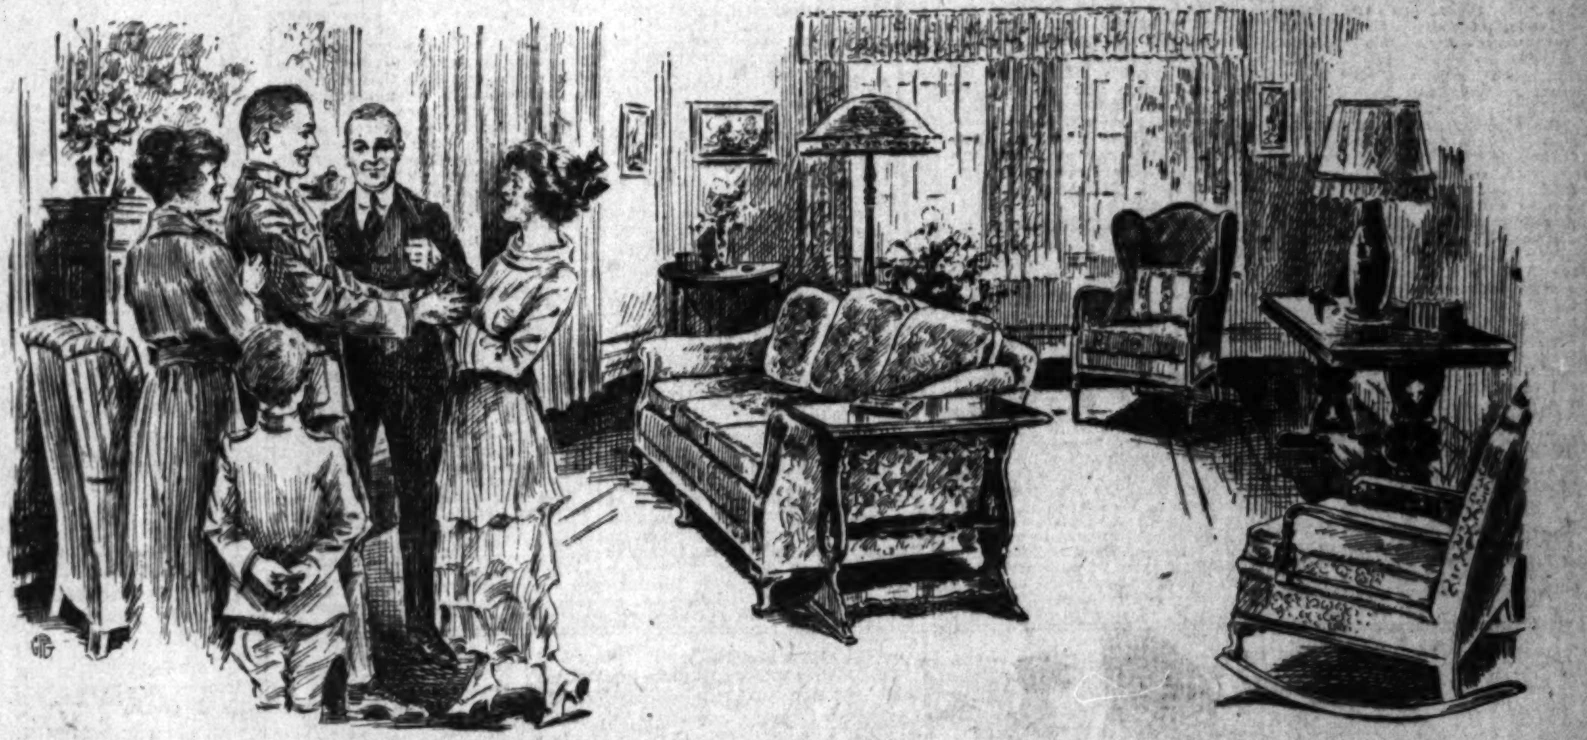
Even for Those With No Men in the Service, This Will Be a Winter of Wonderful HOME-MAKING Holidays



Our Men Are Going to Expect More of Their Homes When They Come Back

They've learned observation and gained thoughtfulness. They've had intimate little "looks in" at the quaint, impressively artistic homes of beauty-loving France. And you can read their admiration for these things in the letters that they write. The words of Lieut. Kenneth Marshall of Los Angeles, Oct. 14, 1918, from "somewhere in France," are typical:

"I am located at an officers' training school in a very picturesque valley on the upper part of a well-known French river.

"The camp is located just outside of a small French town of stone houses with tiled roofs which look hundreds of years old. The town is a typical country village with a church in the center. The streets are narrow and very crooked and are filled with children and chickens.

"Yesterday I went with one of the men who speaks French to get a French woman in the village to do some laundry. I wish you could have seen the entrance room into which we went.

"The paintings of old European houses and rooms are certainly true to life. The floor was of flagstone. In one corner stood a Grandfather clock. The furniture was all old, but extremely well kept and interesting.

"I suppose I have a better chance to see French life 'as is' here than if I traveled many times through Paris on Cook's Tours."

IT MAY not be very soon that the heroes from over the sea will be returning, but they will come surely SOMETIME—the horizon of hope is bright with that glad promise, and the homes are getting ready!

And there are others just as brave and dear who are at camps in our own country and may have furloughs or leaves of absence for the holidays. Oh, there are many, many hearts just throbbing with joy and quivering with impatience for the coming of "the most wonderful Christmas Day the world has ever known"!

They won't have long to wait—these eager ones—for Christmas is only about five weeks away, and five weeks will go swiftly, with all the rooms in the house to rejuvenate, brighten and fill with welcoming loveliness and comfort!

Why, even families who had no boys to give and so have none returning are "fixing up" their homes this year for Christmas! A new Easy Chair, or Davenport, or Lamp, or lovely Table for the LIVING ROOM will seem doubly beautiful and precious "just because it's Christmas."

Indeed, Christmas is hardly Christmas unless it brings at least one useful, real HOME gift that all can love and share. Our Beautiful Fourth Floor is ready, waiting, eager to help you enrich the living room that is dear to YOUR dear ones — THIS CHRISTMAS!

FAIR TO BE GREAT VICTORY FETE.

California Liberty Exposition Gains by Postponement; Opening Day on Thursday will be Gala Event; Ten-Day Display of Coast's Resources.

The first annual California Liberty Fair, originally scheduled to begin October 12 but postponed because of health conditions, will throw open its gates to the public of the great Southwest next Thursday at 1 o'clock p.m. Its directors declare that it will be a far more complete exposition of the resources and opportunities of this portion of the Pacific Coast than could possibly have been made had the original opening date been observed.

Conservation, production and construction — these are the three great thoughts which it is proposed to impress upon the people by means of this Liberty Fair. Southern California has a big part to play in the great reconstruction period that must be the world's chief concern for the ensuing year, and perhaps for several years thereafter. And the Liberty Fair will be used in many ways to encourage people to greater conservation of materials, increased production of foodstuffs and manufactured articles, and a wider knowledge of ways and means whereby this territory may keep its place in the sun in connection with the rehabilitation of nations and the tasks of each community tending toward that end.

The opening day of the California Liberty Fair will be, most appropriately, a formal celebration of the great victory of the arms of America and the Allies over the Hun. Next Thursday will be "Victory Day." It will have the military tinge and flavor, and patriotism will abound in every feature of the programme.

MILITARY COLOR.

The Fair Association, the Chamber of Commerce and the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association will send most urgent invitations to the military authorities to give the men under the colors, all over this territory, liberty for this day. Hundreds of these men will participate in the opening day's events. They will come from Camp Kearny and North Island, from the training schools at Riverside and Arcadia, from the naval training base at San Pedro and from Fort MacArthur.

Patriotic organizations of the city and county will also participate in the day's events, and there will not only be men of the war just closed, but veterans of the Civil War and of the Spanish-American War to add patriotic zest to the day's events.

The Governor of California, the Mayor of Los Angeles, the Food Administrator of the State and many other officials will participate in the programme. Bands from far and near will furnish individual selections, and they will mass in the playing of the national airs. Hundreds of singers will join in the great community choruses. Daylight and night fireworks will present their patriotic lessons, and Old Glory will be given the place of honor over all.

THE STREET PARADE.

The programme, although at present not definitely worked out as to all its details, will open with a big parade through the downtown district in the forenoon of next Thursday. It will then proceed to Exposition Park, where the formal opening of the fair will take place, with a programme at the dais before the mammoth grandstand that seats 10,000 persons. Then will follow the formal inspection of the various buildings by the guests of honor.

Fifteen hundred soldiers and sailors are to police the fair grounds during the ten days the exhibit is open. Each evening, in addition to the pageant play, there will be a series of fireworks to culminate in the "Bombardment of Zeebrugge," a special display of pyrotechnics.

The flower show is to be one of the wonders of the exposition. Manager S. N. Clark says he will have 250,000 blooms in this show.

The athletic carnival to be provided by Manager Bob Weaver and his assistant, W. B. Himrod, promises to be one of the events the public will be eager to witness. There will be a tennis tourney in which the famous stars will compete.

The climax of the athletic contests will come on the last day of the fair. This is to be the Army and Navy football game, in which such gridiron stars as the eastern colleges boast of will be pitted against each other. Men who have qualified for the all-American football game are to be arrayed in battle royal.

There will be a poultry exhibit with the finest fowls in Southern California on display. The space beneath the grand stand has been set aside for the poultry and an extensive pet-stock exhibit. In addition to this there will be pigeons and rabbits in numbers that will give the public some idea of the size of this particular industry. The exhibit of goats is to be larger than any ever held at any show. At least 600 different animals are to be shown.

Afternoon fireworks, mass singing and band music will occupy portions of the afternoon; athletic sports will find a place, and various big features at the exhibits will be seen. The evening will provide a wondrous display of pyrotechnics, music galore, and then a great carnival along the "Sawdust Trail," that reaches from in front of the main building to a point opposite the grandstand running clear across the athletic field.

EXHIBITS INCREASED.

Not only have the original exhibits been held intact, but they have been increased in many instances, and new departments have been provided. The California Liberty Fair has reached proportions that make it really an exposition of importance.

The agricultural and horticultural buildings are crowded to the limit; the machinery halls are full of interesting displays; the art and educational departments are remarkable in their scope; the stock show will be an event unexcelled in the history of this Coast. Every one of the thirty-nine buildings erected for the fair has been utilized to good purpose and in addition the great permanent structures erected by the State are used with fine effect.

San Luis Obispo county is to be represented by the Atascadero exhibit, which is out of the usual type of county or community fairs. It will show in highly artistic setting the specially selected products of Atascadero and Santa Marguerita. A special feature will be the showing of products of the dehydrating plant of the Lewis Foundation Corporation. It is said that vegetables and fruits of all kinds are treated in such a manner that when rehydrated they retain the flavor, texture and color of the products as brought from the garden or field.

THE FEDERAL DISPLAY.

Other counties and communities will have large spaces, and exhibits will be made that would be highly creditable to even a national exposition. Because of the delay of the opening date, many of these exhibits will be far more extensive than were originally planned. The array is so extensive that it would be impracticable to undertake to mention them all here.

The United States government exhibit, which is given prominence in the Armory building at Exposition Park, and which will be one of the big features of the Liberty Fair, is one of the five complete exhibits now being sent over the fair circuits of the United States to keep the people posted of various government activities.

WHAT BLIND CAN DO.

An interesting feature of the Liberty Fair will be the exhibit to be made by the blind men and women in business and professional life in Los Angeles. In connection with this exhibit there will be five-minute speeches on their work by an electrician, a telegrapher, a pianist and piano tuner, a baritone singer and instructor in vocal music, a dictaphone operator, and typist, a cabinet maker, a salesman, etc.

The city health department has arranged for the daily showing of a unique film story teaching the lessons of health. The theme is a love story of three reels, made especially for the health department by the Griffith, Ince and Universal film corporations. This moving-picture story will be shown daily in the theater in the basement of the Armory.

LIVE STOCK SHOW.

Some of the finest live stock in the United States and Canada are quartered at Exposition Park, awaiting the opening of the fair. Seven carloads of stock arrived at the fair grounds last week, some of the herds traveling nearly 2000 miles to reach Los Angeles for the opening of the show here.

In the cattle barns are the herds of the Miller-Maxwell Company of Pueblo Springs, Colo.; the ebony Aberdeen-Angus herd of Congdon & Battles of Yakima, Wash.; the Canadian prize-winning herd of the Curtice Cattle Company of Peaceful Valley Rancho, Calgary, Alberta; the Hereford herd of the Wyoming Corporation of Cheyenne; the Hereford herd of A. B. Cook of Townsend, Mont., and the Hereford and Shorthorn herd of William Henn of Kansas City, Mo.

RACE PROGRAMME.

The speed programme of the Liberty Fair promises to be most attractive, composed of some of the best sprinters and long-distance horses that have been seen in action on the Coast for a long time. There are such well-known performers as Sunny Joe, owned by J. C. Pendergast of Sacramento; Wand, owned by Walhauser Bros.; Menlo Park, owned by A. Goodin & Co.; Afternight, owned by W. H. Barnes, who has won a number of races on the Coast this fall; Antrim, another horse which likes a distance, owned by Hall and Debolt of San Francisco, and a number of well-known sprinters such as Quid Nunc, King Dick, May Maulsby, Careen, Ponce de Leon, Little Jake and others.

Over ninety-five horses are now quartered in the stables at the race track.

Among the noted horses now at the track, many of which have been racing this year through Canada and elsewhere, are: Alley Lou, a 6-year-old, record of 2:06½; Edith Carter, 3-year-old trotter, with a record of 2:12¼; Hemet Queen, a 3-year-old, pacer, who holds the world's record for a yearling, 2:16¼.

Other fine race stock include:

Red Star, with a record of 2:08¾, owned by James Stewart, driver, W. W. Gallup; Little Jack, record, 2:09½, won the world's record on a half-mile track at Riverside last week, is owned by C. F. CAMP LEWIS MEN TO GO OVERSEAS

Division is Notified to be in Readiness for Police W… in Late Enemy Countries; Southern Californians are Eager to See the World.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CAMP LEWIS (Wash.) Nov. 16.—Peace unleashed all the tongues of rumor that have been held in more or less control at Camp Lewis since the early days of the Ninety-first Division. While wires from California and Oregon, Montana and Minnesota were straining under the jubilant messages of families and friends who vied with one another to be the first to hang out the "Welcome Home" sign for the men of the Thirteenth Division, the men themselves were mentally packing their kits into the most compact space possible and planning a little room for an extra pair of socks to carry them through a rigorous winter in Siberia or elsewhere.

Prospects for the use of the Thirteenth Division in the policing of Russia, Austria, Germany or the Balkans are excellent, and it may be years before the men of the Thirteenth are returned to civilian life, staff officers warned, when some Camp Lewis men began seeking immediate discharge from the army.

Lined up for retreat Tuesday evening, with the cold, moist air of early evening enfolding them, and Mt. Tacoma looming chill and blue across the prairie, they listened to the memorandum issued by Maj.-Gen. Joseph D. Leitch, in which he emphasized that the responsibility of policing Germany, Austria, Russia and the Balkans is second only in importance to that of forcing surrender.

THE WORK AHEAD.

"Certain divisions in America will be sent over to relieve those divisions which have borne the brunt for the past year," he said. "It will not be our privilege to go over the top, but the responsibility of policing the late belligerent enemy countries is great. During the period of discussion of the final terms of peace, which will be necessarily prolonged, it will be our job to hold the left bank of the Rhine, 367 miles in length, in addition to other fronts equally important, and to direct the civil affairs of 100,000,000 rebellious and totally-disorganized peoples.

"Our responsibility does not end with the signing of peace. Certain guarantees will be exacted by the Allies, and until these are satisfied a large armed force will be maintained on all fronts and at important points.

"It has already been pointed out that this duty will develop on fresh American troops. ho was defeated as a candidate or Superior Court judge, is dicker g with several law firms who have vited him to join them. It is un erstood that he will hook up with Warren Williams, former City Prosecutor.

As a political prognosticator, Col. Henry Laub takes first prize. He predicted that Gov. Stephens would win by more than 100,000, that the State and city Rominger bills would be defeated and that State-wide prohibition would get it in the neck. The wise ones now are wondering whom he will pick for the various municipal offices next spring. The colonel never plays a loser and his judgment is given a great deal of weight.

Lissner is doomed to take a back seat in politics. His attempt to convince Gov. Stephens that he was for him on the day of election was the crudest thing he ever did. The Governor knows the wily politician, and that is enough.

When A. B. Conrad took the initiative against the foolish Sunday closing law he stood alone in the Council. Other members at first were afraid to join him. The people have shown how they feel toward such freak legislation and it looks to me like Mr. Conrad will be a cinch if he runs for another term.

What do you think of this? Ralph Criswell actually believes he is destined to pace up and down the hall of fame in the nation's capital. He will be a candidate for Congress in the Ninth District two years hence and will run as a straight Republican. He has repudiated the Reds with whom he has affiliated for many a year. I understand his power with the unions is waning, and having no standing in the Republican party I can't see where he will have a chance.

A report to the effect that P. P. O'Brien will be a candidate for Mayor is ridiculous. Mr. O'Brien is stronger than garlic for Mayor Woodman and will be one of his most earnest supporters.

HOW TO FIGHT SPANISH INFLUENZA

BY DR. L. W. BOWERS.

Avoid crowds, coughs and sneezers, but fear neither germs nor Germans! Keep the system in good order, take plenty of exercise in the fresh air and practice cleanliness. Remember a clean mouth, a clean skin and clean bowels are a protecting armour against disease. To keep the liver and bowels regular and to carry away the poisons within, it is best to take a vegetable pill every other day, made up of May-apple, aloes, jalap, and sugar-coated, to be had at most drug stores, known as Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. If there is a sudden onset of what appears like a hard cold, one should go to bed, keep warm, take a hot mustard foot-bath and drink copiously of hot lemonade. If pain develops in head or back, ask the druggist for Anuric (anti-uric) tablets. These will flush the bladder and kidneys and carry off poisonous germs. To control the pains and aches take one Anuric tablet every two hours, with frequent drinks of lemonade. The pneumonia appears in a most treacherous way, when the influenza victim is apparently recovering and anxious to leave his bed. In recovering from a bad attack of influenza or pneumonia the system should be built up with a good herbal tonic, such as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, made without alcohol from the roots and barks of American forest trees, or his Irontic (iron tonic) tablets, which can be obtained at most drug stores, or send 10c to Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., for trial package.

Recipe for a Mild Laxative Cough Syrup

Made With Simple Sugar Syrup and Mentho-Laxene in About Five Minutes.

Make a syrup with a pint of sugar and a half pint of boiling water, cool and pour into a bottle or jar. Then add the contents of a 2½ oz. bottle of Mentho-Laxene, shake well, and take a teaspoonful four to eight times a day for head or chest colds, coughs, bronchitis, whooping cough and catarrh of head and throat.

Usually, the very first dose will show you the wonderful virtues in Mentho-Laxene. It is penetrating, healing, soothing and curative to a greater extent than anything ever produced. Children like it and people from Maine to California use it. Physicians prescribe it, hospitals use it, and why should not you enjoy the benefits of a cheap, reliable remedy free from narcotics or deadening drugs? Ask your druggist for Mentho-Laxene and insist on getting it, for it is guaranteed to please every purchaser or money back by The Blackburn Products Co., Dayton, Ohio.—[Advertisement.]

Italy and America Air Brothers.

Lieut. "Pug" Waddell and Capt. Orlando.

MILAN HONORS YANKEES.

Former Angeleno Writes of Tributes Paid to Our Soldiers There.

How he led the only uniformed Americans in Milan through the rose-strewn streets of that city on the celebration of the third anniversary of Italy's entry in the war, was in an airplane spill in which he miraculously escaped, and made a lively trip with fifty-eight cadets from Foggia, Italy, to Tours, France, are told in a letter from Joseph ("Pug") Waddell, to his brother, Lieut. Al G. Waddell, commander of Battery E, One Hundred and Forty-third Field Artillery.

"Pug" Waddell is now a lieutenant, and he writes from the second aviation instruction center, A.E.F., France. He tells of meeting Vic Wells, who was with Robert Marsh & Co. of Los Angeles, and raced in the Dusenberg team with Tom Alley at Corona, in 1914. Bill Royle from Berkeley, he says, is a big leaguer at the aviation center. Lieut. Waddell, now an instructor for the American aviation cadets, is a personal friend of Capt. Orlando, an aviator, son of the Premier of Italy. He speaks highly of the young Italian officer.

The letter, with personal mentions left out, follows:

"One morning in Foggia I received sudden notice that I was to take fifty-eight cadets from there to Tours, France, leaving that night. I had laundry, money and so forth scattered all over Southern Italy, but there was no time for that, and I had to come away without it. After five days of the wildest traveling you ever heard of, we finally hit here all together.

"We came up the west coast through Ancona and Bolonga to some little burg south of Milan, where we were supposed to be switched off, and lay most of the night on sidings. Before they could cut off our cars I was up with an interpreter, throwing a great line of bull about a sick man I had to take to American doctors, and finally talked them into shooting us into Milan. This made me strong with the boys who wanted to see Milan.

A BIG CELEBRATION.

"At Milan, after arranging to take the latest train I could, I told the boys to be at the station at 10 o'clock the next day, first having my sergeant take the names of hotels they went to.

"While I was at dinner that night a regular delegation of gold braid blew in with the news that on the next day in Milan they were holding the big celebration for the third anniversary of Italy's entry into the war, and begged me to keep the bunch over and take part in the parade. It sounded good, so I said 'sure,' and again I was popular with the boys. That meant missing the 1:28 train, but another left at 6:30.

"It was all a sort of lark to us until it started, and then it just took my breath away and made tears come. Never have I seen anything like it. The parade was over five miles long and no end of French, British and Italian troops had been sent down from the front (Milan is quite close,) but our little bunch was the big surprise, and drew the big cheer, and it was some cheer. For miles we walked on solid roses, and they just rained down on us. Every man had a big bunch in his hand that he just picked off his hat or shoulders, and then some belle would reach out and take it away. But in 200 yards the fellow would have another just as big.

"I must say that our crowd handled themselves like regulars all during the parade. The whole parade was in column of squads, because the sidewalks and streets were jammed almost out to the car tracks, leaving just a narrow lane. I never will forget passing the wonderful Milan cathedral, with a big Caproni triplane roaring something awful right down on the spires, throwing out big bunches of leaflets, with the other planes behind, diving into the bunches as they fell and scattering them. The air was alive with all kinds of planes.

"AMERICA FOREVER."

"One of the leaflets read 'America forever.' Every roof, window and balcony was jammed and I never heard such noise. One band was in front of us and another right behind, but we could hardly hear them them at any time. I was some little general that day, stepping out like Hector Napoleon.

"The parade ended at the big arena, and that was another wonderful sight. It seats around 130,000 persons, and was packed with a riot of colors.

"As soon as I hit here, about the first person I bumped into was Vic Wells (well-known Los Angeles automobile man.) He is a lieutenant in Uncle Sam's Army now, having transferred from the French service. He has charge of all dual control flying, and handles it finely, and is quite a soldier to boot. He handles himself well and is on good terms with the uniform. He may be sent back to the States soon, probably as an instructor. Bill Royle is also a big leaguer. Little Reuben of the Army and Navy Academy (San Diego,) is here. He just got his commission, but has not finished flying training.

"We are learning to fly tractor planes here with stick controls. It is quite different from the kind I have been flying, but not hard to pick up. I have gone through it very fast, and now only have acrobatics to do."

Lieut. Waddell tells of his hopes of eventually getting to the French front, having been one of the first to go across the water for the United States. He says: "If Harry Williams drops around some of these flying camps he will get enough dope to write stories that will be bears.

TWO AIRPLANE SPILLS.

"That story about my getting spilled was right, though I got off easy. I had two of them only two days apart. The first one came when I was taking a ride with an Italian pilot and he was driving. We both got out O.K. The second came when I was making a lesson with a pupil. We were leaving the ground toward a big grove of trees. When about to clear them the elevator control wouldn't answer. I was too late to turn over or get over, so I figured it was best to wade right into them hard. Like old football stuff—hit them hard and you get off easy." So with the motor wide open I leveled off and plowed in with a 'here goes nothing.'

"We were going a good eighty miles an hour and stopped in ten feet. You should have seen that machine. Jackson at Santa Monica had nothing on us. The boy with me went right over my head and I never knew it. I couldn't get my belt undone in time and was all tangled up, and so surprised that I was O.K. that it struck me as funny. We laid four big trees flat on the ground and tore half of the fifth. The wreck caught on fire at once. I looked around to see if Peoples was hurt, but the seat was empty, and I didn't hear from him until he came around to help me out. The machine burned up. It could never have been used again anyway. When the Italians got there and saw the mess of junk it was too much for them. They couldn't see how anyone could come out alive. I was in bed for a few days from the bruises, and still have a bad ankle and a pain in my chest, but nothing was busted. It was a close one, all right, but just being close never won anything, and my luck is still good.

"These fellows that write home about standing and watching their best friends 'hurled to death' give me a pain. Some good friends of mine have been killed, but it is all in the game. The only person in this aviation outfit that keeps on the ground is 'old man gravity,' and he never quits working."

CEMENT PIPE PROTESTED.

Another angle in the war between the manufacturers of clay sewer pipe and cement sewer pipe developed yesterday when a formal protest was filed with the Board of Public Works against the installation of cement pipe in the Glassell-avenue sewer. The clay pipe concern alleged that seventy-two sections out of 123 had failed to meet specifications. The matter will be taken up by the Council tomorrow.

DAMAGES FOR INJURIES.

A jury in Judge Houser's court yesterday awarded Mrs. Catherine Carson $500 for injuries received when she was struck by an automobile driven by Floyd Lambert. Ira C. Lambert, alleged to have been one of the owners of the machine, was exonerated by the jury.

LOS ANGELES SOLDIER LED ATTACK ON NEST.

WRITES OF BEING GASSED AND WOUNDED IN THE ARGONNE FOREST.

An illustration of the manner in which American soldiers went after the machine-gun nests of the Germans in their drive through the Argonne Forest, is given in a letter from Corp. Roger Smith of the Ninety-first (Wild West) Division to his father, A. R. Smith of the Aristo Engraving company, formerly an employee of The Times.

"I have been over the top," writes Corp. Smith, who is 22 years old, "and am now in a hospital, having been gassed the fifth day. Our division started in the last big drive near the Argonne Forest. We began on Thursday and I 'got mine' on Sunday. I was in charge of a detail of men to get a machine-gun nest that was peppering us. We were sneaking up when they opened fire, and the men ducked behind bushes and I into a shell hole, which proved to be a gas hole.

"Before I could adjust my mask, I got it. Nevertheless I stayed with my men and we took the nest and killed the enemy. In rejoining our company a shell burst near and knocked me out. First-aid men found me the next morning and brought me to. When I reached our company the captain sent me to the hospital. Dad, if you could have seen us fight! Half an hour after we started I was put in command of the first platoon, and how the boys did fight! They went any place I led. One loses all fear when he sees his own men falling."

Corp. Smith is a graduate of St. Vincent's College and was one of the star football men of the University of Dallas.

MAILS NOT AFFECTED.

End of War Makes Little Change at Postoffice or Internal Revenue Department.

At the Los Angeles postoffice it is not believed that the coming of peace will have any noticeable effect there. The mails to Europe, carrying letters and packages to the American soldiers, have been heavy for some time, and will continue to be so until the troops are brought home.

Peace will make no noticeable change in affairs at the office of the Collector of Internal Revenue. The activities of that office are confined to the gathering of taxes, and that will go on, war or no war. The large office force is now getting ready to make the levies under the pending war revenue bill in Congress, and the duties fixed by that law will have to be paid even when official peace comes.

BANKRUPTCY PETITIONS.

T. E. Anderson, a building contractor, filed a petition of bankruptcy in the United States District Court yesterday, giving his liabilities as $17,784.56, of which $10,860.06 are unsecured. His assets amount to $3600, of which $1420 is alleged to be exempt. A similar petition was filed by Baron Kates, operating as the Hermes Wine Company, with debts amounting to $7557.91, all unsecured, and assets of $5051, of which $5000 is in the shape of accident insurance, which is exempt.

Almost Magical in Its Progress Has Been the Manufacturing of American-Made Toys

To Wrap Your Package In a Christmasy Way

—We have inaugurated, in connection with the Department of Individual Service, this helpful individual package wrapping.

—Haven't you often seen Christmas packages so cleverly wrapped that you almost dislike to open them. There is a knack about wrapping packages—that's why we are specializing in this department; and if you desire to have your package different, individual, come to the Department of Individual Service for suggestions. There is no charge for this service. You are simply charged with the materials used.

—Here you will find, in addition to the regular department, an ample assortment of Christmas boxes, cards, ribbons, stickers, tinsel cord, tissue paper. 2nd Floor.

—It is well known that America has great capacity for doing things and when the U. S. gets behind a movement, there is nothing half-hearted about the energy displayed.

—In times gone by it was thought impossible to secure toys outside of foreign lands.

—Now step into our Toy Department on the sixth floor and see the handiwork of American toy makers.

—You'll have no difficulty in distinguishing the American toys, because they are strong, substantial, good looking. They represent high quality.

—Look at the mechanical trains, they have cast iron locomotives instead of tin.

—The heavy clock work springs and gears of the machines are of brass and steel instead of being stamped out of light weight metal.

—Made in the U.S.A. stands for something now and this is particularly true of toys.

—The Broadway has over $100,000 worth of toys—nearly all of which have been made in the U.S.A.

—It's a mighty good thing to be able to say—

COMFORT IS KEYNOTE.

NEW CALIFORNIA THEATER TO MAKE YOU FORGET WOES.

Solid comfort is to be the keynote of the California, Miller's new theater, which is to be opened some time during the present month at Eighth and Main streets.

Everything to insure the pleasure and convenience of patrons is being done. Lighting and ventilating systems are the best obtainable, and the seats have been designed especially with a view to comfort in mind. Every seat in the house is fully upholstered and is large and roomy. The club loges in the balcony are forty-eight inches wide, where the law requires that they be only thirty-two, and no matter where one is seated there is a full and unobstructed view of the stage and screen.

Trained and drilled employees versed in everything that the public may demand have been secured and are now being instructed in their duties, and special attendants will see that the comfort and convenience of patrons is attended to in both rest rooms and lobbies.

An innovation in picture house conveniences consists in a baby carriage garage, located in the lobby. Here mothers may check their little ones' conveyances before going to their seats; while on the mezzanine floors, with its spacious rest rooms and lounging rooms for both men and women, the mother will find also a nursery where the little ones may be left in charge of a competent nurse. A new kind of screen, one which permits of perfect projection, is to be used, while the projection machine promises to make the pictures as flickerless as possible.

Last to be mentioned, but most important of all, of course, will be the pictures and music. The experience that the Millers Brothers have had in catering to the picture-going public of Los Angeles has been wide and varied, and this experience should enable them to present at all times the kind of photoplay productions that the public likes, and when the list of stars and attractions that have been booked for the California are announced, it is promised that the public will look forward to them with pleased anticipation.

A symphony orchestra is to be another special feature, and this organization, which will be under the leadership of Nicholas Donatelli, will be second to nothing of the sort in the United States. A magnificent pipe organ is now being installed, and will be the largest instrument of its kind in the country. A noted organist is to be engaged.

EXHIBITORS COMBINE FOR BETTER RESULTS.

The co-operative movement among picture producers and exhibitors, by which it is hoped among the participants that sweeping changes may be made in regard to methods of production, salary of stars, and advertising, is becoming stronger day by day, judging from the attention which it is receiving at the hands of picture trade journals and reports of those at the head of the movement. The campaign was launched by exhibitors of Southern California, who delegated to J. M. Quinn the authority of spokesman. Mr. Quinn now proposes to take a trip East in order to get the personal endorsement of exhibitors throughout the country to the movement.

The objects of the movement are the elimination of inflated salaries to stars, drastic changes in advertising, and the curtailing of irresponsible wild-cat production.

"Local papers should receive more advertising," said Mr. Quinn, the other day, "and I believe the producers will be ready to co-operate with us in this.

"So far as the star system is concerned, the exhibitors are tired of looking idly on, watching their money being spent foolishly, while they are slaving and planning night and day, earning money and digging up more money from their own pockets to help pay these so-called stars many times what they are worth.

"Now we don't want to be understood as fighting for low salaries. We want to see everyone get what his ability and drawing power entitle him to, but I want to see this system of forcing inferior people down our throats by sheer force of advertising (and untruthful advertising, at that) stopped."

PICTURE ACTORS ON THE WAR WORK JOB.

The moving picture people have responded with a rush to the Allied War Work fund campaign.

The first studio so far to go over the top was the National Film Corporation. The allotment to that studio was $1000, and Manager Isadore Bernstein announced the studio had subscribed $1500. Due to this fact the honor flag has been presented to this studio by the Motion Picture War Service Association, which has the campaign in charge.

The motion picture fold has been completely organized for the drive, representatives working in every studio under the direction of a general committee. The Motion Picture War Service Association has 180 active workers in the field cooperating with the general committee.

TAKE SHOWS TO THE BOYS AT THE CAMP.

The motion-picture players are on a vigorous hunt for any hidden talent among their members, because Camp Kearny is consuming more than expected. Every night the players provide the soldiers with a full vaudeville bill, but to put on seven new shows a week for several weeks is one of the most difficult tasks they have undertaken.

In order to achieve the task, the Motion Picture War Service Association is appropriating about $2000 a week for transportation expenses and accommodations for the volunteers, while they are away from home. Each appearance costs the players two days, one to go and one to return, so the soldiers are enjoying a weekly vaudeville bill that would cost more than $30,000 a week if hired.

Each studio has accepted the burden of giving a show. The favoritism the soldiers have shown for "girl acts" has caused the revision of several programmes, and every girl who can dance or sing has been a popular person.

The Lasky players started the performances, followed by the Vitagraph, the Christie, Mack Sennett, Griffith, Brunton and Fox companies, and the Lasky company already has repeated its appearance.

The vaudeville programmes will be continued until next Wednesday. Vaudeville performers have been as enthusiastic and earnest in their work as have been the picture players.

Browne Gets New Story.

At last Bothwell Browne has decided upon his new photo production. The story was written by an old friend of the star's, whose name is not announced. In it Mr. Browne will be seen as a young detective of Scotland Yard, in which capacity he will adopt various feminine disguises and play different types of women.

Lee Kids Entertain.

The Lee Kids have a visitor. She is none other than Rose Mullaney, for several years chief assistant to Chamberlain Brown in New York. Miss Mullaney came from New York with the Lee children, Fox stars, and Mrs. Irene Lee, their mother, merely for a vacation. But she declares she likes Southern California so well that she is thinking of making it her home.

Fox Studios Get up Steam.

The Fox studios are getting busy with the erection of new sets, etc., and two companies are already at work, including the Lee children and Gladys Brockwell. Lynn Reynolds, formerly Tom Mix's director, is now with Miss Brockwell, while Edward J. LeSaint, who directed the last Brockwell pictures, is to take Tom Mix under his directorial wing. Madlaine Traverse will begin another picture in two weeks, and sets are already being prepared.

Miss Brockwell's company has gone to Great Bear Lake for the making of some scenes. In the company are William Scott and J. Barney Sherry.

Mary Pickford as Pollyanna.

Among other pictures Mary Pickford expects to do for the First National Exhibitors' Circuit under her new contract will be a film version of the famous play, "Pollyanna."

William Sheer Loaned.

William Sheer, the newest Bluebird film star, has been loaned by Universal to Fanny Ward for a picture. In this feature Sheer will play another crook part.

Excitement Note.

A baby on a studio set means the infant plus its mother—and don't let 'em tell you different.

By dint of much wheedling King Vidor's assistant secured an infant to occupy a cradle for one brief scene in "The Turn in the Road," at the Brentwood studios.

Automatically he also secured the infant's mother for an edging forward position on the camera lines. He had his set ready, the baby safely sleeping, when Vidor with Bill Thornley, his camera man approached to carry on. Fond mammas, unfamiliar with studio talk and terms, may be safely left to imagine the trouble which quickly developed when Thornley asked:

"Where shall I shoot it, front or back?" and Vidor replied:

"Front, I guess, only cut the legs."

Helen Eddy will Speak.

Helen Eddy, who has completed her work for the Brentwood feature picture, "The Turn in the Road," will take the part of Emma Brierley in "Lonesome-Like," at the Community Theater, Hollywood, as soon as the "flu" ban is lifted.

Foss Goes to Camp.

Darrell Foss, former leading man with May Allison, Metro star, writes that he has been admitted to the officers' training camp at Waco, Tex. "I had," writes the popular young leading man, "to refuse four excellent offers in order to go to Waco, but there will be lots of time to make up later."

Brother is Gassed.

To Mrs. Grace Price of the Universal came word last week that her brother, who is Sergt. T. W. J. Hough, and who has been fighting with the Allied forces in France, has been gassed, and is being invalided home.

Dorothy Dalton Buys Pup.

Dorothy Dalton, Ince star, has just purchased a new Boston bull terrier of such irreproachable pedigree and curves that she expects to carry away high honors with him at all the kennel shows in America. Honey Blossom is the name of the blue-ribboner.

Anita Stewart in Orth Story.

The first picture in which Anita Stewart will appear under the direction of Lois Weber is entitled "An American Girl," and is adapted from one of Marion Orth's stories. Jack Holt has been engaged as Miss Stewart's leading man.

FOOTPRINTS LEAD TO CONVICTION.

[BY A. P. CORRESPONDENCE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 10.—Identification of footprints led to the conviction in Sacramento of Warren J. Davis, rancher, of Elk Creek, Glenn county, and his herder, Henry Hulett, on charges of starting fires on the California national forest, the United States forest service offices here have just been advised.

The two men started six fires October 25, 1917, in an effort to clear a trail. Footprints at the scene of the fire were identified as those of Davis and Hulett and of their horses. Sixty-two hundred acres were burned over and $4800 worth of timber was destroyed, the forest service reported. The first trial of the men resulted in a disagreement, but on retrial they were convicted, October 2.

The forest service also reported that Ed Burke had been sentenced to an eighteen-months' term at McNeill's Island penitentiary for starting a fire near Upper Lake in 1917. The evidence against him was collected by C. V. Brereton, inspector for the forest service.

ELEVEN PIONEERS DRINK OLD TOAST.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 15.—Eleven men who came to California in '49 across the continent by prairie trail or by sailing vessel round the Horn met here recently and drank a toast to "the days of gold." They represented the forty-one remaining members of the Society of California Pioneers, which at one time comprised 3000 lovers of adventure. For years the pioneers have held a reunion in this city, but year by year the attendance has dwindled.

Among those who made the last pilgrimage from various parts of the country were three members of the vigilance committee which, in 1866, quelled a reign of terrorism and lawlessness in San Francisco by a number of hangings.

BURIED IN AMERICAN SOIL.

[BY A. P. CORRESPONDENCE.]

PARIS, Sept. 30.—How many Americans know that Lafayette was buried in American soil? Gen. Thiebault writes in his Memoirs:

"His (Lafayette's) tomb is at Picpus. . . . It was in this spot that he had had placed a dozen barrels of earth taken from some battlefield in America, which he himself had brought back."

NEW STAR ON THE RIALTO.

BY GRACE KINGSLEY.

Being introduced to a new film star, just born, one might say, and therefore nameless, is perfectly thrilling, but a bit disconcerting. Just as if, for instance, the moment Minerva sprung from the head of Jupiter, you were suddenly to be introduced to her. All you could say to her would probably be: "How do you like Los Angeles?" The only alternative being the obviously impossible. "My gawd, where did you come from?"

So when one is presented to Charles A. Taylor's new star, out at the Norbig studio, one naturally wonders what one may ask and what one mayn't. You see, her identity is to remain a mystery for the present, and the public is later to be asked to name her through a magazine contest.

Mr. Taylor is slightly deaf at all times. He is stone deaf when you ask him the real name of his new star. You find out by looking at her, though, that she is beautiful, statuesque, a brunette, and you speedily learn from Mr. Taylor that she was a Southern society belle, that she has her own company, known as the Charles A. Taylor Company, and that Charles A. Taylor is her Columbus. Mr. Taylor, you know, is the "original husband," as "Tish" would say, of Laurette Taylor, and the man who launched her on the way to stardom.

You see, it's this way. Mr. Taylor isn't happy a-tall unless once in so often he glues his expert eye to a metaphorical telescope and takes a peek round the horizon that bounds the Rialto, in order to discover possible latent talent. It was while taking such a peek—to be exact, one evening at the Hollywood Hotel—that he discovered the new star.

And he declares that she is destined to follow in the footsteps of the famous Laurette!

They told me that she had never, never had a bit of grease paint on her smooth young cheek before; that she had been a Southern society belle all her life until her sudden plunge into pictures. Which naturally made one turn to inquiry and that helpful little Blue Book, only to discover it is all really true, no matter how Cinderella-ish.

And when she turned out, that day, really not to know how to three-cheer herself at all, my imagination was roused.

"I don't know why," she said, with a humorous little smile, "I don't know why I'm a star at all!"

Which made me feel sure we were going to get on well together. Most stars know so awfully well why they are stars!

Very clever of her, too, because when she says that you begin at once to champion her. You begin instantly to feel the press-agent instinct, latent in most of us—we used to call it hero worship—spring up.

"Why shouldn't you be a star?" you demand hotly. "You've good looks—and I guess Mr. Taylor knows best whether you have talent or not! He never would have picked you—by the way, where did he pick you?"

When it was as far along as that, the other day, everything was clear sailing.

It seems that it was at the Hollywood Hotel, one evening last spring, Mr. Taylor caught his first glimpse of a tall, beautiful, graceful woman. He liked the way she smiled and carried herself, and his attention was completely engaged by the intangible something known as charm and personality, which she possessed. His interest was purely professional—proven by the fact that his wife agreed with him! They sought an introduction, and Mr. Taylor asked Miss Star (we must call her something) right off—just like that—would she like to be in pictures?

"Pic——," began Miss Star, bewildered.

She is a Southern girl, so she finally answered just what she had said to numerous young men (first coaching father though!) "Ask poppa!"

Poppa, though a Southern man, with his daughter a belle, unexpectedly answered he reckoned it would be all right.

And Mr. Taylor began skirmishing for the money.

After which, he wrote a story for her. Mr. Taylor has had an inspired pen on more than one occasion, the beautiful story, "Yosemite," and the patriotic tale, "Over the Rhine," which has just been made into a picture by Julian Eltinge, being his work.

It's a circus story—with Circassian girl, living skeleton and everything! And Miss Star plays the part of a circus rider!

"What a wonderful chance to shock your society friends!" I said.

"Oh, yes," smiled the star, showing a row of little white teeth, "and if the riding doesn't the bathing scene is sure to!"

"Have you done any dramatic stuff yet?" I asked.

"Well, I reckon maybe driving a four-horse chariot into the ocean was dramatic!"

"Weren't you afraid?"

"No, not at all! I've never been afraid of horses. There's something in my horoscope about control over horses. You see, when I was a baby 2½ years old, I ran away on a buckboard! Mother came to look for me, and while I don't remember it, she says I had climbed into a buckboard that was standing in front of the house and had started the horses going! They caught up with them luckily!"

Miss Star hasn't a bit of temperament, as witness that when Mr. Taylor asked her what she wished most in her company, she told him with amazing naivete she wanted everybody to be good looking, so that if they didn't like her, maybe they'd find somebody else they did like!

And as soon as ever this picture is finished, Mr. Taylor is going to start another one, filmed from the famous story of a famous writer. Also it is likely a new studio will be built.

BELGIUM IN NEED OF GREATER RELIEF.

[BY A. P. CORRESPONDENCE.]

HAVRE, Oct. 30.—The fifth winter of the war will bring greater demands than ever for civilian relief in Belgium, according to a statement of Lieut.-Col. Ernest P. Bicknell, American Red Cross commissioner for Belgium, in which he announced that the commission has supplied more than $100,000 worth of clothing to Belgian refugees in the last nine months.

"There are more Belgian refugees in France now than at any time during the war," Col. Bicknell said. "Prices are higher, rent is higher, and large numbers of people who, for the first year or two, retained their vigor, are tired, prematurely old, discouraged, sometimes almost helpless.

"There is probably no piece of service that the American Red Cross can render to Belgian people which will help more efficiently than to assist them in properly clothing themselves."

MUSICAL.

GERMAN MUSIC'S RETURN

THE MUSICIANS WILL RESUME REAL NAMES.

By Jeanne Redman.

The effects upon music of the cessation of hostilities in Europe will be manifold. The war put American musicians and American music on the map, because of the objections raised in all quarters to having German music on our programmes. We not only can play whatever we choose, but, oh, welcome relief! we no longer will be obliged to seek new nationalities for our German musicians. There has been no small amount of unconscious humor developed recently by the search for permissible nationalities. The Germans have been either Dutch or Belgian; the Austrians have been Hungarians, and the Hungarians have been Czecho-Slavs. The Bavarians long ago became Bohemians, and I know even a Turk, a high commissioner of the Ottoman empire, who became an Armenian over night.

The Zoellner Quartette afforded one of the most amusing of our local examples. When they come here to live, those of us who wanted to make them welcome decided that it would be wise to announce them as Belgians. The name, of course, is German, and that would never do, so Belgian they become. They made no objection, and gradually we assumed that we have arrived, unknowingly, at the truth. It was only last week that a member of the famous quartette told me, sub rosa, that they are Americans, not only the sons and daughters being born in this country, but also the father and mother! Why did they let themselves be Belgians all this time? Simply because America seemed to be so well-disposed toward them. Better disposed, no doubt, than if the Zoellners had insisted upon being recognized as Americans.

A correspondent writes to ask me if Beethoven was not a Belgian. Poor Ludwig! It is true that his family lived in Flanders some two generations before he was born, and that the "Von" is not German; but the great Beethoven is as much a German as any other, and if Hoffmann puts him on a programme this winter, as we hope he will, we can listen with a clear conscience to the greatest piano music ever written. Among the Russians who have turned into Poles is the pianist Godowsky, who, it is rumored, will be here also this season. He is now in San Francisco, and California is eager to keep him. These Russians go well in America. Nicol Sokoloff, formerly of the San Francisco Philharmonic Orchestra, is with the Cleveland now, and word has just come that he will take some of the Chicago orchestra dates this season in Stork's place. Sokoloff is a fine talent, and we could have had him two years ago if we had been enterprising—and had wanted him.

The dates for the Philharmonic Course have been changed around, and the last one to be put ahead until February is Rudolf Ganz—who, I believe, is really a Swiss. But the Paris Conservatory Orchestra is on its way.

PROGRAMME OF LOS ANGELES SYMPHONY.

Now that peace and victory have come, now that the tension is relaxed and the mind of the people becomes open to the pursuits and enjoyments of peace, the call comes for music.

During the war, the call was from a State and army for music, more music in the communities and the camps. But it was for music that presented strong rhythms and patriotic words; music that did not appeal to the intellect, but only to the simpler of the emotions.

But now the call is for music of a different kind, for music of educational, uplifting tendency. For at least six months, music has taken a vacation in Los Angeles, but the season is announced to open again with the first concert of the Los Angeles Symphony Orchestra, which will be given at Clune's Auditorium, Friday, December 6.

Each year the first concert of the orchestra is looked forward to with pleasure, as heralding the good music of the season. But this year there is especial interest from the facts, first, that a new work by a local composer of note is to be played; second, that an artist of distinction is to be heard; and third, that the symphony offered is a favorite and was written in America.

The new work is an arrangement of two sections of the Cadman opera, "Shanewis," which was written in Los Angeles and was given on the stage of the Metropolitan Opera Company last season five times, to box receipts of $32,000 — which shows what New York thought of the Los Angeles work.

A good part of the opera is built on Indian themes, and is developed for the orchestra with consummate skill and taste. This will be the first time that it will be played by orchestra outside of the Metropolitan Operahouse. Mr. Cadman has made special concert arrangements and has given Mr. Tandler his ideas as to the performance.

The soloist will be Mme. Lili Petschnikoff, a violiniste who not long ago was in Russia, but escaped with titled friends to Switzerland and thence to America. She was not allowed to bring any letters, testimonials or music, but managed to bring her violin through, and has kept up her brilliant skill. She will play a fantasie of Vieuxtemps, the great French violinist, and her reputation is such as to promise beauty of person and performance.

The other attraction is the New World Symphony, written in New York by Dvorak, when he was there twenty-five years ago for a short period. There has been a great deal written about this work, as to the pros and cons of using negro themes as representative of American music, but the fact remains that its plaintive melodies and the wonderful musical treatment make this one of the most popular symphonies ever written.

The concert opens with an overture by Cherubini, an Italian composer, who was prominent in Napoleon's day, and who was disliked

The Bright Side of Sunshine Land—People and Their Doings.

A DEBUTANTE'S LETTER.

November 15, 1918.

Eleanor Dear:

Doesn't this peace news make one feel like pink petticoats and dashing hats and swanky shoes and a new style of hairdressing and all that sort of thing? And I'll wager we shall all take to full evening dress again now—those long-sleeved, discreet-necked demi--toilettes were all very well in wartime, when it was becoming to look a little triste, but twould be niggardly, indeed, to conceal any charms when the world is feeling so frisky again.

Oh, yes, and we heard some comforting things about the French girls when we met that attractive little English Mrs. Phillip Warren, who has been in active service in France in the capacity of a Waac. (That means Woman's Army Auxiliary Corps, you know. All the very nicest girls are Waacs or Vads in England—V.A.D. meaning Voluntarily Aid Department.) She says the French women are either much too frightfully modest, so that complete nursing, or anything beyond mere face-washing and pillow-smoothing, is too utterly improper for them, or else somewhat au contraire—and either way, they don't begin to be so sought after in war work. American doctors, for instance, sent out wild S.O.S. calls for English and American nurses and help. And, even on the recreation side, the English and American warriors showed a marked preference for their own kind. This is a real comfort to us forlorn maidens, whose pet beaux are far from our protective eye—although, of course, there are quite enough English girls over there to be quite dangerous, and with the generous leave that is going to be accorded the men now—well, maybe their shortage of masculinity won't be as poignant as ours, after all.

And isn't Washington going to be gay now? Maude Foster writes that all sorts of stylish diplomatic affairs are in the offing, and, with the nasty war safely out of the way, Mrs. Woodrow Wilson is expected to start some glittering White House entertaining for all the distinguished foreigners who will hover in the capital. You see, she has never had an opportunity to prove her charm as a hostess thus far, but it is claimed that she has marked talents in that line. Little trips to Washington are going to be highly popular this winter for those with a long purse and letters de cachet.

Mildred Landreth, who used to be a Midwick star golfer, is winning heroic eulogies in San Francisco, where she has been driving a motor ambulance under Red Cross orders and playing the ministering angel in the "flu" debacle. She and numerous other society belles braved all the terrors of the "flu" and went around into some of the most sorry quarters of the town, picking up pitiful "flu" cases, often finding dreadful conditions, a dead mother and helpless children, all uncared for. They have worked like heroines at this job, sometimes for sixteen hours a day, and were given the temporary rank of lieutenants as a mark of gratitude. It was really dangerous work and worthy to rank among battlefield deeds of valor. You remember what a boyish, jolly girl Mildred is and how she shone in all kinds of sport. She always declared she wished she was a boy, and even walked with a boyish stride.

Albertine Pendleton and Eleanor Workman have both received their orders for overseas service in the wireless telegraphy department, for which they have won diplomas. They are in San Francisco now, but very uncertain whether the peace news will frustrate their hopes.

By the way, luxury tax or no, stylish little Red Cross badges of rubies and diamonds seem to be a highly-popular present for nice young warriors to tender their Red Cross lady loves. 'Tis said that at least two of the charming nurses in Dr. Rea Smith's naval base unit over in England possess this nice kind of little memento to bring back and sport as a trophy of war in Southern California.

Mr. and Mrs. R. R. Goodell of Pasadena are going to celebrate their golden wedding in great style this afternoon, when they will keep open house for their friends all the afternoon at their Ridgeway home. They are such a charming couple, and Mrs. Goodell is going to look radiant in her new golden wedding dress, which she has planned with all the joy of a bride. That sort of a golden wedding sort of restores one's faith in matrimony, for they so obviously really meant "'till death do us part." The merry, insouciant divorcees miss a good deal, don't they?

The quite sumptuous owner of the yacht Nixie, Niel Pendleton, had an amusing experience last week. He found a yacht in obvious distress and gallantly offered to go aboard and locate the tribulations. With suspiciously expert skill he worked like a Trojan, so when salvation was attained, the rescued ship's owner, Mr. Thomas Ince, bethought him of suitable reward. Yacht owners don't usually know much about the technicalities of their craft—not usually—so he naturally presumed the Nixie's skipper to be a hireling engineer or something. Ahem! The situation was getting quite embarrassing as Mr. Ince fingered his pocketbook. At the crucial moment the rescuer remarked that his guests on the Nixie seemed anxious for news of their host, and a perfectly frightful denouement was safely obviated. An old lady in England once tipped the Duke of Norfolk tuppence for helping her with her bag, but His Grace respectfully tipped his hat, took the tuppence, and wears the pence on his watch chain to this day, the only money he ever earned.

Sidney Hoben, just returned from a long trip, is telling some naughty new war stories. A wounded man in the hospital was found to have a portrait of King George tatooed on his chest, so the nurse remarked on his peculiar brand of loyalty. "Oh, that ain't nothing, miss," remarked the hero, "I sits on the Kaiser."

Miss Constance Crawley is having a party at her new home this evening, which will be in the nature of a peace celebration. Her house is the rendezvous for the artistic set, especially the English ones, and she really has the nearest approach to a salon that Los Angeles can boast.

A bevy of charming young matrons are going to assist Mrs. Richard H. Malone at her shower party for Mrs. Willis Boyle, who is going to celebrate an interesting domestic event in the near future. They are nearly all girls who married about the same time and keep up a delightful little set of young matrons, with a very proper interest in each other's affairs. And this particular sort of party finds them mobilized to a woman—they have raised it to a fine art replete with every charming device.

Katherine Mellus is having a perfectly wonderful time in New York. She was there for the peace celebrations, which began on Saturday and lasted till Tuesday, and, Kathy says, New York just stood on its ears. She spent a few weeks in Boston first with Mrs. George Patton, who was Beatrice Ayre, and is now with Willie Clark's niece, Katherine Culver that was, in New York.

Volney Howard, naval ensign, is having the experiences of his life, for his ship is on patrol duty in the Mediterranean and he visits Gibraltar, Algiers, Italy and all sorts of jolly places, where they make a gorgeous fuss of American naval men. And he found Jack Fremont over there—can't you imagine the good old Los Angeles gossip they exchanged. Herbert Howard, the baby of the family, was right in the firing line when peace was declared. Arthur Howard is in France, too—isn't it tantalizing, they were not allowed to let each other know where they were and had to communicate through Los Angeles relatives. Douglas Van Dyke, son of Judge Van Dyke, had a thrilling experience. When on patrol duty at 4 a.m. he ran into his cousin, Peter Bangs, on the same dreary job, neither having had the slightest notion where the other was.

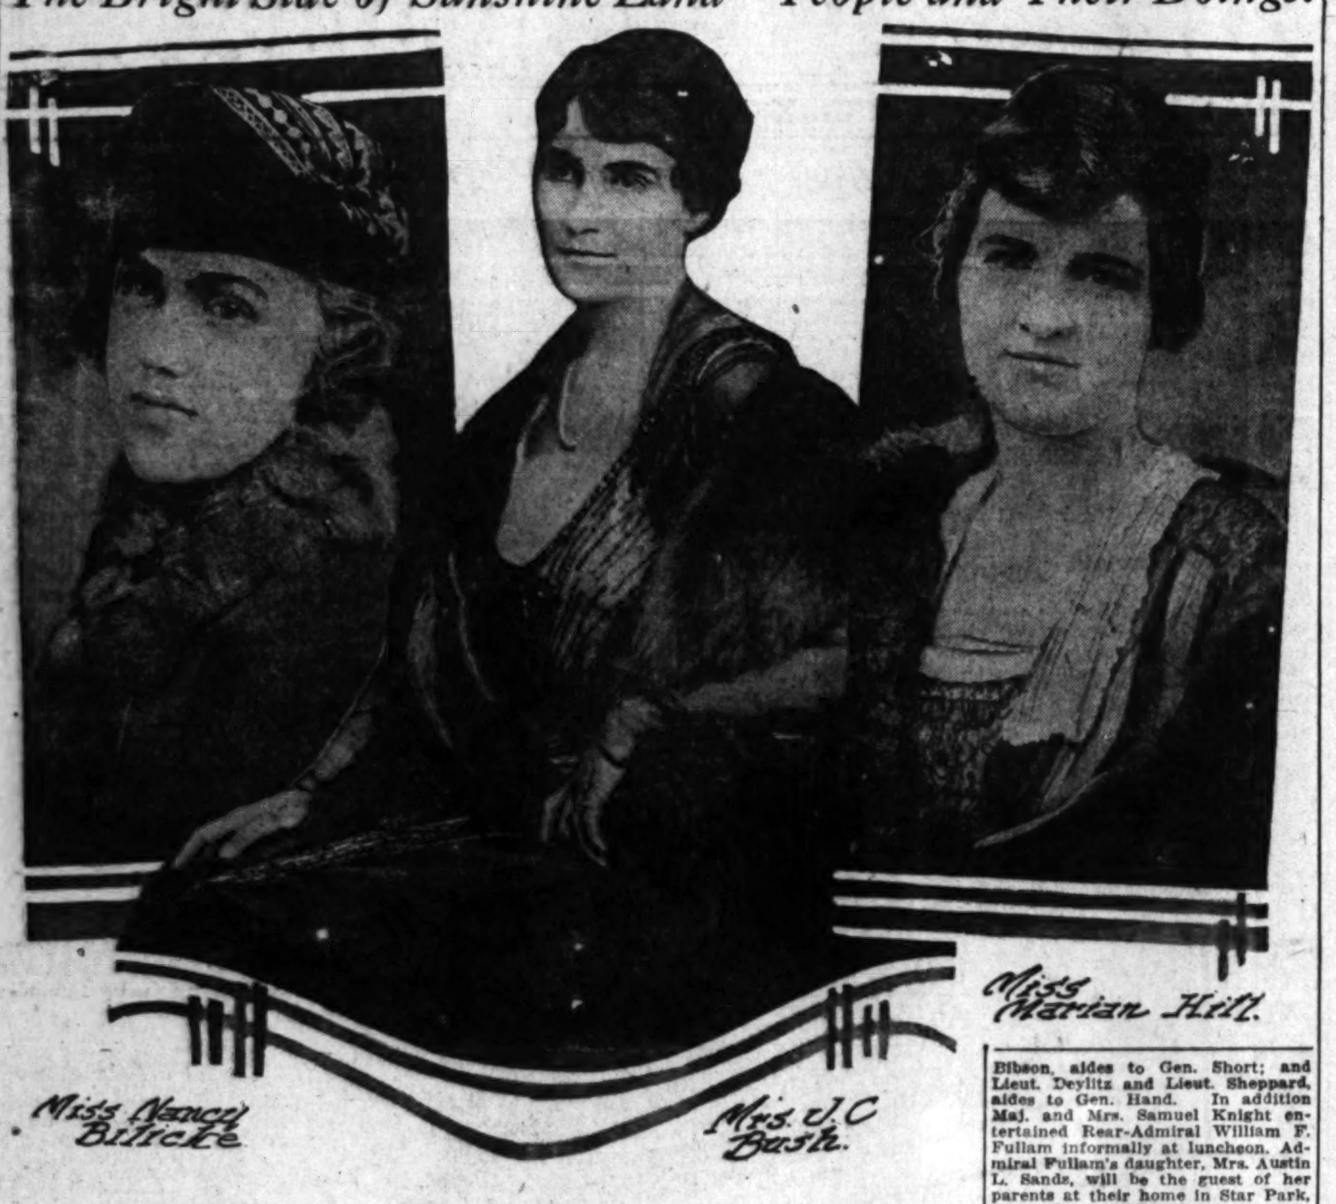
The enlisted men's club has been closed for six weeks, so Mrs. Michael Connell has been taking a "rest" by working herself to death having the place redecorated and furbished up. All those Enlisted Club dames have become so used to hard and persistent labor that they feel quite affronted when the "flu" attempts to throw them out of employment.

Sad news has arrived about Mr. Cawston's young son, George, who, on the very eve of victory, died of pneumonia in France. He is only 20 years of age. He was with the crack Surrey Regiment, a graduate of Sandhurst College, where the elite regular British officers are bred, and as a mere boy was captain of Charter House School, one of England's historic colleges, for four years.

Fancy Charlie Chaplin a mere uninteresting married man! I don't believe our Los Angeles social elect will pet him half so much now. A world-celebrated bachelor is quite different from a mere domesticated benedict. Oh, quite.

So long, cherie.

Your irrepressible BETTY.



Miss Nancy Bilicke
Mrs. J. C Bush.
Miss Marian Hill.

In Society's Realm.

Mrs. J. C. Bush, a charming winter visitor from Mobile, Ala., is visiting her sister-in-law, Mrs. Arthur G. Gage. Miss Hill, a graduate of both the Girls' Collegiate School and Stanford University, is to marry Lieut. Henry Lester Barret, and Miss Nancy Bilicke, a popular member of the younger set, is enjoying the enforced vacation from Marlborough School by entertaining a house guest.

SOCIETY.

BY VIRGINIA WOODS.

Fashionable Golden Wedding.

Today, from 4 to 6 o'clock, the golden wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. R. R. Goodell, will be celebrated at their beautiful residence, No. 1290 Ridgeway drive, Pasadena. After fifty years of exquisite happiness they hold today as a general "at home." The house will be beautifully decorated, and 154 invitations have been issued. Mr. and Mrs. Goodell will be assisted by their two daughters, Mrs. Sturgis and Mrs. Seager.

To Bury Her Husband.

Mrs. Ygnacio Sepulveda, whose husband, the eminent jurist, died here two years ago and whose body has been reposing in a vault, left early this morning with the remains, which she will permanently inter in a vault in the historic Santa Barbara Mission. Mrs. Sepulveda will remain in the northern city a few days. Accompanying her on her mission of sorrow was Mrs. Charles Chapman, her daughter.

For Southern Visitors.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Bush, charming visitors from Mobile, Ala., are with Mrs. Bush's sister-in-law, Mrs. Arthur C. Gage, at No. 647 South New Hampshire boulevard. They have come to California with their two sons, Curtis and William, and are planning to remain throughout the winter. Mr. Bush is one of the well-known bankers of the South, and is vice-president of the People's Bank of Mobile. Numerous informal affairs have been planned by Mrs. Gage, including probable motor trips to Santa Barbara and San Diego.

Musician Returns.

Miss Maude Elizabeth Richards, formerly the soloist at Christ Episcopal Church, a well-known local musician, has just returned from San Francisco, where she visited friends for the past five weeks. While there she was entertained by many members of the musical colony, including Godfrey Price, Theodore Phillips, Richard Evans and Walter Parker.

By Miss Bilicke.

Miss Nancy Bilicke, one of the most popular of the younger set, the daughter of Mrs. A. C. Bilicke, is entertaining during her vacation from the Marlborough School, Miss Dorothy Campbell, a schoolmate. Miss Campbell's father, J. A. Campbell of Seattle, is one of the influential lumbermen of the Northwest. Many delightful hours are being spent by Miss Bilicke and her guest at teas and on long horseback rides. It is expected that they will be the inspirants of numerous smart affairs should the epidemic ban be lifted.

Peace-Day Nuptials.

A pretty wedding was celebrated Monday, Victory Day, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis O. Adams, No. 114 South Vendome street, when their daughter, Miss Helen Hope Adams, became the bride of Robert W. Weeks, a Pasadena newspaper editor. The marriage took place at high noon in the presence of only immediate relatives and intimate friends of the couple. The bride, who was attired in a white serge traveling suit, was given in marriage by her father. Her sister, Mrs. Edgar A. Nance, Jr., was matron of honor. Immediately following the wedding, luncheon was served to the members of the family, after which the couple departed on a brief honeymoon. Now, however, Mr. and Mrs. Weeks are at home to their friends at the F. G. Martin residence in Altadena.

Exclusive Recitals.

Sydney Francis Hoben, the Canadian-Australian singer, is to present, at the homes of Los Angeles and Pasadena society folk, a series of exclusive afternoon opera recitals during the month of December. Appearing in Leoni's "L'Oracolo," "The Secret of Suzanne," (Wolff-Ferrari;) Mascagni's "Lodoletta," and Massenet's "Manon," he is to be at the homes of Mrs. Robert Ladd Gifford of Oak Knoll, Mrs. Benjamin Folsom of Orange Grove avenue, Miss Anna Collier of Oak Knoll, and Mrs. Charles K. Henry, also of Orange Grove avenue. The Leoni and Mascagni operas are both on the programme of the Metropolitan Operahouse for the coming season, the latter being sung by Farrar and Caruso.

Diplomat's Probable Visit.

Word has been received by Mrs. J. Willard Edger, who has just been appointed temporary press chairman of the local Parent-Teachers' Association, that Hon. Finley E. Johnson, supreme judge of the Philippines, who has lived there one-third of his life, and is the only remaining appointee of ex-President McKinley, is contemplating making California his permanent home. In a letter just received by Mrs. Edger and her husband from the jurist, he states that while he has not as yet resigned his position abroad, it is possible that he may do so at no very far future date. He and Mrs. Finley are lifelong friends of Mrs. Edger's mother, Mrs. G. L. Bobilya, of Wilshire, O., who is visiting her daughter at her home, No. 2812 Menlo avenue.

Coronado Festivities.

The lifting of the quarantine at Camp Kearny and at other cantonments proved the motif for a number of affairs at the Hotel del Coronado. Sunday evening Maj.-Gen. D. C. Shanks, commander of the Sixteenth Division at Camp Kearny, and his wife entertained at dinner, their guests including Mrs. William E. Malloy, their daughter; Brig.-Gen. and Mrs. Peter W. Davidson, Brig.-Gen. and Mrs. Daniel W. Hand, Miss Agnes Hand, Col. Glass, Maj. Hannay and Maj. Liebenwood of the British Military Mission; Mrs. Liebenwood, Maj. Cheffaud of the French Military Mission; Lieut. King and Lieut. Lord, aides to Gen. Shanks; Lieut. Gillette, aide to Gen. Davidson; Lieut. Gross and Lieut. Bibson, aides to Gen. Short; and Lieut. Deylitz and Lieut. Sheppard, aides to Gen. Hand. In addition Maj. and Mrs. Samuel Knight entertained Rear-Admiral William F. Fullam informally at luncheon. Admiral Fullam's daughter, Mrs. Austin L. Sands, will be the guest of her parents at their home in Star Park, Coronado, and Mrs. Robert G. Neustadt, wife of Capt. Neustadt, U.S.A., has also taken a house at Coronado for the winter.

Lieut. Mairesse's Departure.

Lieut. Robert Mairesse, the brilliant young Frenchman, whose advent here several months ago was a social sensation, left during the week for Washington, D. C., on his way to Cambria, France. Before his departure he was entertained at dinner Monday evening by the Lucien Brunswigs, and since enjoyed other affairs. He motored to Coronado with Mr. and Mrs. Walter H. Whiteside of Pasadena and their daughter, Mrs. Ruth Virginia Parsons, his fiance. He is fast recuperating from an attack of Spanish influenza, contracted while he was an aviation instructor at Ellington Field, Tex. After his return from France, which is expected to be very soon, the wedding will take place, although no formal date has been set.

Autumn Shower.

A pretty affair during the week was the dinner party and shower given by Mrs. Roland Bret for Miss Grace Goggerty, who is to wed Mrs. Brett's brother, Hugh Avise, of Highland Park. The hostess's attractive country home at East San Gabriel was gay with autumnal decorations. Large shocks of corn and golden pumpkins around the walls and in the corners of the rooms, were set at variance with the dinner table, which had as a centerpiece a huge pumpkin holding yellow sunflowers and ferns. Within it were gilded walnuts, each containing news of the secret. Following the dinner the bride-to-be was presented with a huge pumpkin, in which were contained many useful gifts. Those attending the affair included Miss Grace Goggerty, and Mmes. Grace Jackson, Frank Kobler, Harvey Young, Louis Nikrent, Hartley Hooker, Albert Lerch, C. W. Brett and Roland Brett.

Pretty Glendale Bride.

The ceremony necessarily curtailed by the influenza quarantine, an event which will claim the interest of their friends is the marriage of Miss Willie Louise Ferris to Harry Woodrow Wilson at Glendale, which took place yesterday afternoon at the home of Rev. W. E. Edmonds, No. 421 Cedar street, Glendale. The marriage took place in the presence only of a few friends and the immediate relatives. Miss Ruth Wilson, sister of the bride, was her maid of honor, and Harry P. Coker, Jr., was best man. Following the ceremony the party journeyed to the Victor Hugo, there to partake of the wedding supper. The bride and groom are now at home at No. 208 Louise street, Glendale. Mr. Wilson is in the administrative offices of the Santa Fe.

After Ninth Trip.

Flynn Loback, one of the first Los Angeles boys to see service with the United States Shipping Board, has returned here on a thirty-day furlough to visit his mother, Mrs. B. I. Loback, and his sister, Mrs. D. C. Hendricks, of No. 5208 Lexington avenue, Hollywood. The sailor, who comes direct from New York, has just completed his ninth round trip across the Atlantic on the transport Northern Pacific, which left the harbor a year ago manned by many local men. He has been the honor guest at several affairs, and he himself will entertain during his stay in the city.

On Robertson Tour.

An extended tour to Honolulu, Japan, China, India and Africa is to be enjoyed by a number of Angelenos under the direction of D. F. Robertson. Victory Dinner at Little Belgium.

A Victory dinner was given Friday evening at Little Belgium, the tea room of the Belgian Relief, No. 854 South Hill street. The speakers included Charles Winsel, the Belgian Consul; Judge Hugh N. Wells and Private Hagen, a Hollander, who served with the American army in France.

The work of the Belgian Relief is progressing with unflagging zeal. Mrs. Willoughby Rodman urges the need of clothing donations, as the workers are even resorting to the use of tablecloths and curtains in the making of garments to be sent overseas.

OUT-OF-TOWN SOCIETY.

PASADENA.

Pasadena society rejoiced this week in the lifting of the local influenza quarantine ordinance, which has prohibited the larger social affairs, theaters and other entertainments for a month. In celebration of peace, the end of the quarantine and a sort of inaugural of the early winter season, a dinner-dance was given at the Hotel Maryland last night, at which many society folk entertained at smart little dinner parties. Many officers from the army balloon school were present. There was dancing in the ballroom also, after dinner and many people dropped in then. Miss Kitty Phelps gave some classic dancing numbers.

There were a number of impromptu dinner parties and much gaiety at the Maryland on the night of the armistice celebration day. The band from the army baloon camp playing national airs, marched through the dining-room and lobbies, followed by everyone in the dining-room. The guests all waved flags and sang as they marched.

A wedding of interest to many Pasadena friends and friends in the Imperial Valley as well was that of Robert W. Weekes, a Pasadena newspaper writer, and Miss Helen Adams, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. L. O. Adams, which took place Monday. The romance began in the Imperial Valley when both the bride and bridegroom were dwellers in El Centro.

Another charming wedding of the week was that of Miss Helen Brown, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Melville Brown, No. 418 Elm avenue, which took place under a great oak tree at the Brown home on the thirty-first anniversary of the wedding of the bride's parents. The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. C. Loomis, pastor of Lincoln-avenue Methodist Church, who, by the way, left later in the week for Camp Taylor, Ky., to become an army chaplain.

Mrs. H. A. Andrews of Winnipeg, who, with her two charming daughters, are popular members of the winter colony in Pasadena, was hostess at a delightful dinner party at the Hotel Maryland, where the family are guests, on the night the armistice was signed. Guests included Misses Irene and Jean Ross, Miss Maud Andrews, Miss Marjorie Andrews, and Lieut. James Caldwell of the Canadian army. Lieut. Caldwell is a veteran of the big war and was severely wounded at Vimy Ridge, that famous engagement of the Canadian expeditionary force.

Mr. and Mrs. Phillip Schwartz also entertained at a dinner party at the Maryland that evening. Guests included Miss Frances Charlton, Spencer Smith and Mr. Plammand.

Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Miller, No. 185 North Vernon avenue, this week announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Eva Miller, to Lindley Fleck of Lamanda Park.

Potter Hitchcock, pastor of Neighborhood Church, performed the ceremony. The ceremony took place in the afternoon and was followed by a wedding supper at the Hotel Maryland. Later the bride and bridegroom motored to the ranch of Mr. and Mrs. Edwards at Glendora. The bride wore a traveling suit, hat to match and white furs.

Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Ridley, No. 1079 North Marengo avenue, are back in town after spending a fortnight at their cottage in Santa Monica.

Mrs. Benjamin Harrison, daughter of Mrs. Margaret Phillips of this city, is visiting her mother at the family home on North Los Robles for a short while, before rejoining her husband, Lieut. Harrison, who is now stationed at Dallas, Tex.

SANTA ANA.

Mrs. E. M. Nealley, county chairman of food conservation, is completing her organization for distribution of the new food pledge cards, starting on December 1. Mr. and Mrs. Harry Warne entertained for the newlyweds at dinner Wednesday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Skiles entertained with a family turkey dinner last Saturday evening for Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Skiles, who were married at Riverside a short time before.

What was planned as a farewell surprise party for Allan Maynard, who had enlisted in the heavy artillery, was turned into a joyous merrymaking Tuesday evening when it was learned that he would not be ordered to duty. Those enjoying the event were Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Bates, Mrs. H. C. Kellogg, Mr. and Mrs. Winton and family, Mrs. Maynard, Gertrude Maynard, Marion Doyle, Mark Todd, Mrs. L. M. Doyle, Mr. and Mrs. Irving Doyle, Harold and Frank Kellogg, Rose Kellogg Verona Cozad, Isabel Lopez, Nellie Anderson, Grace Haynes, Verne Booker, Harold Kyle, Malcolm Severance and Allan Maynard.

Mr. and Mrs. Martin Hayes celebrated their golden wedding anniversary at their ranch home near here last Sunday, a feature of the occasion being a turkey dinner with all the trimmin's. The couple were presented with four $5 certificates as gold pieces could not be obtained. Guests, who included only immediate relatives, were Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Hayes and son Kenneth of Los Angeles, Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Hayes and daughter, Bernice, of Santa Ana; Mrs. W. H. Gilmer of Santa Rosa, Mrs. J. V. Young Man, Are You Known as a Good Foot-Dresser?

Note the heel of this shoe. It has just the number of lifts men who know what's-what demand.

Note the toe. It draws in and drops to just the tapering point the fellows pick out whose shoe taste you admire.

Note the tip. Lots of length to give balance to the narrow toe. A thin, racy last, yet comfortable, and with real, honest-to-goodness style. You'll have to have it. It looks right with the rest of your outfit.

VAN NUYS.

Mr. and Mrs. Burt Lalonde and family of Long Beach were visitors Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Shannon on West Friar street.

Miss Helen Owens has been visiting the past week with Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Stahl in Riverside.

Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Woodfort of Shenandoa, Iowa, arrived in Van Nuys Tuesday, and expect to spend several months visiting with their daughter, Mrs. Mark C. Sutton, at her home on West Sylvan street.

Miss Katherine Whitsett was hostess to a number of her friends from the Girls' Collegiate School in Los Angeles, Saturday afternoon at her home on Sherman Way. After a delightful and charming luncheon, served in the patio of her spacious home, the guests were taken on a motor trip through the valley.

SAWTELLE.

Mrs. Mary Seeley of North Third street entertained at dinner last Thursday evening the members of the War Girls' Quartette. This quartette is composed of the wives of Civil War veterans, who were girls in '61. They are very popular and sing at many patriotic entertainments here and at the Soldiers' Home. The ladies of this quartette are Mrs. Sadie Huff, Mrs. Emma McCarty, Mrs. Barnhart and Mrs. Seeley.

The members of the Woman's Club and the Twentieth Century Club, though not permitted to meet on account of the influenza epidemic, are nevertheless busy. Those who are not devoting all of their time to Red Cross work are engaged in the United War Work Campaign, which is being carried on enthusiastically by the loyal, patriotic women of Sawtelle.

A reception in honor of Rev. and Mrs. Barron, the former the new pastor of the Methodist Church, is being planned, and will be given as soon as the quarantine is lifted.

INGLEWOOD.

Mrs. A. H. Badenoch entertained very charmingly on Sunday evening for the pleasure of her little daughter, Ruth, who had attained the mature age of 6 years. Some intimate friends and little playmates from Los Angeles and Inglewood were the guests. The usual birthday cake with candles and other "fixins'" was the feature of the celebration.

Willis Hunter, from the Naval Base Training Camp at San Pedro, is spending a brief furlough with his wife here.

Mrs. W. W. McCandless and son, John, have returned from an extended stay in Pittsburgh, where she was called by the serious illness of her father, who later passed away. She was accompanied home by her mother, who will spend some time in Southern California.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Eshelman, Miss Eshelman, Claude Eshelman, Leonard Bush and Mr. and Mrs. Evan Lewis and son, James, visited Sunday with Eugene Lewis, who is in training camp at Fort MacArthur.

If the "flu" ban is lifted, the Inglewood Woman's Club will hold the first of their long-deferred meetings in the auditorium of the High School on Wednesday, November 20, at 2:30 o'clock. The subject is Americanization, under the direction of Mrs. John Brewer.

The Red Cross hopes to be able to open up their rooms next week for work. As the workrooms are in the High School building, they have been closed on account of fumigation of the building.

Hugh Eshelman is the newly-appointed Food Administrator for this district, to take the place made vacant by Frank Parent, who has left for overseas Y.M.C.A. work.

ORANGE.

In honor of her son, Verl Murray, Mrs. Ella Murray entertained at dinner, at her McPherson home, a number of relatives. The guests were Elwood Paddock and family of El Modena. Owen Murray and family of the San Joaquin ranch, and Mr. and Mrs. Verl Murray of Yorba Linda. The young man left the next day for Fort MacArthur, having enlisted in the Coast Artillery.

In the fall a huntsman's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of ducks, to paraphrase the old favorite. In this instance the huntsmen were accompanied by their wives, and they returned home with the limit. Owensmouth and vicinity furnished the hunting ground and the hunters were Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Porter, Mr. and Mrs. J. V. Meehan, and Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Bush of Olive. The outing extended over a couple of weeks for most of the party.

GARDEN GROVE.

Mr. and Mrs. S. S. Harrison of this city have become the fortunate owners of Palm cottage, which is located at Laguna Beach. They anticipate many pleasant experience there, and initiated the series with a week-end trip to that delightful spot.

A highly interesting account of one man's share in the capture of the St. Mihiel salient by the American Expeditionary Forces was contained in a letter from Dr. Burns S. Chaffee written to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Chaffee of Garden Grove. It is inspiring, indeed, to read of the almost miraculous manner in which the streams of wounded men were treated and cared for as they were returned from the front lines.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Fredell, who have come from Big Piney, Wyo., to spend the coming winter at Long Beach, were recent guests at the home of Henry Bosey. They were accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Louis Travis of Los Angeles.

Business inspired a lengthy motor trip indulged in a few days ago by a party comprised of C. A. Emerson, Nelson Cook, E. R. Schneider, S. W. Gibson, Roy Gibson, M. M. Castleman, W. Russell and Arthur Schnitger. It's about 200 miles from Garden Grove to Santa Susana and return; and they did it in one day. Speaks well for Southern California highways, doesn't it?

REDLANDS.

The ban on all society gatherings in Redlands because of the influenza epidemic was lifted the first of the week and the result has been a number of delightful entertainments, some of them having been "holdovers" for two or three weeks.

One of the most enjoyable events was the reception given for the 140 boys of the Students' Army Training Corps at the University of Redlands by the Junior League of the Contemporary Club. The party was given last night at the clubhouse and began with a supper at 6:30 o'clock with about 200 seated at the tables. Following the supper came dancing. Those in charge of the affair were: Reception, Col. and Mrs. E. H. Cook, Lieut. and Mrs. A. Cunningham, President and Mrs. Victor Duke, Prof. and Mrs. H. G. Clement, Mr. and Mrs. O. H. Hicks, Mr. and Mrs. Halsey Allen, Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Dibble, Dr. and Mrs. C. A. Sanburn, Prof. and Mrs. George Robertson; dancing, Herbert Hubbard, Mabel Hubbard, Walter Johnson, Ethel Kincaid, Harold Harris, Mary Pottenfer, Volney Kincaid, Sylvia Allen; decorations, Louise Ford, Mrs. G. E. Mullen, Mrs. J. H. Alder, Mrs. Ott Suess, Mrs. George Hinckley, Mrs. C. H. Clock, Miss Pottenger, Rhea Hammett, Lois Ottway, Mildred Wheat, Frances Welton and Mrs. Louis Gill; dinner, Dr. and Mrs. M. J. Sweeney, Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Cherrier, Mr. and Mrs. James Wheat, Mr. and Mrs. Lyman King, Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Kerr, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Herold, Mrs. B. Hodge, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Kimberly, Mrs. J. J. Suess and Mrs. J. C. Williams.

Miss Hildur Swanson, one of the most popular of the young women of this city, and Theodore Pope of Yucaipa were quietly married in Riverside during the week. The young people have gone for a wedding trip and then expect to make their home in San Bernardino.

The first of the Saturday afternoon teas at the Redlands Country Club was held yesterday afternoon with Mrs. H. H. Garstin presiding as the hostess. There was a large attendance and informal dancing was enjoyed.

Mrs. Nicholas Andrews and daughter, Miss Carrie Andrews, have returned to their home in Redlands after a delightful automobile trip through the southern part of the State.

Miss A. I. Camp, in charge of the primitive weaving at the Red Cross Rug Shop, has a large class of the young society women of the city who are learning the weaving so that they can assist in this branch of the Red Cross work, which has been so popular. Miss Camp makes her own looms.

Miss Lydia Browning gave the first of a series of informal dances for young people of the city on Friday afternoon and it was a most delightful affair. These dances have been planned for some time.

J. C. Kimberly of Neenah, Wis., has arrived to spend several weeks with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Kimberly at their home on the heights, Kimberly Crest.

CLAREMONT.

An interesting event of the holiday season will be the marriage of two Pomona College graduates and former residents of Claremont, Miss Ruth Yoemans, whose home is now in Long Beach and Arthur C. St. Clair, for three years engaged in leading the children of American missionaries in Shanghai, China. Miss Yoemans plans to sail from San Francisco on November 30, and the marriage will take place soon after her arrival in China. Both she and her fiance are 1913 Pomona alumni and have many friends in this community. A series of delightful prenuptial affairs have been given in honor of Miss Yoemans during her recent visit at the home of the E. E. St. Clairs in La Verne.

Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Eichenberger are home from a six months' trip to Cairo, Ill., their former home. They were accompanied by their daughter, Mrs. Harry E. Joos and baby daughter, Dorothy.

Miss Marguerite Dodd, who was graduated from Pomona College with the class of '17, has left for France to do reconstruction work among convalescent soldiers.

Miss Helen Sturges, who made her home here during her high school and college days, is now in the yeomanette service, stationed in San Francisco.

Arthur J. Mertzke, last year instructor in economics at Pomona College, has arrived in France.

Miss Gertrude Tracy spent several days last week at Big Bear Lake in company with her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Tracy of Fullerton.

Miss Ruth Bartlett was hostess at an elaborate spread given in honor of her room mate, Miss Margaret Robertson, in Summer Hall, the college women's dormitory. About twenty-five college friends shared the pleasure of the occasion.

Victor Bird and Frederick Garrison motored to San Diego for the week-end.

Lee Paul is now in England, having been one of two Harvard men chosen to serve in the construction of the first United States navy yard abroad.

MONROVIA.

Dr. and Mrs. R. J. Cary and infant daughters are visiting with Mrs. Cary's parents, Rev. and Mrs. A. F. Skeele, at their home at Monroe place. Dr. Cary has resigned his position as superintendent of the Alameda County Sanitarium at Livermore and has received a commission as lieutenant in the medical war service. He will go to a tuberculosis hospital in Denver and Mrs. Cary will remain here with her parents for an indefinite time.

Miss Helen Nave of Los Angeles was a week-end guest at the home of her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Tripp of West Lime avenue.

Mrs. Lissie I. Taylor of West Palm avenue returned Monday from a delightful five months' northern trip. While away she visited relatives and friends in the two provinces of Quebec and Ontario, Canada, returning home by the way of Vancouver, Washington and Oregon. She spent a month in Oregon.

Mr. and Mrs. B. C. Kastka and Mrs. M. J. Rice, old-time friends from Lincoln, Neb., were the guests on Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Luke of North Encinitas avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel B. Elliott entertained informally at dinner on Tuesday for Mr. and Mrs. Claude Harness and daughter Claudia and son Ralph. Pink roses and greenery formed an attractive centerpiece for the table, at which covers were laid for four guests and host and hostess. Mr. and Mrs. Harness and family are to leave soon for Los Angeles, having sold the ranch, which they recently purchased from Mrs. Ida Calvin.

Mrs. Thomas Bynum of East Hillcrest boulevard is spending a few days at Ocean Park as the guest of her sister, Mrs. Sol Levy.

Mrs. Burdette and daughter Thelma have been in San Diego visiting Mrs. Burdette's mother, Mrs. J. H. Murray. Mr. Burdette was also there for a few days.

Furs
Quality

If you are interested in furs we want you to know something of the history of H. Liebes & Co., because furs are one article of wearing apparel with which the general public are not familiar when it comes to quality and workmanship.

H. Liebes & Co. was organized in California in the year 1864. They maintain a New York house for the sale of raw skins at wholesale. They have their own fleet of ships trading in the Arctic region, where they conduct missions, schools and stores for the benefit of the native Eskimos. They have fifty-seven trading stations throughout Alaska, Canada and Siberia.

The policy of the house of Liebes is and always has been the best values possible for the money asked and only one price to all. Our own designers journey to the fashion centers of Paris and New York, thereby being in a position at all times to furnish our clientele the very newest modes.

Our Government is now contemplating a luxury tax, which will affect furs as well as other merchandise, and we advise those who are now considering the purchase of furs for Christmas gifts to do so now, as the saving will be worth while.

IF KIDNEYS ACT BAD TAKE SALTS

Says Backache is a Sign You Have Been Eating Too Much Meat.

"DIZZY, NERVOUS SPELLS"

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it generally means you have been eating too much meat, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood and they become sort of paralyzed and loggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels; removing all the body's urinous waste, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells; your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, channels often get sore, water scalds and you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is a life saver for regular meat eaters. It is inexpensive, cannot injure and makes a delightful, effervescent lithia-water drink.

Mrs. Rosa Reither and two daughters from Oskaloosa, Iowa, who have been the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd R. Reither of No. 214 East Amerigo avenue the past month, have leased a bungalow in Orange and will spend the winter in that city.

SOUTH PASADENA.

On Tuesday, November 12, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Conger, No. 1103 Fairview, the golden wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. N. C. Michael was celebrated in the presence of all their children and grandchildren, three generations being represented. Mrs. Michael is a sister of Mrs. Conger. Mr. Michael was born in Indiana in September 1843 and is an old soldier. Mrs. Michael was born in Iowa in June, 1846. They moved from their home in Iowa in 1911 and for the past seven years have resided at No. 1119 Fairview avenue. It was regretted that Mr. Conger, who was away on a business trip in Iowa, could not return in time to participate in the festivities of the occasion. A splendid dinner was served at 2:30 p.m. and the afternoon was spent in many interesting family reminiscences. Mr. and Mrs. Michael were recipients of many beautiful and valuable remembrances. Those present were John C. Michael and family, Franz B. Michael and family, Los Angeles; Mrs. Elizabeth Gilbert, Miss Olive Conger and the hostess, Mrs. C. A. Conger.

GLENDALE.

A pretty and simple wedding took place on Friday evening, October 8, at 8 o'clock, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. I. Gilles, No. 117 South Belmont street, when their son, Eugene H. Gilles and Agnes D. Morris were united in marriage. Only the immediate relatives were present because of the restrictions of the health department. Rev. G. N. Eldridge of Garvanza performed the ring ceremony with the bridal pair standing beneath a large white bell and canopy of green ferns and pepper boughs. Yellow and white chrysanthemums formed the decorations for the front room while wreaths of smilax encircled many beautiful gifts on the dining-room table. The bride looked very charming in a white crepe de chine gown. She had been visiting friends in Springfield, Mo., since July and just returned to Los Angeles recently, which was formerly her home. She had a host of friends here who welcomed her homecoming. The bridal couple have made their home at No. 236 North Cedar street, Glendale.

Richard Cushing and wife made the trip from Boston, Mass., in six weeks' without a puncture, arriving in Glendale last Saturday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Walker, No. 1561 Vine street. The Cushings expect to locate here permanently, but are visiting his sister for the present.

Besides her regular duties, she will be instructor of calisthenics and military drills. Miss Kent surmises that school will be in session six days a week instead of five and that the Christmas vacation will be forfeited to make up for the time lost during the epidemic.

Capt. Edward M. Lynch of Damasco Court, Glendale, left last Monday evening for Fort Douglas, Utah, to report for duty with the Four Hundred and Third Engineers, despite the fact that the armistice had been signed. He volunteered his services in June and was accepted, receiving his commission at that time, but his orders were not received until last week. Nevertheless, he expects to go "over there" very soon as there is a vast amount of work to be done by efficient engineers, and that is the class to which Capt. Lynch belongs. He has served the city of Glendale as its engineer for the past ten years. During the captain's absence, Mrs. Lynch and their daughter, Jean, will remain at their home in Glendale.

Those present included Mrs. Louis Nikrent, Mrs. Frank Kobbler, Mrs. Harvey Young, Mrs. Grace Jackson, Mrs. Hartley Hooker, Mrs. C. W. Brett and Mrs. R. Brett.

Clear, Peachy Skin Awaits Anyone Who Drinks Hot Water

Says an inside bath, before breakfast helps us look and feel clean, sweet, fresh.

Sparkling and vivacious—merry, bright, alert—a good, clear skin and a natural, rosy, healthy complexion are assured only by pure blood. If only every man and woman could be induced to adopt the morning inside bath, what a gratifying change would take place. Instead of the thousands of sickly, anaemic-looking men, women and girls, with pasty or muddy complexions; instead of the multitudes of "nerve wrecks," "rundowns," "brain fags" and pessimists we should see a virile, optimistic throng of rosy-cheeked people everywhere.

An inside bath is had by drinking each morning, before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and ten yards of bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour fermentations and poisons, before putting more food into the stomach.

Those subject to sick headache, biliousness, nasty breath, rheumatism, colds; and particularly those who have a pallid, sallow complexion and who are constipated very often, are urged to obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store which will cost but a trifle, but is sufficient to demonstrate the quick and remarkable change in both health and appearance, awaiting those who practice internal sanitation.

Everybody Will Celebrate This Thanksgiving Day

With our hearts overflowing with such genuine gratitude as we never knew before; with more cause for real thanksgiving than we have ever experienced in the past—surely the coming Thanksgiving Day will be the most celebrated of all Thanksgivings.

Instead of clouds of war, the sunshine of Peace will illumine every countenance around the festive board.

And the dining room, that has been neglected through the long war period, will have been refreshed and renewed to reflect the spirit of optimism and good cheer, and to usher in once more the entertaining season.

Does not the importance of the coming occasion suggest to you the need of some long desired piece of furniture in your dining room—a dinner wagon, a serving table, a china cabinet, or perhaps a new side board, or a new dining table or new dining chairs.

And if there is such a need, why not meet it as a Christmas gift and yet have it in time for your Thanksgiving enjoyment.

The "California" shows wonderful selections in unusual furnishings—the very modest in price as well as the most elaborate. Comparison of values will prove a revelation to you and will in no wise obligate you.

A talk on jewelry as a
Christmas Gift

No gift can be more useful than a good watch, rendering as it will years of faithful daily service to the recipient—and we would emphasize the word 'good', for only a good timekeeper should be considered for a moment.

Then there is table silver, so fixed in its intrinsic value, and so lasting that its usefulness is counted, not in years, but in generations. Good table silver it may be said, lasts always.

There are also gifts embodying the use of gold and of gems, the former an unvarying standard of value and the latter, if one purchases of a reputable firm, destined to increase steadily in worth.

This jewelry store, like others of equally high standing, presents a very rare source of gift suggestions—each one typical of the spirit of this Christmas.

A Well Known Actress Tells How to Darken Gray Hair With a Simple Home Made Mixture.

Joicey Williams, the well-known American actress, who was recently playing at the Imperial Theater in St. Louis, Mo., made the following statement about gray hair and how to darken it:

"Anyone can prepare a simple mixture at home, at very little cost, that will darken gray, streaked or faded hair, and make it soft and glossy. To a half pint of water add 1 ounce of bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and ¼ ounce of glycerine. These ingredients can be bought at any drug store at very little cost, or any druggist can put it up for you. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. This will make a gray-haired person look 20 years younger. This is not a dye, it does not color the most delicate scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.

NOSE CLOGGED FROM A COLD OR CATARRH

Apply Cream in Nostrils To Open Up Air Passages.

Ah! What relief! Your clogged nostrils open right up, the air passages of your head are clear and you can breathe freely. No more hawking, snuffling, mucous discharge, headache, dryness—no struggling for breath at night, your cold or catarrh is gone.

Don't stay stuffed up! Get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm from your druggist now. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic cream in your nostrils, let it penetrate through every air passage of the head; soothe and heal the swollen, inflamed mucous membrane, giving you instant relief. Ely's Cream Balm is just what every cold and catarrh sufferer has been seeking. It's just splendid.

Dandruff Soon Ruins the Hair

Girls—If you want plenty of thick, beautiful, glossy, silky hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair and ruin it if you don't.

It doesn't do much good to try to brush or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop, and your hair will look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and four ounces is all you will need, no matter how much dandruff you have. This simple remedy never fails.

It is no easy matter to score a hit with a stone, but anyone can bring a garden hose on the can because he can see where the water is striking and move his hose accordingly until it covers the desired spot. Why Gray Hair

Is No Longer Necessary

Clean, Easy, Harmless Treatment. First Bottle Gives Satisfaction.

Having been tried and proven successful by hundreds of their customers, stores are recommending "Canute Water for Gray Hair" to those who wish of their hair restored. Owl and Stores sell it and all questions usually ask are here plainly an:

ABSOLUTELY SAFE TO USE? Yes. You may use Canute Water for Gray Hair without the slightest injury to the hair, scalp or eyes. It contains none of the injurious elements of the ordinary hair dye. Being FREE from acid, sugar of lead, or coal tar products of any kind it is as harmless to the hair and as ordinary water. It is for external

DOES IT SOIL THE HANDS OR SCALP? No, it will not. Our own patented process prevents it from staining the hands or scalp. Canute Water for Gray Hair is an especially clean, convenient preparation—not being sticky, or greasy. It restores so naturally and evenly that no one will be able to tell you are using it.

IS IT A DYE? Positively not. That is the thing it isn't. Canute Water is a simple and natural method of reviving the youthful color of hair that has turned gray from age, illness or other causes. Proof that Canute Water is not a dye is that it has no numbered shades—the same bottle is good for all shades of hair; while, as the reader knows, dyes are numbered 1, 2 or 3.

HOW IS IT APPLIED? Very easily. Just wet your hair with it and allow to dry in good, fresh air. Nothing hard about that, is there? Apply on hair once daily and day by day observe the hair becoming darker and darker. And by the time you have finished the first bottle the youthful color of your hair will be restored. It will then remain that way and simply requires a retouching once every week or two as the hair grows.

CAN THE DARKENED COLOR WASH OR RUB OFF? The color will not wash off. Shampoo the hair all you like—you may even use a hot curling iron, as not even that will affect the color. On the contrary, the more you shampoo the hair the softer and fluffier the hair will become. Remember, it will only be necessary to use Canute Water for Gray Hair afterward once every week or two on the new hair that grows.

Believe us, after a week you'll thank yourself for having tried it. Sold at the above mentioned stores for $1.10 a bottle. Owl drug stores and Sun Drug stores of Los Angeles. Friedman Canute Co., 18 E. 17th St., New York, N. Y.

The Seamstress

ON SUPERSTITION.

Ain't you afraid to have me to start in on that dress tomorrow? It's Friday, the 13th, you know, and my land, I wouldn't want nothing to happen to it.

Ma'am? Why, yes'm, 'course I'm superstitious. Ain't you? Well, I ain't hardly ever seen anybuddy what didn't have some kind of superstition. Sometimes they don't call it that and sometimes they don't exactly know it theirselves. Now, you take my Uncle James, when he was alive—

Ma'am? Well, yes'm, I do think that velveteen gives you very good service. I'd get the wide kind if I was you. I would git it forty inches, and I saw a piece what was $4 a yard, and seein' that you are so small it would only take about three yards for you I reckon, and you can make it like one I saw, and the head dressmaker told me all about it. Yes'm, most everybuddy is superstitious.

Ma'am? Well, I'd put a little moire on it. Yes'm, moire is worn right smart. Uncle James—

Ma'am? Why, this one had a tiny little petticoat of it showing about three inches, just in the front, and had one-inch fringe to finish it, and it had a sash. And Uncle James used to say that anyhow it didn't hurt nobuddy to be careful, and you might jest as well avoid gitting in trouble with the "hoo-doo" if you could. He says, says he, "Melia, I sure do hate to walk under a ladder, and ef I start out to go anywheres and have to come back, I always set down before I start out again! 'Course," he says, "mebbe they ain't nothing in them things—"

Ma'am? Yes'm, I was a-gong to tell you that when I got to it. Yes'm, the sash is of the moire and the sleeves was lined at the hand, but with plain silk and not with moire. I don't know why. And the collar turned over and crossed at the front and inside of that was a front of white georgette with rows of inch-wide white fur a-running across of it. The sleeves was long, yes'm, and they—No'm, Uncle James wan't, to say, old. He was pretty lively anyway you take it. He shore had a eye for pretty ladies. Well, as I was a-sayin', Uncle James told me how a woman with red hair could make it black. The darkies had told him their superstition about it, and, as I haven't never heard of anybuddy trying it, I can't say as it ain't so.

Well, you take one of the hairs of a red-headed person, and you take and tie it around the hind leg of a he frog. And then you take and put it under a big rock out in the big road and as soon as the sun gets on hit, it turns the hair black and the red-headed person's hair on her head turns black at the same time.

Ma'm? Yes'm, it is right queer. But they's a heap of queer things in this world what we don't understand.

Well and as fer lettin' a pin lay—you know how it says,

"See a pin and let it lay You'll have bad luck all the day."

Well, sir, Uncle James wouldn't no more pass a pin by than nothin', (onless it had the head to him.) He had a right smart of a "bay winder" and it was right hard for him to stoop over, and if he had of had to stoop over doing work he would of complained mightily. But he could always pick up a pin.

Well, they say it ain't nice to knock on wood. They say that they knocked on the wood of the Savior's cross; but now that this here influenzy has plum took the country, if they is any good in knocking on wood when anybuddy says they haven't had it, and it will keep them from a-gettin' it, why, where's the harm?

Every time I used to tell Uncle James that I hadn't never swallyered a pin yet, when he saw me with them in my mouth, he used to git right skeered, and say, "My land, girl, you ort to knock on wood!"

Ma'am? Why, you don't have to have the skirt wide at all. All you got to do is to have a little sham petticoat of anything that you want to, with a piece of moire ribbon around the bottom and hunch the velvet skirt up right in front. I'll show you when we git to it—

Well, once they was a girl right sick in our neighborhood, and she said she thought sure she was a-going to git wel, and I was the onliest one what believed her. Most everybuddy thought she would die. Well, she decided she wouldn't and she was about to git well, when one night along come a onery dog and begun howling.

Well, I run out to the front door and took a old shoe and turned it upside down and asked somebuddy if they couldn't find a hog jowl to set by it, like you have to do. But they wasn't one near it, an', if you believe it, the minute that girl heard that dog a-howlin' she begun to git worse and she died in a few days.

Well, Lonny (that's my husband) and Isabel Pearl, my daughter what's here a-visiting me from Canady, laughs considerable at me. They say that the girl would of died anyhow, and that the reason the dog kep' a-howling was because he was hongry, and 'course if we'd a-had a hog jowl he would of stopped to eat 't. Well, I don't know where they got so wise. I tell 'em that they'd ort to start out and make money lecturing agin' superstitions and signs and "hoo-doos" and such. Mebbe they would make some money—and mebbe they wouldn't get nobuddy to mind 'em.

But, if you hear me, whilst I go out to dressmake and got so much depending on me, I'm a-going to take pains not to offend no Evil Eye. It ain't no more trouble, and I'm a great one for staying on the safe side.

SAGE TEA TURNS GRAY HAIR DARK

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Bring Back Color and Lustre to Hair.

That beautiful, even shade of dark, glossy hair can only be had by brewing a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray or streaked, just an application or two of Sage and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundredfold.

Don't bother to prepare the mixture; you can get this famous old recipt improved by the addition of other ingredients at a small cost, all ready for use. It is called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound. This can always be depended upon to bring back the natural color and lustre of your hair.

Everybody uses "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through the hair taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair has disappeared and after another application it becomes beautifully dark and appears glossy and lustrous. This ready-to-use preparation is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire dark hair and a youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or preventive of disease.

DROLL STORIES.

Mrs. Robson's Guess.

"Robson, do you know why you are like a donkey?" the jester queried.

"Like a donkey?" echoed Robson, opening his eyes wide. "I don't."

"Because your better half is stubbornness itself.

The jest pleased Robson immensely, for he at once saw the opportunity of a glorious dig at his wife. So when he got home he said:

"Mrs. Robson, do you know why I am like a donkey?"

He waited a moment, expecting his wife to give it up. But she didn't. She looked at him somewhat pityingly as she answered.

"I suppose it's because you were born so."—[Unidentified.

Familiar with Hexameters.

Richard Le Gallienne said in a recent lecture:

"Sincerity is the only thing that will give a poet success. Technical excellence, such as Swinburnes, counts for nothing with the public. The public doesn't understand it.

"The public is a good deal like a pretty girl I was talking to the other day on the beach.

"'Of course,' I said to her, 'you know what hexameters are, don't you?'

"'Sure!' she said, I guess I ought to, I've ridden in them often enough.'"

Somebody was Shy.

In times of peace Smith might have been an author who had drifted into some useful occupation, such as that of a blacksmith, but just now he is cook to the Blankshire officers' mess. Smith sent Murphy into the village to bring home some chickens ordered for the mess.

"Murphy," said Smith, the next day, "when you fetch me chickens again, see that they are fastened up properly. That lot you fetched yesterday all got loose, and though I scoured the village I only managed to secure ten of them."

"Sh! said Murphy. "I only brought six."—[Tit-Bits.

Easily Arranged.

Speaking at a political gathering, Congressman George H. Tinkham, of Massachusetts, referred to the handicaps of the faint-hearted, and fittingly contributed this little anecdote:

One beautiful summer night, when the crickets were chirping in the grass and the caterpillars were dropping from the trees, John Henry turned to the charming girl who was sitting on the veranda at his side.

"Edith," he said, a trifle timorously, "there comes to me a thought—I might say, a fear."

"Well, what it it?" queried the fair girl, as the other hesitated.

"I suppose," responded John Henry, suggestively, hopefully, "that were I to steal a kiss you would have me arrested?"

"Perhaps," was the ready rejoinder of the girl; "but you could find somebody to pay your fine, couldn't you?"—[Philadelphia Telegraph.

Sarah Jane was Insulted.

It was Sarah Jane's day out, and she was comparing notes with Susan, from a neighboring house.

"So I hear you've left that artist's," Susan said.

"Yes, indeed," remarked Sarah Jane. "I couldn't stand the missus's insults. I hadn't been there a day when she said to me: 'Sarah Jane,' she says, 'when you're dusting off the studio you must be very careful not to touch the old master. It's worth hundreds of pounds,' she says. Well, that got my temper up proper. 'Excuse me, ma'am,' says I, 'but I've got a young man of my own and I don't want any old master, not if he was worth millions!' And with that I walks out!"—[Unidentified.

YANKS DO THE "IMPOSSIBLE."

Declaring that is the first time that a stone house has been moved in France, Sergts. Abe Griesner and Mike Murphy of Co. C have recently finished a job of moving a 350-ton structure and have set it down on its new site.

The French said it could not be done, and declared that the only way the road could be cleared for the new line of railway track would be to tear the house down. But the sergeants, with their detail of fifteen men, started to work with jacks and rollers, and soon had the house moving across the fields. News of the feat spread and the authorities sent a photographer from the French Academy of Sciences to record officially the stages of the work.

The house was placed upon its new site without a crack. It is believed that this demonstration of American ingenuity will save many stations along the lines where the Yankee engineers are building additional tracks and switching yards.—[Spiker, France.

FASHIONS AND FADS.

Cuffs are often of elbow length.

One-sided tunics are much worn.

Goldcloth makes an attractive vest.

Old china blue is becoming very popular.

The shoulder line is slightly drooping.

Jersey in a heavy silk net weave is much used.

Fashion says no more white at the neck line.

Panels have adopted tassels as their weights.

Many of the new high collars fasten on the side.

Many high coiffures are topped by castillan pins.

If a sleeve must have width, make it below the elbow.

A veil of tulle may be tied in a huge bow in the back.

Pointed frills bound with velvet ribbons are charming.

Collars are dark in color and bulky in general effect.

The newest skirts are a yard and three-quarters in width.

Frocks of velvet are collared with ermine, chinchilla or seal.

Some of the new skirts are weighed by eighteen-inch hems.

A flaring cuff of white embroidered linen is a new accessory.

Ostrich feather banding is very effective on overskirts of tulle.

Fine voile and coarse woolen combine curiously but attractively.

A double lace frill finishes charmingly a new elbow-length sleeve.

Sheer fabrics are trimmed with metal ribbon or angora wool jersey.

To produce shaggy fur effects use silk floss to band the bottom of skirts.

A new loose and stiffened collar stands higher in front than in back.

There are new silk stockings woven in links much like coat of mail.

The armholes of some of the new coats truly extend down to the hips.

The thirty-inch length coat of seal or beaver is belted with a suede belt.

Squirrel will be much used on copper-color satin duvetyn and velour suits.

Paris says that there is a predominance of grays, browns, red and black.

Paris vouches for the frock with a straight plain back and a draped front.

On a deep blue cloth frock heavy silk embroidery in copper is very effective.

The five-inch hem of an evening gown is finished with a band of jet or poillettes.

A novelty noted in furs is gray caracul trimmed with beaver collars and cuffs.

Some of the new skirts are so narrow as to necessitate a slit on the right side.

Bands of fine tucking at the bottom of skirts produce a braid-trimming effect.

A brown wool coat occupies quarters over a tan jersey skirt striped with brown.

Geometrical allover bead designs have taken precedence over all other bead patterns.

A narrow band of brushed wool may enhance the line of the hem of a woolen frock.

In suits of navy blue gabardine, flannel vests in dull gray, tans and white are used.

A black velvet hat has a high-pointed crown and a brim faced with white charmeuse.

Long loose sleeves of transparent material button from top to bottom on the inside seam.

Short coats feature duble pockets and sleeves sewed into the armholes without fullness.

Evening gowns are trimmed with inch-wide two-faced satin ribbon applied in rows and rows on tulle.

On frocks of satin or tricolette appliqued fur fabrics, also appliqued velvet, make excellent trimming.

A dress of heavy wool has no other adornment than handsome buttons and a small fur cape very short in front.

An attractive hat is made with a high, narrow crown of black silk beaver and a wide brim of pink angora wool.

In the manner that silk flowers were formerly used, sprays of small rhinestones are used on dinner gowns of black tulle.

Gloves are dyed to match brown furs, including all shades from the soft light brown in marten to the rich brown of kolinsky.

Complexion Beyond Compare and the Secret

How Beautifying the "Inner" Skin Produces Startling Improvements in Any Complexion. A Simple Method Which Never Fails.

By Valeska Suratt.

YOUR complexion is not merely in the very outer skin. It is deeper than that. It is in that part of the skin immediately underneath the outer layer. Complexion creams which merely affect the outer layer are as a rule very ineffectual. A method gaining wide use because of its tremendous success lies in the use of zintone, a powder which is simply mixed at home with a little glycerine and dissolved in water. This makes an exquisite cream. The zintone can be secured at any drug store in one-ounce packages. This is also a very economical method. By liberal use of this article, a tremendous difference in the complexion is noted in a few days by the disappearance of muddiness, sallowness, red spots, freckles and other blemishes.

MISS W. E. R.—Hair never falls out unless its vigor is affected. This often results in baldness, and before that happens you will notice that your hair has a dead appearance after being washed. Its growth has slowed up. The roots of the hair are sick, and no amount of hair tonic will as a rule do much good. The proper method, and one which rarely fails, is to use, say, an ounce of beta-quinol in a half pint of bay rum and a half pint of water. This makes a wonderful hair-root developer. The hair will stop falling, and bald spots will fill out. The hair will begin to grow fast and thick, and show great vigor in its appearance. The beta-quinol can be secured at any drug store.

"HEADWASH"—Your hair appears to need nothing more than to have that "seal" of fatty accumulation on the scalp removed. It is smothering the growth of hair. These accumulations can be removed in no other thorough way than by being dissolved. For this purpose use a teaspoonful of eggol in a cup of water and use as a head-wash. It will make your scalp marvelously clean. This makes the most luxurious head-wash you can ever get. Soap and ordinary shampoos are usually ineffectual for the purpose. For twenty-five cents enough eggol can be secured in an original package to last for a dozen or more of these fine head-washes. It will let your hair breathe, and it will make a tremendous difference in its growth.

MRS. G. C. H.—You can now dissolve superfluous hairs away instead of burning them off and leaving the skin red and irritated. Neither do you have to shave off the hairs any more. Shaving makes hair grow faster, and become more bristly, stiff and discomforting. Just moisten the hairs to be removed with a few drops of sulfo solution. It is absolutely safe, and is as easy and delightful to use as a face lotion. The hairs will shrivel up so that you can just wipe them right off. The skin is left beautifully soft, smooth and white, like that of a baby. It makes the removal of superfluous hairs a real delight, whereas before it was a drudgery. The sulfo solution can be obtained at any drug store. For safety and real comfort it is the only thing to use. It never fails.

MISS F. K. L.—Making the pores smaller has a direct and tremendous result in the elimination of wrinkles. The reason for this is that when the pores become smaller the texture of the skin becomes finer, and the tissues are thereby braced up. Coarse skins are usually full of wrinkles. Just try this method once and you will realize that you have found a powerful wrinkle secret. Get a two-ounce package of eptol from your druggist, and mix this powder with one tablespoonful of glycerine in a half pint of water. Apply this cream very freely on the face every day, and you will be astonished to find the difference it will make in your appearance of age. It removes the thousands of small wrinkles, crows' feet and even the deep wrinkles. Try it.

THE NEW.

IN STORES AND HOMES.

NOVELTIES, IDEAS AND PRACTICAL SUGGESTIONS.

By Olive Gray.

Up-to-datest:

To hurry to the soldiery booths to buy Christmas gifts and more Christmas gifts; and if you have no soldier boys in the war, to adopt one or more for gifting purposes.

To choose from among those handkerchief displays, the ones or the dozens that you will send as gifts, since handkerchiefs have become more than respectable as Christmas offerings.

The panel front upon the blouse may be either plain or embroidered, and may either match or contrast with the material of the garment; but a panel front there must be, if the blouse would be up-to-date.

The silhouette grows more slim as the season advances, and the still disputed length of skirts, is a matter of individual selection.

Fur is insinuating itself into the street costume in unheard-of effects, this season, but in effects modest and conservative, however.

Now is the Time to Buy:

Everything for a joyous Christmas and lots of it! Gifts for the boys over there, who have done so much—oh, how much!—for us and for the world; gifts for our boys in camp here; gifts for our own family, who have been depriving themselves of many luxuries in order to help win the war; gifts for absent friends; gifts for those near; gifts for those dear; gifts for those who otherwise for any cause, whatsoever, may not have a Merry Christmas without our contributions. Let us not forget, either, the gifts for the house—the home—the long wished-for article of furniture, of linen, of beauty. This should be to all, a Christmas long to be remembered with loving thankfulness.

Peace Offerings.

The peace offerings of many of the Los Angeles business houses come in the form of lowered prices for articles useful as Christmas gifts. The appreciation of such offerings is sure to come in the way of longer Christmas lists to fill; and instantly that the ban is off, the city will pursue its glad way in a joyous revel of gift buying and replenishment of homes.

Tea Treasure.

If all that is poetic does not arouse itself in your imagination when I tell you about the new afternoon tea preserve, you are not the girl I take you for! Rose leaves, violets, carnation petals, preserved in honey! Can you think of anything more delightful. Even if they were no more than a thought—just a sweet thought—they would add to the eventfulness of the tea hour—but when they are as delicious as flowers smell sweet, or as tea is in its aroma, you know that they are to be highly prized. They were invented, too, by an Angeleno. Not only as a condiment for thin bread and butter, are they so delicious, but a soupcon, in the tea—ah, cannot you taste the fragrance?

That So-difference.

Whatsoever your Christmas gift may be—whether it be small and of utmost practicability—even commonplace—the manner of its wrapping does much to endear it. If your parcel, when opened, brings forth an exclamatory, "Oh, how original! Different than anything I have ever seen!" the article within has already made its mark.

So fully is this fact realized that one of the stores, ever thoughtful in caring for its patrons, has instituted a gift-wrapping section, where the latest novelties and the most striking ways of doing up, are suggested by clever girls in charge.

Furry Gifts.

Never has there been a year when furs formed so excellent a Christmas offering as now. Everything furry for milady's wear and use is wantable and in view of fashion's insistances, is almost a necessity to those who wish to be among the well-dressed sisterhood. Local furriers are already very busy and as the Christmas days approach will, undoubtedly, be more so. And, by the way, let us not forget that we have in Los Angeles, some of the finest, the most expert furriers in the world. This is not exaggeration. Nor is it too much to say that there are now in stock in our city, some of the most perfect pelts ever owned anywhere. Some of our fur buyers have scoured the markets of the world for skins, and this during the time when other nations were not buying, gave to our furriers a rare opportunity for securing the best at lowest cost.

Boxing Hers.

Boxing the little girl's ears has gone out of fashion and now, instead, we box her hair bows. Truly, in one store which excels in beautiful ribbons, there is a fascinating array of made-up hair bows for schoolish girls. Dainty gifties they, and unless your memory is all too short, or your school days too far away, you may recall with what joy you welcomed the new hair ribbon.

Corned Candles.

Thought of something to eat, didn't you? Like corned beef, or cornbread, or cake, or muffins. But no! I refer to the most adorable little Christmas candles, fashioned in the shape of an ear of corn, each kernal shaped as perfectly as are those upon an ear of popcorn. Yes, in the very color of the corn—that clear, lovely yellow, with enfolding blades of green at the base. Candles always seem so Christmassy, and these are especially so.

Sets Well.

For Angela, I know her mother's gift! I shall not tell—nor need you do so, if I impart to you the secret. It is an angora set, in that lovely shade of blue so becoming to blond-haired, blue-eyed girls. There is the sweater—oh, so soft and woolly, and the scarf to snuggle 'round her throat, and the jauntiest of caps, with angora puff-balls as trimming. Oh, yes, the brushed angora, of course. But there are others where those came from—in fact, I saw a window full. Such colors—like rainbow fragments that had settled down—in that Frenchish store, on Seventh street. I found this one of the finest collections in the city, by the way; and when I learned that Angela's mother had found hers there, I thought her wise in the discovery.

Umbrellas Conservational.

"What," I hear you ask, "can umbrellas have to do with conservation?"

They have to do just this: The latest, handsomest umbrellas are made with bracelet rings to slip over the wrist so that when not in use you may not be obliged to lay the umbrella down—forget it and thus lose it—while you carry home your packages, according to that rule of war conservation which is still in effect. So you see, conservation is just the term to use—conservationing the umbrella and conservationing as to packages, as we have learned to do. And, no charge for the suggestion, an umbrella is an excellent Christmas gift.

How Live is Your Carpet?

Or should it dye? So many floor coverings are worse off than were they buried, for it sometimes seems as though carpets can never learn that, unless they are a live factor in the beauty of a room, they might better not be there. It was that way with a carpet in a certain French room, in a popular downtown store. It never did seem to know its mission—was too sombre, neutral—something lacking always! One day came a man with a wondrous offer. He would dye that carpet, and do the work without its removal—dye it right on the floor! And sure enough he did it! Over night—as one might say—and before that carpet, or its not over-cordial friends, suspected what was going on—behold a different carpet! Different it was, not alone in color, but seemingly in very texture, for its surface shone like new, and its every quality was improved.

Upon Fashion's Wheel.

The most suitable veil for the new feather toque is plain and of a dull color, but has a narrow beaded hem.

A becoming cape collar of point lace is caught about the neck by a little black ribbon tied in a smart bow.

Black crepe de chine needn't mourn, with a vest of rose satin, embroidered in white angora and gold thread.

Any bit of fine linen, provided it is eight or nine inches square, can be utilized for charming hand-rolled handkerchiefs.

A yard of plain black moire ribbon can be made into a pretty little neck accessory by adding colored tassels and embroidery on the ends.

We call those sashes daring that prolong themselves as trains.

A most excellent evening wrap is of light plush edged with kid.

Velvet is much used to brocade chiffons, radiums and marquisettes.

So many one-piece dresses are made of a combination of materials.

Gray jersey could not do better than to be embroidered in blue wool.

Filet lace dyed to match is much used on taupe-colored evening gowns.

Leather buttons are popular trimming for those well-tailored coats.

A frock of rose Georgette crepe is belted with gray-and-black striped satin.

Alternate strips of fur and broadcloth make one striking vest.

Musical.

by Bonaparte, but yet who became the head of the great French conservatory.

This should be made a great "victory concert," an outpouring of the musical people to testify to the interest of Los Angeles in "the best in music."

Soloist with French Symphony.

When the Paris Symphony Orchestra appears here on November 29 at the Shrine Auditorium the piano soloist will be M. Alfred Cortot, who in 1905 founded a trio consisting of Jacques Thibaud, violinist; Pablo Casals, 'cellist, and himself.

Cortot's career has been active and prolific as a musician and director, and it would not be complete unless teaching were a part of it. Thus, in 1907 Cortot, then scarcely 20, and without precedent in the annals of the famous school, found himself in charge of an upper class in the Conservatoire of Paris, where he succeeded Raoul Pugno and Marmontal, and where he equaled their successes. His student's edition of Chopin Etudes opens a new horizon in piano technique.

During the war Cortot, who had received his discharge, was mobilized by Gen. Galieni's Cabinet and delegated to organize in the military hospitals all such performances, concerts and lectures as were likely to contribute to the comfort of the wounded. He established studios for the wounded with the idea of functional re-education by work, replacing mechano-therapy by the manufacture of useful articles which, in their making, would necessitate, on the part of the wounded, movements conducive to their cure.

Fannie Dillon's New Work.

Fannie Dillon, composer-pianiste, of this city, has written a march which is called "Celebration of Victory, November Eleventh." It is in manuscript for the piano, but is now being put into shape for orchestra.

Gertrude Ross Writes on Peace.

Gertrude Ross, song writer, has a song of "peace" which belongs to her war-trilogy, written two years ago. The poem is by Corinne Dodge, and was published on November 12 in The Times.

Song by Mrs. Baker P. Lee.

"It's Peace-Time in America," a new song by Mrs. Baker P. Lee, will be sung and played at Grauman's at the opening of the new $50,000 organ, an event that will probably take place within two weeks. Jesse Crawford is the organist.

MacDowell Circle Celebration.

Miss Margaret Goetz will entertain the MacDowell Circle, No. 2, to celebrate the birthday of Mrs Marion Nevins MacDowell, at her residence, No. 677 Valencia, on Friday, November 22, from 4 to 10. Present and new members are invited to promote the growth of Mrs. MacDowell's noted and patriotic work at Peterborough, N. H., where convalescent sailors and soldiers are finding rest and health.

WARRIORS ALL.

BY EUGENE BROWN.

"I see the pugs have enlisted for the war," remarked the Old Resident, as he stuck a harpoon into an effigy of William Hohenzollern that was dangling from a lofty pole in Eagle Rock.

"Sure! They're the boys that can smell the battle from afar," responded I.

"The farther, the better," retorted the Old Resident. "Sometimes I think they wear clothespins over their noses to keep from inhaling the aroma of strife. Now that the war is over they all want to get in it, and they will do most anything except give up half the gate money. Hear the outspoken voice of our spearless champion, little Jessie Willard: 'Let me get at him,' he says, meaning the Kaiser. 'Don't try to stop me. Now that I have my money counted, I am going across on the next boat. I'm in that hurry I could swim. If you hear a lot of noise, don't worry. It will be me chasing the Germans back to Berlin. I'll take that Hindenburg guy and make him eat his own boots. I'm that angry with the Prussians I could take all their money away from them. I wonder what I could get for the picture rights of a finish go with the Crown Prince?'"

"Aw! don't be peevish," said I. "Don't you know that his wife wouldn't let him go?"

"Let her have the belt, then," snorted the pioneer. "Anyone who can stop the champion ought to have it. I think it's about time we had a lady champion, anyhow. The ladies have taken away our clothes and our jobs, and, by heck! I think they can lick us. I know one that can lick me, anyhow. I can hardly wait for the day when I can see a battle between Tootsie Fluffles and Minerva Grump for the heavyweight championship of the world. That would be something worth while. A woman champion wouldn't be always telling the challengers to go chase themselves and get a reputation, and they wouldn't always be wrangling for the long end of the film privilege. I'll bet if we had lady pugs there would have been a regiment of Amazons in the trenches long before the first battle of the Marne, and the war might have been over long ago. I haven't heard of any male pugs pulling out any medals for beating up the Kaiser."

"But lots of them did offer to do their bit," protested I.

"Sure! But they wanted two bits for every bit," growled the old skate. "Every time that one of our fearless heroes of the roped arena was dragged off to the war he turned up with a nice cosy job as athletic instructor at a home camp, with a delicatessen on the sidelines and a ladies' day every Sunday. Then your peerless friend Willard, after they got after him, offered to box a couple of rounds for the benefit of the fund to buy roulette wheels for blind trench soldiers, but he was so fat he couldn't get close enough to the camera to have his picture taken. He had been doing all his training with the receiving teller of the First National Bank, and he did most of his exercising with a pair of scissors. Now we are gradually being surrounded by a bunch of heavyweights who are crazy to go to war. They wore tauffiers to avoid the draft, but they are a determined and bloodthirsty lot, at that. 'It's me for the German army,' says big Fred. 'I'm off this minute and I'll beat it to a pulp. Tell your folks that Fred never feared a foe and that he was keen for his country's call. I have wired Gen. Pershing not to worry, as I am coming on the next ship. What's that you tell me? The Germans have surrendered? And just as I was starting? Well, if that isn't hard luck for you! I'll bet they heard somehow that I was coming and just naturally quit. If that isn't the limit! Well, I've just got to do my bit. I'll take it out on that Meehan tub of mush for the benefit of the army pinochle fund. No. I won't take a cent. Of course, there'll be a couple of thousand out for training expenses, but nothing beyond that. I've been training hard at the Klondike poolroom, and nothing but five sixes can beat me.'"

"You don't seem to think much of our fighters as fighters," remarked I.

"Say not so," exclaimed the old man. "At battling for his country the average prize fighter is the best press agent that ever stepped into a manicure parlor."

"Shucks!" ejaculated I. "You're one of these guys that would like to see John L. Sullivan go after the Kaiser with a horseshoe in his glove!"

"I am that," responded the pioneer, "and he would have done it, too. Neither would he have quarreled over his percentage of the movie rights."

"But John is dead," said I.

"More's the pity," replied the veteran sadly. "There's few left behind.

A few Japanese women have been put on the cars of the Mino Electric Company because of the shortage of men laborers, who have entered the manufacturing activities. If these women conductors prove satisfactory more will be similarly employed.

Arise, and Wash Away Thy S

THE ONLY WAY.

BY DR. JAMES E. TALMAGE.

Of the Council of the Twelve, Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day
Salt Lake City, Utah.

We believe that through the Atonement of Christ all mankind may be saved, by obedience to the laws and ordinances of the Gospel.

We believe that the first principles and ordinances of the Gospel are: (1) Faith in the Lord Jesus Christ; (2) Repentance; (3) Baptism by immersion for the remission of sins; (4) Laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost. (Articles of Faith 3 and 4.)

"Men and brethren, what shall we do?" Such was the eager, anguished, almost despairing cry of the humbled multitude who, at the first Pentecost following the crucifixion of Christ, were brought to a realization of their awful guilt through the inspired utterances of Peter, the presiding Apostle.

What shall we do? What can we do? Is hope yet open to us? This is the wail of contritely penitent souls, everywhere, always. When convicted of sin at the bar of his own conscience through genuine repentance, when at last able to see himself in all the repulsive pollution of his transgression, the self-accusing sinner yearns with fervid purpose to make all possible reparation and is zealous to learn and obey the conditions of forgiveness, if such there be.

To every soul thus brought into the depths through the benign though afflicting influences of repentance, to all who thus appeal for mercy and rescue, the answer is direct and prompt: "Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost." (See Acts 2:37-39.)

The promise of remission is as wide as the domain of sin; for, excepting those (and be it said to our comfort that they are few) who sink so far into the quagmire of iniquity as to be numbered among the "sons of perdition," to whom effective repentance is impossible, all may be saved by compliance with the requirements set forth by the Author of the plan of salvation. The need of forgiveness is likewise universal; "for there is not a just man upon earth, that doeth good, and sinneth not." (Eccles. 7:20;) and "If we say that we have no sin, we deceive ourselves, and the truth is not in us." (1 John 1:8.)

Is it not reasonable, and wholly in keeping with the ordinary ways of men in their mutual dealings, that some substantial evidence shall be demanded to attest the genuineness of the repentance we voice in words? Is it enough that the debtor shall merely acknowledge his obligation and express regret that he has not heretofore been able to meet it? He must do something more, or he remains forever in debt. The seal by which repentance is validated is Baptism in water for the remission of sins; for by this is the blood of Jesus Christ made effective to cleanse from sin. (See I John 1:7.)

Cigarette Hab

How to Overcome It Quickly and E

Unless you have been exceptionally careful the cigarette habit has a hold which you cannot shake off by will power.

The lure of the cigarette is powerful. Is it the nicotine that is poisoning your system, making you nervous, heart weak, dyspeptic, eye strained and irritable?

Are you troubled with sleeplessness at night and dullness in the morning until you have doped yourself with the nicotine of cigarettes or pipe, or chewing tobacco? They're all the same, you know.

Figures and Shore Marines.

Jean Mannheim can always be counted upon to give us an extremely attractive exhibition at least once every year. The versatility of his vision as well as the technical dexterity of his brushwork insure him our interested and admiring attention at each of these delightful annual occasions.

This year he is showing at the [illegible] Gallery, Hill street near Eighth. There are twenty canvases, some large, some small, six of them big figure studies of considerable size—the largest pictures in the collection, indeed, with the exception of three notable shore marines. The pure landscapes are very few in number, for the artist spent his summer in Carmel—and the shores of Carmel are not to be resisted by such a discriminating eye for the pictorial as Mr. Mannheim's.

To say that an eye notes the pictorial in nature is also to say that it sees the beautiful—one does not consider an unbeautiful picture, for there is no such thing in art. At all events, there is no such thing in the artist's intention, though he may occasionally fall down so lamentably in expression that the beholder discovers nothing but [illegible]. But such a complete defeat is rare enough, considering the number of pictures painted, and may only tend to prove the point I made.

Mr. Mannheim doesn't fall down, you may be sure of that, though he sometimes makes mistakes. However, as these errors in judgment are due to temperament, to an excess of artistic enthusiasm, they are easily pardoned, and perhaps even applauded. Better too much than too little in the matter of feeling. Better to be happy and stumble occasionally than to carry a long face and toe-in too strenuously. For the joy of art's creator is sure to come out in his work.

Mr. Mannheim's art, then, is always a joyous art, even though his subjects are often sedately serious enough. The six little girls and young women in the figure studies of the present exhibition are not smiling, but in their various occupations you know that they are happy and content. The young girl in white, for instance, who is bending over a huge glass vase of white roses, the texture of her skin as exquisite as that of the flowers themselves. Or the girl in the orange blouse and white gown who sits on the sand and looks out at the sea, her green veil floating like a gay pennant in the spanking wind. Or that other charming girl in a purple-pink shadow in a green and gold garden, busily occupied with her sewing and a white dog begging for more than two lumps of sugar. The scheme of color in this last picture is especially attractive, for the girl is in topaz and brown, and a richly-colored piece of fabric trails its iridescent loveliness from a work-basket on a low stand beside her. Here are color harmonies that sing like a lyric.

The little girls are as charming as the bigger ones. (We suspect that they are all the artist's two daughters in various stages of development, for we know that they have always been his faithful models.) The child seated in an awkward pose—and a very natural one—beside a huge basket of purple grapes, a bunch of which she is devouring, is vigorously and simply treated. More carefully considered, though not more artistically felt and understood, is the little girl in blue and white, barefooted, who is seated on a stone step and is happily fondling a puppy. The elusive charm of childhood is here, its utter unconsciousness, its beautiful seriousness. The scheme of color is cool and restful.

Jean Mannheim paints the sea superbly well. Its weight, its color and its movement all "get" him, and he translates these things into terms of paint with masterly strokes. I am not at all sure that his shore marines are not his best pictures, much as I admire many of his figures of children and young women. (By the way, does he ever paint small boys? Studies of gamins by him would prove highly interesting, for one feels sure that he would understand the "type.")

In the first of the three larger seascapes we see a rock on each side of the foreground, with the cool blue of approaching waves beyond. There is no skyline. The whole picture is consummately well painted, with ease, freedom and a full brush. In the second we have a breeze-rippled sea, with delicate mists enshrouding and beautifying a headland whose shadows are a subtile blue and purple, all under a gray sky and in a diffused light. The third picture shows us two steep and pallidly tawny headlands guarding a narrow inlet of gray sea, beyond them a gray sky—a canvas full of exquisite modulations.

The artist also gives us a number of smaller shore studies, all delightfully fresh in their handling, and all quite as interesting and lively as the larger canvases. The pure landscapes are few in number. One of the most attractive of these holds a gray sky over the vivid greens of spring, a picture that has life and moisture. Mr. Mannheim's brush, pliant and flexible, often tender and as often powerful, gives a rich plastic quality to the generous portion of paint with which it is always charged. The man behind that brush is first and always a technician, an artist who takes keen delight in overcoming the difficulties of his craft.

Some Beautiful Batiks.

Some strikingly beautiful and original examples of Batik painting are being shown by Carolina Hutchinson Bowles in her studio—the Ellen Kellogg studio—in Altadena. They are six in number, each a distinct scheme of color and design, and are intended for wall decorations.

Batik is a process of free-hand painting and dyeing on silk or cotton. In has been used for generations in Java and parts of India, some good examples of this oriental type being shown in the San Francisco exposition.

A recent revival of this old process has begun, though in a very modern spirit and with ultra-modern subjects. The Art Alliance in New York, which shows some of the finest examples of arts and crafts objects, featured Batiks as its two most important exhibitions last winter. A striking exhibitor is Miss Matha Ryther. Her exhibition at Chicago Art Institute's autumn show, a year ago, was a prize winner and was remarkably beautiful. Mrs. Bowles studied with her in New York last winter.

The Batik treatment of decorative panels of silk, or of curtains for some choice interior or sunless windows, or of a flat scarf or centerpiece for a table, is most astonishing in effect, and quite unlike anything heretofore shown by the decorators. Each piece is unique, and it would be difficult, if not impossible, to make an exact reproduction of any piece, as the delightful accidental quality of the dyes breaking into the pattern is one of the great charms of the process.

A piece of Batik can be treated in a way to make it appear a veritable antique, somber and time-stained, or it can be made to glow with most brilliant transparent colors. The use of the Batik process in decoration of houses is almost unknown here on the Coast, Mrs. Bowles being the first to show any examples, although New York waxed enthusiastic last winter over its lovely effects.

Mrs. Bowles's studio is at Scripps Corners, in Altadena. She is at home to artists and friends on Sunday afternoons. Go and find out all you can about Batiks. The subject will surely interest you.

Pictures by F. Carl Smith.

An interesting exhibition of paintings by F. Carl Smith is now being held at the Battey gallery, No. 294 East Colorado street, Pasadena. It will remain on view to November 24.

F. Carl Smith came recently from Washington, D. C., to make Pasadena his home. Although he is pre-eminently a portrait painter, he is showing some thirty-five canvases large and small, figures and landscape subects. The landscapes are from France, Holland, the Orient and various parts of America, including Southern California.

The first picture to greet you as you enter the gallery is a "Mother and Child," the mother gazing with unutterable love at the small bit of humanity in her arms as she wonders about its destiny. "The War Bride" has the same light of love and devotion in her eyes.

A goodly number of the canvases show us life in Holland—the canal country as it was before the war. One wall is filled with thumb-box sketches that Mr. Smith calls his snapshots of people and places seen in his wanderings around the world, each little canvas recording some elusive bit of color, some charming phase of life or nature.

The entire exhibition is interesting, and should not be neglected by the picture lover.

In a New Gallery.

N. C. Royar has recently started a new gallery and salesroom for pictures at No. 516 South Hill street. While the paintings have not yet been arranged quite satisfactorily, it is promised that they will be so hung very soon, and that the picture lover will find this place a pleasant one to linger in.

Among the contributors to the gallery's present collection are many well-known painters of Southern California—Guy Rose, Ernest Browning Smith, Carl Oscar Borg, Benamin Brown, Franz Bischoff, Bert Cressey, John Rich, William V. Cahill, Hanson Puthuff, Edgar Payne—all represented by one or more characteristic examples of their work.

The large figure study of Christian Von Scheidau, "The Great Decision," for which a well-known motion picture actress posed, will be shown for a few days only, when it will be shipped to Chicago for exhibition. Mr. Von Scheidau is a powerful technician, almost brutal in his strength, with a notable understanding of the construction of the human figure. He models exceedingly well—almost too well, in fact, for his enthusiasm leads him to overaccent. He has the plastic instinct to a marked degree and should do fine work in sculpture. The pose and the disposition of the drapery in "The Great Decision" is suggestive of Michael Angelo's noble figures. When Mr. Von Scheidau, who is still young, gets himself in hand, he will undoubtedly go very far.

Our Prize Winners.

In the fair recently held in Sacramento three gold medals for painting were awarded by the art gallery of the Women's Building, the winners being Hanson Puthuff, Jean Mannheim and Edgar Payne, all Los Angeles painters, for "Topango Hills," "Rising Tide" and "Companions," a landscape, a marine and a figure study.

First prizes in photography went to Ernest Williams, for "Glimmering Shores," a landscape; to Arthur F. Kales, for "The Garland Plastique, Poster," a figure study; to W. H. Rabe, for "Village Street," a subject listed in miscellaneous.

In painting and artistic photography Los Angeles men took not only first prizes, but almost all the second and third awards.

The Wachtels in Pasadena.

Elmer Wachtel and Marion Kavanaugh Wachtel, the eminent landscape painters, have decided to remove their studio from Los Angeles to Pasadena—for the winter only, however. The permanent studio is on the Mt. Washington slope, Los Angeles. The winter studio will be at No. 550 South Madison avenue. Phone Colorado 5532.

California Art Club.

On account of the influenza situation, the meeting of the California Art Club scheduled for last night was not held. All things being propitious, the next meeting—the annual meeting for the election of officers—will take place on Saturday, December 7, at 8 p.m., at the club rooms, No. 623 Park avenue. The board of control will meet at 7:30 on the same date.

NEGROES' WAR WORK.

Three hundred and fifty thousand American negroes, besides the 10,000 colored regular soldiers of the crack Ninth and Tenth Cavalry, Twenty-fourth and Twenty-fifth Infantries, that were organized during the Civil War, are engaged in the world war, according to Judge Robert Terrill of Washington, D. C. Judge Terrill is the first and only colored man to hold a Federal judgeship under a Republican and Democratic presidential appointment and was speaking for the colored assistant to the Secretary of War, Emmett J. Scott, who was unable to attend the opening of the Fourth Liberty Loan campaign opening at Chicago among the colored people. Among other things the judge said:

One thousand colored commission officers have been trained at the six camps, set aside for colored draftees. There are also 230 physicians and thirty-two chaplains serving in the army.

Twenty thousand of the colored men are working under the auspices of the War Department as tradesmen and mechanical artisans.

The six base hospitals occupied by colored soldiers are now being served by authorized registered colored nurses from the Red Cross. Colored men are also receiving a special military course at the big colleges throughout the North, East and Western section of the United States, the government defraying all expenses and paying the men a salary besides.

"WEAKLING NO. 7."

A Teuton Boasted that We Would be "Finished Up" in Two Months.

I found myself in the early stages of the war in charge of the feeding of the French civil population in the department of the Ardennes in the invaded part of France. My headquarters was at Charleville-Mezieres, with the "Grosses Hauptquartier," the German General Staff.

One evening in particular stands out in my memory. I was the only foreigner sitting at a long table of staff officers—old generals with the Pour le Merite of Frederick the Great hanging from their collars, colonels and majors with the iron cross. Although I was there representing a work of inestimable value to Germany, the free feeding of the people she had rendered destitute, I gradually found myself the butt of innuendo and subtle disparagement of my country. But several months in the society of German officers and under their vigilant surveillance had taught me a measure of self-control. I had become accustomed to hearing America held in contempt. Because we were ridiculously small, as soldiers and cannon are counted in Europe, by the same token we were despised, even taunted.

Toward the end of that interminable dinner of angular rigidity and clicking of spurred heels, an orderly brought in the evening's communique. My host read it aloud, while everyone listened intently. First came the military news; a succession of victories in Russia—countless thousands of prisoners, hundreds of cannon, mountains of booty. A whole Russian army had disappeared, it seems, in the Masurian swamps. I noted that chests were thrown out a trifle more, fingers reached for the slender stems of champagne glasses, and the eyes of the orderlies standing behind their chairs bulged with happy comprehension.

But there was more to come; my host held up one hand to postpone the toast to the victorious Hindenburg and continued. A new note had been received by the imperial government from President Wilson. It was the result of taking of more American lives on the high seas. But this last note was more than a protest; it was sharper in tone, it contained a distinct warning.

My host, a German Count, laid aside the communique which he had just finished. Leveling his malevolent eyes upon me, a guest and a foreigner, he said in a ringing voice:

"Come on America, weakling No. 7; we will finish you up in two months!"—[Philip Hemenway Chadborn in Atlantic Monthly.

WOMEN'S WORK AND WOMEN'S CLUBS.

BY ALMA WHITAKER.

Although the District Federation Club convention does not take place until April in Hollywood, and the State convention at Coronado in May, gossip is beginning to dally with speculation anent the elections. Who will succeed Mrs. Herbert A. Cable as State president? Who will succeed Mrs. Mattison B. Jones as district president?

As regards the State presidency, Mrs. W. A. Fitzgerald of San Joaquin is freely mentioned as being the logical successor to Mrs. Cable. She is the district president for San Joaquin Valley, and also created a very happy impression with her able report at last year's convention at Pasadena. But there are also rumors that the north holds ideas on the subject, and that both Mrs. Aaron Schloss, State vice-president-at-large, and Mrs. Frank Fredericks, district president of San Francisco, are being put forward. There is, however, a feeling that it is San Joaquin's turn to be represented in this high office, particularly as they are fortunate in an eligible candidate.

If Mrs. Cable holds any views as to who will succeed herself, she is maintaining a masterly silence on the subject, as also is Mrs. Mattison B. Jones, for the district, whose attitude is strictly noncommittal.

For the district presidency there are several names mentioned, comprising a selection of the board. There are Mrs. J. Bert Stearns, Mrs. C. H. Ritchie, Mrs. Jonathan S. Dodge and Mrs. W. H. Anderson. But Mrs. Clarence Van Graham, president of the Woman's City Club, certainly has an enthusiastic little coterie from her own club boosting her eligibility.

At all events there is quite a political flutter on the wing, which has helped to make the telephone interesting during the "flu" tedium.

The Peace Urge.

Mrs. Herbert Cable, in her capacity as State chairman of the Council of Defense, has sent out a plea for sustained effort in the committees, which must not be relaxed on account of the peace news. Many new emergencies are arising, all of which demand the best efforts of the organizations. Secretary Franklin K. Lane was responsible for the hasty plea, which declares that work must go on undiminished for many months to come.

The Friday Morning Club.

The first annual meeting of the Friday Club's Red Cross auxiliary was held last Thursday, when executive officers were elected as follows: Chairman, Mrs. W. N. Goodwin; vice-chairman, Mrs. J. Wells Smith; treasurer, Mrs. Arthur Wier; secretary, Mrs. H. H. Kerckhoff.

Reports of chairmen were replete with achievement. Miss Helen Wisler had a total of 125,423 surgical dressings, delivered at headquarters, to announce. Mrs. Kerckhoff reported 1687 garments made, and Mrs. Ashbrooke no less than 2686 hand-made knitted articles and 390 pairs of machine-knitted socks. Mrs. Judson Mitchell announced $7193 revenue from entertainments, and Mrs. Berthold Baruch $837 cash in hand. Altogether a rather sumptuous record.

The Story Tellers' League.

The Story Tellers' League is going to blossom forth with some stylish innovations this year. They are going through a series of programmes anent Allied folk tales and modern hero tales, beginning with a Belgian menu de luxe for the first meeting, at which Belgian music will be a piece de resistance in the hands of a Belgian refugee musician. The officers for the year are Mrs. Hadassah M. Fultz, president; Miss Hersa Lea, vice-president, and Miss Ida Iverson, secretary. Mrs. Fultz will be a war grass widow after December 1, for her husband leaves for Europe in an educational capacity. She expects to join him in a few months' time Miss Lea is the sister of the late Homer Lea and a teacher in the public schools.

The Women's University Club.

The Women's University Club is rejoicing over the fact that already seven of their members are in France and four more en route, the last of these being Miss Marie Lindsley, who left for New York to sail from there on the 20th inst. for France. The club is justly proud of these members, and happy to be represented by them "overseas."

The executive board held a meeting on Wednesday for the transaction of business. The club plans to hold three meetings in December to make up in part for the long recess; programmes for these meetings will be announced later. The following committees were appointed:

Programme Committee—Miss Jane Spalding (chairman,) Mrs. Walter Adams, Mrs. Joseph Carter, Mrs. Michael Creamer, Mrs. M. A. English, Miss Ruth Hutchinson, Mrs. J. B. Mersereau, Dr. Dorothea Moore, Mrs. I. J. Muma and Miss Elizabeth Wood.

The Million Club.

The Los Angeles Million Club Red Cross Auxiliary held their annual business meeting on Tuesday, at the clubrooms, 1025-6 Story Building, at 12 o'clock, the president, Mrs. Clara Shortridge Foltz, presiding. The new bylaws were adopted and the following officers were unanimously re-elected:

Mrs. Frank E. DeLong, chairman; Mrs. Phil McMahon, first vice-chairman; Mrs. Harriet Case, second vice-chairman; Mrs. Carl Stilwell, secretary; Mrs. James M. Hutchinson, treasurer; Mrs. Chase Terry, purchasing agent; Mrs. B. A. Rogers, salvage chairman of Windsor Square district; Mrs. W. R. Parker, salvage chairman of the Story Building, assisted by Miss Anna Ames; Mrs. A. P. Greene, chairman sewing-room, with Mrs W. H. Bowman assisting on Tuesdays; Mrs. Hubert Green, chairman sewing-room Thursdays, assisted by Mrs. Frank Johnson; Mrs. R. M. Thompson and Mrs. James Collins, knitting instructors; Mrs. M. A. Graves and Mrs. Jennie Carson, hostesses; Mrs. Charles Shickle, Mrs. C. L. Smith and Mrs. Leslie B. Bevans, Membership Committee; Mrs. J. M. Riddle, Mrs. R. H. Dunlap, Mrs. Robert P. Clark, Mrs. A. Lewison, Finance Committee.

The Million Club Auxiliary has not only turned in hundreds of hospital garments and knitted sweaters, but sold $31,500 Fourth Liberty Bonds, and was among the first to be placed upon the Honor Roll of the United War Fund, having given $147.60 before the drive was on.

The auxiliary has a very large quota, some 250 hospital garments to get out by November 27th, and more women are needed who can sew. Hereafter, the knitting instructors will be at the rooms on Thursdays and those wishing instruction are urged to come on that day. The clubrooms are open on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., and luncheon is served at noon.

Advice comes from headquarters that we have at least a year of hard work ahead and the boys must be taken care of until we get them home again. Tourists at hotels and apartments are most cordially invited to join in the work.

The Woman's Press Club.

Mrs. William P. Nye's Shop Talk programme at the Woman's Press Club has been transferred to the second meeting in December. Health orders permitting, Mrs. M. E. Johnson will present the "Achieved Results" programme on November 26, as arranged, when some dramatic readings will also form an attraction.

In the meantime, Mrs. Mary Clough Watson, the president, is at Long Beach visiting her relatives, Dr. and Mrs. C. H. Woods.

At Redlands.

The women of the Contemporary Club opened their year Monday with eclat. Lyman M. King, who for a year was with the Y.M.C.A., most of the time at Tours, France, was the first speaker of the afternoon. He told of the establishment of the canteen and restaurant work at that important center and especially of the fine work done by Dr. Park and his wife and two daughters of Santa Barbara. Mrs. Richard Emmerick of Berkeley, a former missionary in Turkey and Mesopotamia, who was sent to France on a special mission for the Y.W. C.A., was also present. Her talk was hailed as one of the finest on welfare work made here since the war started.

The Big Sister League.

A tragedy at the woman's training home last week should stir the Big Sister League to greater endeavor. Rose Davies drowned herself from sheer despair because she found it so impossible to get work and support herself respectably after she had made a solemn vow not to return to the life which sent her to the County Jail. After leaving jail she took refuge at the Woman's Training Home, but while the home is a refuge it is not yet in a position to live up to the "training" part of its title. They haven't even a sewing machine—and Rose had no change of clothes, no means of earning any. She went out cheerfully, announcing that she meant to get work, but fate was against her, and the newspapers told the tragedy.

Now the Training Home is the special protege of the Big Sister League, and it ought to be possible to make it rather more effective than that, even if the City Council does not contribute its aid to the urgent work. Two or three hundred bright women, with Mrs. E. B. Weirick for president, should at least be able to ensure a few sewing machines and some method of providing employment for the girls who can't get outside work. Perhaps Rose's tragedy will not have been enacted in vain.

The Southern Convention.

Although the Southern District Convention to be held in Ontario had to be postponed until January 15-17, Dr. Robert Freeman of Pasadena, who was to have been the chief speaker, is still on the programme, Mrs. Herbert Cable and Mrs. O. Shepherd Barnum will also make addresses.

Our Woman Judge.

Miss Orfa Jean Shontz had an excellent opportunity to prove her capacity this week, for with the absence of Judge Sidney Reeve, she held court for the entire Juvenile Department and acquitted herself with eclat. Several of the women's clubs are planning little congratulatory resolutions for her directly they resume meetings. Her own club, the Professional Woman's Club, of which she is president, is particularly proud of her.

Club Briefs.

The Crafts Study Club will hold an annual exhibition at the Clark Hotel on December 7.

The Canadian Woman's Club will resume patriotic work this week at their headquarters in the Hibernian Building, room 1200. Meetings are between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. and workers will find a ready welcome.

In the early days of my stay in Berlin, while my husband was an attache there, I became much interested in the German invalid insurance system. One day a man in soldier's uniform came into our soup kitchen very far gone with consumption. I asked him why he didn't go to some such home as the one just described, and he told me that, as he was too far gone for future military service or useful work, the government officials would do nothing for him. URGES WE DRESS FOR VICTORY.

t it is the woman's part to well and hold herself up to highest standards of beauty and during the period of the rather than to allow herself present an appearance fit only unstruggled defeat, is the belief Geraldine Farrar. In an interis one of the leading New papers, Miss Farrar has just herself thus:

Women should spend all the they can afford for new and clothes, in order to give work other women who need it, to themselves charming and fighting for, to maintain own self-respect and morale. should dress for victory and for defeat."

Continuing, Miss Farrar inquires: else is it except sheer af and pose for you and me other women here at home to khaki in an effort to look those wonderful men who are agonies in the trenches? want, should we suddenly stop of the rate to which we are and so take away the not merely of women in this but of the women of our

do we get our taxes and loans? Some billions of them from such essential industries of the clothing business. If woman in the United States buying clothes how could support the government? woman's morale depends a deal on the fit of her suit and becomingness of her hat," Miss continued. "It is absolutely right and natural for a woman to dress in pretty clothes, and if she is a normal person frumpy things make her almost as uncomfortable as unbrushed teeth or unwashed hair.

"Then think of what we owe to our men, both those who have gone over there to fight for us and those who are working for their country at home. After a siege in the trenches or even in Washington committee-rooms, do our men want to come back to women who are not charming in appearance? Sometimes people who argue against corsets say that the Greeks didn't wear them. That's very well, but we all know that God didn't make us as He made the Greeks. We need the aid of every artifice if we want to be beautiful.

"Even in battle-torn France the women have made a point of wearing charming frocks throughout the war, so that the men on furlough might refresh their eyes and go back with rekindled ardor to the fight in defense of beauty and love and romance, as well as of their country. How much less excuse have American women, in an undevastated, rich, strong, unwearied country, for letting themselves down in dress and appearance? Of course, if the time comes when we must have ration cards for clothes, as Germany has for food, patriotic American women will make no objections. But the time has not come. We are going to win this war, not lose it, and it is the psychology of defeat to put on a modern equivalent for sackcloth and ashes.

"American women must not be slackers," Geraldine Farrar ended trenchantly, "but neither must they be slack."

KEEPS HIS GRIN.

But "Lank Hank" Gowdy will Return to Baseball After the War.

Here he came, swinging down the road just back of the lines with the same old grin. He had been under fire, he had been hard at it for some time past in the big push, but the old grin and the same old gangling gait were still there.

War had been unable to change Lank Hank Gowdy from the old Lank Hank of baseball days.

"This game over here is all right," said Hank, "but for a steady job all the rest of my life I guess I'll take baseball. We are going to see this one through to a finish till the winning run goes over in the ninth, but after that I don't mind admitting I'll be ready to change the gas mask for the catcher's mask and take my chance against Walter Johnson's fast ones rather than one of the fast ones from Fritz.

"At that, Fritz hasn't got much more speed than Walter has, and no better control. But he's noiser and meaner, and I guess we'll have to drive him from the box, or help in doing it. Fritz won't follow the rules, and he wants to do his own umpiring, but we've been landing on him lately, and he's about given up hope for any lucky seventh. He had a rally going, but he couldn't keep it up."

Lank Hank looks just as he did in the old days. His uniform isn't the same color or shape and neither is the mask he wears, but the change hasn't affected that world embracing grin nor the cheery call along the road.—[Stars and Stripes, France.

THE HELPING HAND.

"How far that little candle throws his beams!
So shines a good deed in a naughty world."

Grace Humphrey, who tells in Everybody's, for October, how musical instruments can help win the war, says that nearly every instrument so far contributed has a story. "This came from a well-known illustrator, the next from a janitress in an office building, that one from a portrait painter; with this silver horn Gilmore led his band; Frances Starr gave her 'Rose of the Rancho' guitar. The Magini violin was played by three generations of Dodworths, and for years the children of New York learned their dancing steps from its one-two-three, and heard it again on Sundays at the Central Park concerts. This guitar belonged years ago to the sweetheart of a man who went off to the war in '61. Now the grizzled old veteran brings it to enlist for service in another war.

"'Please give my violin to some soldier,' wrote an aged seamstress; 'it has been packed away for twenty years, but my hands are too old to play it now.'"

During the absence of Charles Hodgson, editor and owner of the St. Paul (Minn.) Hastings Democrat, who has joined the colors, the Democrat will be published by the First Aid Club of St. Paul, composed of clergymen, professional and business men, with the Rev. C. J. Green, a Baptist minister, as editor.

Mr. Hodgson is a half-brother of Lawrence C. Hodgson, newspaper man and Mayor of St. Paul. When he recently enlisted his friends organized the First Aid Club and will look after his business until his return.

Juanita Dewell, 11 years old, of Dayton, Or., cut off her beautiful chestnut curls to help win the war. She then notified an officer of the National Security League that she wished the hair to be sold in Portland, and that the money be used in buying War Savings Stamps. Gertrude Atherton, the author, made the first bid on the tresses at $5. The child's explanatory letter is to be sold along with the hair to the highest bidder.

Even the Kickapoo Indians, who make their homes in the Santa Rosa Mountains, northwest of Monclova, Mex., are giving all possible financial assistance to the United States in the war against Germany. Members of this tribe of blanket Indians were awarded regular allotments of lands in Oklahoma, notwithstanding they live in Mexico. It is from these lands that they derive sufficient revenue to enable them to live a life of primitive luxury, such as owning modern hunting rifles and the best possible sportsmen's outfits.

Every three months a large delegation of Kickapoos visits Eagle Pass, Tex., where they are paid their money allotments from their Oklahoma land leases. When they learned that the United States government was selling Liberty Bonds to raise money for carrying on the war, the Kickapoos made a liberal and voluntary response. Much of their allotments during the last six months has been invested in Liberty Bonds.

BRITAIN STILL WET; DRUNKENNESS LESS.

REGULATION OF PROBLEM IN UNITED KINGDOM PROVES TO BE GREAT SUCCESS.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONDON, Sept. 30.—Drunkenness and deaths from alcoholism in the United Kingdom show a decline ranging from 65 to 80 per cent. since the regulations against drinking were instituted by the government three years ago, acording to Lord D'Abernon, chairman of the Liquor Control Board.

Abolition of the custom of "treating" and drinking on an empty stomach and the virtual extinction of the saloon loafer, were the main factors contributing to the growing tendency to national temperance, Lord D'Abernon told the Associated Press.

"The lines on which we have proceeded," he continued, "are to a large extent novel, and they have succeeded beyond expectation. Nor is there any evidence of growth of the drug habit, which is usually one of the consequences of too drastic interference with facilities for obtaining liquor.

"This happy absence of undesirable features I attribute to the fact that, while facilities have been greatly curtailed—the liquor shops being open five and a half hours daily, compared with eighteen or nineteen before the war—our arrangement of two periods, one at midday and the other in the evening, has been found sufficient by those who desire reasonable refreshment and nothing more, and those are of course the vast majority of drinkers. We are not out to interfere with them. It is the loafer and soaker, who would drink if he could from dawn to dusk, who interfere with national efficiency, and whom we are out to stop. I think we have succeeded in that."

Drinking on an empty stomach, he remarked, was one cause of intoxication which the hours fixed for the sale of liquor tend to check. Those hours are from noon to 2:30 and from 6:30 to 9:30 in the evening. Most drinks consequently are taken with meals.

On charts illustrating the temperance advance in England and Wales, Lord D'Abernon traced the decline of ills incident to alcoholism. "The delirium tremens and alcohol mortality figures," he said, "are of special importance as showing that there cannot have been any diversion of excessive drinking from the public house to the home.

He thought the abolition of treating had also contributed largely to the gain in temperance. "This measure," he said, "had as its objective the elimination of the custom whereby groups of workers after receiving their week's wages, spent a considerable part of it in 'standing their corners,' until each member of the party had in turn paid for drinks all around—to the detriment of their working efficiency and of the happiness of their wives and families. The wonderful sobriety of the army and navy is due in no small degree to the restrictions on treating.

"Altogether we have much reason for satisfaction. Under conditions which on previous occasions has led to a great increase of intemperance—the great demand for labor, plentitude of money, perpetual excitement and strain—we in this country are able to record an unprecedented decrease in intemperance. There has been a great saving of national efficiency, a great saving of life, and improvement in the public health.

"No similar progress has, as far as I am aware, been accomplished in any country at any period. The British public have shown their comprehension of the vital importance of maximum efficiency by accepting severe discipline in the best possible spirit. Now that the immense national benefit is proved, they will certainly never go back to pre-war conditions."

CAN RUSSIA BE SAVED?

Brilliant Character Study of the Russian Peasant Who Needs Our Help.

BY INNA DEMENS.

[Miss Demens's novel, "He Who Breaks," has been published but a short while and has attracted wide and favorable attention among the critics as a penetrating study of the artistic temperament and a fearless, vivid analysis of sex conflict.—Editor.]

Inna Demens,
Author of "He Who Breaks." Dodd, Mead & Co.

All Russians are from Missouri, that is to say, they must be shown. It is an inherent trait that in the peasant manifests itself as suspicion, and in the upper classes becomes rank skepticism. A Russian instinctively doubts all things under the sun; but he is also temperamentally very impressionable and malleable; and once won his confidence is inclined to be childlike in his gullibility. He is at the same time a rank materialist and an idealist; the greatest autocrat and the most natural of democrats; he loves ease, and yet has reserve powers of mental and physical endurance that are the heritage of his oriental fatalism; what must be will be. It is this magnificent disregard of hindering detail no less than his patient acceptance of the inexorable sequence of events, that is his greatest strength and his most fatal weakness. At his best, he will attain to the stars; for the Russian, his face once turned to the goal, will, not infrequently, by the simple expedient of ignoring them, overcome obstacles that are sufficient to halt a less indomitable or a more far-seeing people; yet he is quite as likely to take an ignominous fall over a pebble that, had he but seen it, he could easily have kicked out of his way with the toe of his heavy boot.

Thus Kerensky, whom circumstance rather than any personal fitness had tossed to the top of the seething wave that, for the moment, was the will of the Russian people, holding blindly or wilfully (who can judge?) to the path he had elected to follow, refused to see that an academic principle, formulated in all sincerity, was not applicable to the actual situation. Nor did he see that the emergency presented its own solution, and that a people suddenly freed from all restraint more than ever needed a firm hand, the guidance of a leader who understood their dire need and comprehended their purposes. Moved by a common Russian failing, compounded of pure idealism and sheer stubbornness, he sought to uphold an idea at the cost of pressing reality. And because Kerensky refused, from whatever motives, to compromise his avowed faith, and betrayed the people whose national destiny a caprice of fate had thrust into his hands, the Russian people is today a lost nation crying in the wilderness.

LENINE AND TROTZKY.

It is worse than folly to try to impose upon a people an ideal that is not of their genius, and therefore incomprehensible to them. Unbridled license was the inevitable result of Kerensky's policy of dallying with the ideas in the face of a threatening conflagration. Lenine and Trotzky had, in reality, nothing to offer that they could give the people, but they had at least something tangible—the spoliation of the classes—to dangle before the ever-reaching hands of the masses. Land, to the Russian peasant, is the end and aim of his existence, and it was land that the Bolshevik leaders promised—land which does not exist, to be sure; but what, after all, did that matter. At the beginning of the revolution, there were 80,000,000 acres of land in private ownership, while there were over 100,000,000 of the Russian people. Ignoring this detail, the masses got their teeth into this new and distracting bait; and the insidious poison of German propaganda did the rest.

On the whole, humanity is no better than it is forced to be, nor civilization proof against any real strain upon it.

Ignorant of its own strength and its weakness, any force that is suddenly unleashed will of necessity wreak dire hurt upon itself and whatever else it comes in contact with. Just so with the great mass of the Russian people. What could they know of freedom save to abuse it, or of justice to their fellow-man, when they know not the meaning of the words for themselves? Shorn of all restraint and incited thereto by soldiers who had already had a taste of blood-letting, the misguided, or rather unguided masses, naturally enough ran amuck, venting their passions upon the nearest object—and burned and murdered and pillaged. They recognized but one principle; you were either with them or against them; you must either kill or be killed.

NEITHER FOOL NOR COWARD.

In reality, Bolshevism is a highwayman who has gotten the drop on a war-weary and duped people. The red terror is no more the spontaneous expression of their needs and purposes than was autocracy itself. It was thrust upon them by threats and promises—a thing as alien to them as the Brest-Litovsk peace. Nonetheless, their natural enemy, the Germans, following hard upon the heels of the Bolsheviki, became for the moment their ardent friends and inciters; and when it was too late, or all but too late, Russia realized that her German friend had both hands in her pockets, and the wholesale grab was all but consummated. But not quite, for when the peasant saw with his own eyes that his grain was being carted away, he set fire to it, and turned a menacing hand against his erstwhile German friend and would-be despoiler. In a word, he had to see for himself; but once he saw, he knew what had to be done, and is more and more doing it. For if the Russian peasant is ignorant and suspicious, he is neither a fool nor a coward. It is well to remember this. And that hope for the future lies in the fact that Bolshevism failed because it was coercion from the outside and not a spontaneous movement on the part of the people themselves. At the same time, until the peasants realize that all of the Bolshevik promises are nothing but humbug, it is useless to look for a betterment of conditions. It will take time—years—for the peasants to see and realize that without a strong central government they cannot exist. At present the country is in an unrealizable condition of chaos. There are half a dozen Socialist factions fighting among themselves and each other, and thus prolonging the life of Bolshevism. Practically each town and village has a so-called government of its own. There is no law, no order; while from 15,000,000 to 20,000,000 unoccupied soldiers add to the general demoralization.

DOESN'T LIKE ADVICE.

It would take an enormous army to bring peace and order out of such anarchy. Therefore the impulse of regeneration must come from the Russian people themselves, if it is to be of lasting value. Ignorant and suspicious, the Russian peasant is yet clever enough in his own canny way, nor does he take kindly to outside advice. He has no standards of comparison; he believes his way is the best because he knows no other. And his way, of necessity, has had to be the hardest, the most bitter and least productive imaginable. Just in proportion to his backwardness will he be slow and wary to accept new standards. Moreover, the racial temperament does not take kindly to innovations. Therefore, it behooves any nation offering Russia the hand of fellowship, to be very sure that the benefits of that friendship will be mutual and genuine. Almost inevitably, somebody other than the peasant will profit largely by the conditions now existing in Russia. A wisely-concluded peace will eliminate Germany from the possibilities; not only her army from Russian soil, but the equal menace of her influence and prestige. And Germany, of course, means German commerce. For, of course, commerce is the crux of the whole matter.

To help Russia rid herself of her enemy—free her soil from German armies and purge her body-politic from Bolshevism—the nations of the world will be safeguarding themselves as well as doing Russia a good turn; and particularly will the United States profit by a wise and timely policy to win Russia's good will.

THE SOUL OF A PEOPLE.

The soul of a people is incorruptible, else surely Russia had long ago been ruined past any hope of help. The people are slowly but surely returning to their senses. They are turning against the Bolsheviki. They are trying to drive out the Germans. It becomes more and more apparent that it is only a matter of time—two, three or five years—before Russia shakes herself free from this mad beast of anarchy tearing at her vitals today. And in the days to come she will need everything—the sustaining sympathy of friendship that is not altogether self-seeking, no less than the tangible exchanges of trade and commerce that are mutually beneficial. For the Germans, once driven out of Russia, and Bolshevism exterminated, Russia will have to be fed and clothed, her factories and railroads rebuilt, and her land tilled. All this will keep a great many heads, and a very great many hands, busy for a long time to come. The United States will have at her command after the war the greatest resources for accomplishment. Her industries remain intact, her man power almost untouched. And helping Russia to rehabilitate herself, she will naturally be helping herself. But Germany and the Bolsheviki happily disposed of, there will be other, and great difficulties, yet to overcome, before any foreign nation feels itself welcome and at home in Russia. Racial differences, temperamental and traditional, will of necessity remain incomprehensible between different peoples, and any stranger within her gates must remember that it is not the time nor the occasion for hasty, provocative activity, impatient for immediate returns. Physical inertia is one of the characteristics of the Russian, and that one thing alone will prove very irritating to the more nervous and restless American, for instance. It will be impossible to get things done between trains, as it were. But on the whole, it would seem that Russian and American characteristics happily supplement each other, while materially each nation has something the other needs and wants; American efficiency and initiative should find ample scope for its creative powers in a country whose vast natural resources have never been adequately utilized, while Russia would necessarily profit by a modernization of her industrial and agricultural methods.

It is reported that leading Chinese merchants in Tientsin are forming a company for the manufacture of soda, the natural salts of which are very abundant in the province (Chihli.) It is calculated that at the present high price of imported soda the proposed factory, the cost of which is estimated at $300,000, can show a profit of $650,000 a year, or over twice the cost of the plant.

HUN MUST SETTLE THE SAILOR'S SCO

The poem follows:

One more plucky old ship

Six more widows about the
One more little account to
And if she'd gone down to a decent
It's little there'd be to pay,
But, God, I'll do what a man can
To punish the likes of they.

Oh, never a Fritz shall sail
In a ship that sails with me;
Never a box or bale
That smells of Germany.
Never the likes of they Shall soil the English shore
Till the seamen of England say:
"You've settled the seamen's

I used to think that the sailor
Whatever his alien breed might be
Was somehow built on a
And much of a piece with you and
But men who laugh when a good
Are made of a different clay,
And I'd sail with the scum of the towns,
But not with the likes of they.

No, never a Fritz shall sail
In a ship that sails with me;
Never a box or bale
That smells of Germany,
Never the likes of me
Shall touch the German shore
Till men who have shamed the se
Have settled the seamen's score.

Easy, maybe, will the world forg
The dirtiest work that there
The kings may pardon, the priests
The carrion thing they now call
But the man who's clung to a derelict
And watched for a sail all day,
He won't forget when there ain't
To HELL with the likes of they.

So never a Fritz shall sail
In a ship that sails with me;
Never a box or bale
That smells of Germany.
Never can I or you
Forgive those sons of Cain
Till the dead have had their
And the seas are clean again.

"MUSIC HAS HELPED WIN THE WAR"

MUSIC
—an Essential in War and Peace

(C) By C. M. Tremaine

TO THE WIFE AND MOTHER

Music brings rest and contentment, joy and relaxation, and that all-important change of thought

As one of the poets has said, "Music washes away from the soul the dust of every-day life." Do you realize the great need for music in the home in these days of increased effort? Think of the wife at home, busy with her household work and stealing every moment she can for the Red Cross and other war work.

Father needs music to brush the cobwebs out of his tired brain or iron the kinks from his weary muscles. The children need music for a hundred reasons.

But perhaps the wife and mother needs it more than anyone else, for her nerves may be a little more tired and her muscles a little more weary, and perhaps there is more monotony in her life than is the case with other members of the family.

Music is the greatest boon you can give her. Sidney Lanier, the poet, the Christian, the greatest flute-player of all time, said:

"To make a home out of a household, given the raw materials—to-wit: wife, children, a friend or two and a house—two other things are necessary. These are a good fire—and MUSIC. And inasmuch as we can do without the fire half the year, I say MUSIC is the one essential."

Fortunately music benefits every member of the family. If you would lighten the burden of your wife; if you would brighten the atmosphere of the home; if you would bring pleasure and relaxation to the entire household, bring the joy of music into your home.

There is no reason why anyone should be without music. The cost is small compared to the benefits derived. The terms are easy.

With the development of the phonograph and player-piano, the musical literature of the world has become accessible to the skilled and unskilled alike.

The latest war song and the popular dance are always ready to respond to your mood.

"EDUCATION OF HENRY ADAMS."

A Striking Book Written by the Grandson of Two Presidents. Laurette Taylor Tells of Her Appearance in an "All-Star" Cast. "What is the German Nation Dying For?"—Uplift and Such.

BY GORDON RAY YOUNG.

"The Education of Henry Adams."

John Adams, a founder of our government and an early President; John Quincy Adams, a notable diplomat and a President, Charles Francis Adams, the Civil War Minister to England and a statesman—such is the direct line of eminent Adamses leading down to the author this autobiography, "The Education of Henry Adams," which if a comparative is not too presumptuous, will probably be remembered longer than any of them. They are embedded in amber, permanent figures and static. But Henry Adams, in these 500 pages, has set going a dynamo that will definitely react on whatever minds establish contact. Some one has cunningly placed on the slip-cover a sentence from Emerson: "Beware when the great God lets loose a thinker on the planet." Had Emerson read the book he could scarcely have tagged it more fittingly—full as it is of Mephistophelian lore, dangerous cynicism and titanic stimulation. I do not mean to suggest that this is a revolutionary book, or one that will shape a course for social energy. But it is a book that will interest inquiring minds as long as minds push questions of life's futilities through science, theology, philosophy. Mr. Adams reduces those questions to what is very nearly their ultimate cynicism.

He was a scholarly man, and a person of attainment, but in this autobiography he represents himself to have been much less than that and merely an "innocent bystander" concerned only in watching the world and in wondering to what its furious acceleration of energy will bear it.

To him, "education" meant understanding the unknowable and he started out for answers in perfect consciousness that he was prepared to get none that were definite; but at least he could ask more questions than most people would think of.

After puzzling over all that one human man could know of history, he seems finally to have decided that the world is proceeding—has so proceeded since the first stone arrowhead—at an ever-increasing and calculable acceleration of energy; and that there is no defensible reason for not believing that it will continue indefinitely, to increase this terrible velocity, doubling, as in the recent past, every ten years or so.

Henry Cabot Lodge explains in the preface that the book was written in 1905 as a sequel to Mr. Adams's "Mont Saint-Michel and Chartres," and privately printed. The author was dissatisfied with it, and hoped that it would soon be forgotten. Instead, it soon became widely known among the educated and scholarly. Now, under the supervision of the Massachusetts Historical Society, and through the press of Houghton Mifflin, it is given to the general public.

It is only in the concluding chapters that Mr. Adams discards his retrospective cynicism and takes a definite position, reverses, so to speak, his attitude and to some extent, instead of being the skeptic becomes the theorist.

The bulk of the book in a loosely chronological scheme suggests, rather than relates, his autobiography. He is detailed in nothing but doubts and conclusions. It must have been with deliberate emphasis that he minimized his interest in the affairs of his eventful life. One, who as a boy, stubbornly refusing to attend school, was led quietly for more than a mile by a former President and placed in his seat, who held positions of educational and literary importance and knew intimately so many important men of his day; who served through the troublous Civil War as private secretary to his father in London; who traveled the world over and saw such things as Garibaldi attack Palermo, met such men as Browning and Swinburne, was the confidant of John Hay—one who, obviously sensitive and alert, experienced all that, and infinitely more, could not, though an Adams, be so indifferent and unimpressed as Henry Adams pretends to have been. To that extent at least his cynicism must be considered as affected; but it is none the less interesting.

His general attitude is expressed very well in the mordant sentence that concludes this passage:

"Every fabulist has told how the human mind has always struggled like a frightened bird to escape the chaos which caged it; how—appearing unaccountably out of some unknown void; passing half its life in the mental chaos of sleep; victim even when awake to its own ill-adjustment, to disease, to age, to external suggestion, to nature's compulsion; doubting its sensations and, in the last resort, trusting only to instruments and averages—after sixty years of growing astonishment, the mind wakes to find itself looking blankly into the void of death. That it should profess itself pleased by this performance was all the high[illegible] of good breeding could ask; but that it should actually be satisfied would prove that it existed only as idiocy."

The mind of Henry Adams was never satisfied. No thinking mind is. He ranged far and wide. Every study ended in disappointment. Philosophy itself, he decided, consisted chiefly in suggesting "unintelligible answers to insolvable problems." He was gleeful when [illegible] Curie tumbled cock-sure science into frantic confusion. Cocksureness irritated Henry Adams. In [illegible] Darwinism appealed strongly to [illegible] character, not because [illegible] answers for him—it did not—but because it brought discomfort to [illegible] who had had no doubts about Genesis and Revelation.

[illegible] Mr. Adams saw an analogy between the Cross and modern [illegible] between symbols and engines. Both expressed themselves in terms of energy, one attaining Gothic architecture, the other railroads, steamships, factories. Gunpowder educated the Middle Ages; the coal fields educated the modern. Mr. Adams did not live to add chapters that would include the great war. Perhaps then he would have felt, as he never did completely feel, that his education in life's futilities was fairly complete. Certainly the war would not have softened his cynicism or dissipated his theories.

The book is one that cannot be ignored any more than the dynamos that so intrigued his speculation can be ignored; that is, if one touches it.

"The Greatest of These."

Perhaps there are some people that failed to see Laurette Taylor when she played "Peg o' My Heart." It ran only ten years, or only ought to have run ten years, or will run—anyway it was a tremendous success for the man who wrote it. Miss Taylor married him. None west of the Mississippi saw the all-star cast of which Miss Taylor (Mrs. Hartley Manners,) was a member in its three weeks' tour in "Out There" by Mr. Manners, as a Red Cross benefit. Seats were auctioned, autographed programmes went for astounding sums, and the company paid its own expenses. The benefit to the Red Cross was far above $600,000. Seldom, to borrow a phrase from the circus advance agent, has there been such a glittering aggregation: Actors, men at the top, George Cohan and George Arliss, for instance; and women of pre-eminent radiance, charm and ability, among them Mrs. Fiske. No stage manager could look at that cast without shivering. One star is about all the average manager wants on his hands. But Taylor tells what happened—and it was nothing tempestuous or temperamental. She does it with inimitable dash and piquancy. Why she should so gratuitously forswear writing any other book at any other time—before the reviewers abused this one—I do not know. But prefatorially she is emphatic on that point. Maybe her attitude on that point will be like the Divine Sarah's on "Farewell Tours." Let us not hope otherwise. This book is very pleasing. It tells of actors at work and play; of Mrs. Fiske's nun-like solitude; of how Laurette Taylor was "undignified," and of how George Arliss nearly missed his train and of why George Cohan wouldn't share a dressing-room with him; and of how the city of Cleveland turned out to be a—well—she tells about it. The book may not "go" well in Cleveland. Why it is called "The Greatest of These——" is not inescapably clear. Maybe that refers to Pittsburgh. Pittsburgh came across like a French village welcoming Yankees.

"What is the German Nation Dying For?"

This book, by Karl Ludwig Krause, "What is the German Nation Dying For?" (Boni & Liveright,) created a sensation among the Germans that have seen it. Krause renounced Prussianism, sacrificed his property, fled for his life, and wrote the book. It is an emotional appeal to the German people to realize what dupes have been made of them—an appeal they seem to have heard. Krause is tempestuous, ironical, bitter. Certainly he has tremendous vitality, and it would seem that he has far more personal courage than the anonymous author of the famed "J'Accuse."

Scarcely anything like a searching diplomatic or historical analysis of events is made. Krause asserts and usually clinches the assertion with a question, as when he calls the Germans barbarians and demands: "Was it not an act of barbarism . . . to attack peaceful nations with whom the German nation had no quarrel? Who but a barbarian could carry out such orders, who but a barbarian would be so unconscious of the atrocity of his conduct?" Who, he exclaims, but barbarians would refute the name by telling stories of how a German soldier gave a child bread, or takes it on his arm to show it a picture of his own children, and of how German soldiers have music in the trenches? "It is barbarism and nothing else for mere matter-of-course to be cited triumphantly a thousand times as proof that we are not barbarians, but know what civilization is."

As a whole, the book is rather disappointing—probably because the author must spend so much time on aspects and phrases that long ago became commonplace to us. No doubt, it is all new and startling to Germans. As a matter of fact, Germany has scarcely yet begun to stutter in the language of democracy, and Krause goes after the dull pupils with the elemental and obvious facts of Germany's sins and crimes. To fully appreciate the book one must remember all the way that it was written, not for readers of English, who definitely settled the king question some hundreds of years ago, but for men and women who are only now beginning to wonder if the Kaiser shall be left answerable to God alone or be made to render an accounting unto them—and stand trial.

Uplift and Self-sufficiency.

When Dr. Frank Crane rises with "21" (Doubleday, Page & Co.) to explain what he would do if the gods would perform a little subtraction of years, one wonders what good he hopes to do. We, who have passed "21" and made our irrevocable choices, learned some lessons, are irreparably past profiting by such conditional advice; and no healthy youngster of 21 is likely to be worth much more, anyway, if he follows the guide posts of a reformed minister (or, if I should write such a book, of an unregenerate reviewer,) to complete his journey. Strangely and bitterly, nothing is wo[illegible] while in this world that is accepted on hearsay. Dr. Crane, among other things, says "I would learn how to write so it would not burden people to read it;" but he doesn't tell how he would do that. He doesn't tell how he would do much of anything. He says he would do it. So his "hearsay" is particularly ineffectual.

Next from the press of Robert M. McBride we have "Living the Creative Life—Are You?" by Joseph H. Appel. A metaphysician would revel here like a bull in a tea shop of red-petticoated maidens. Mr. Appel rewrites a good deal of Milton's "Paradise Lost" and "Regained." Bentley "rewrote" Milton, too—but knew he was doing it. Mr. Appel's sesame is the "Great Thought." It will cure all ailments, mental, physical, financial. But he neglects to define it intelligibly. It is like Dr. Crane forgetting to tell "how." "Affirm God. Deny the Devil," says Mr. Appel. Surely. But what is God and who is the devil; and supposing that the work of the devil is merely a manifestation of the mysterious manner in which God moves, his wonders to perform? As when he tormented Job. Mr. Appel is emphatic, but vague; he describes the Land of Canaan, but neglects to say how to get there. "Great Thought" will do it; but how to catch the "Great Thought?" "Affirm God." Absolutely. But is it God or the devil that is shaking the Kaiser's throne?

"The Way to Life," by Henry Churchill King (The MacMillan Company,) is "uplift" before the Dr. Cranes and Appels got hold of it. Just about all the "uplift" that the Christian world needs was incorporated in the Sermon on the Mount; and Dr. King thinks so, too. This book is largely an interpretation of that sermon. Christ said what to do; and, as George Bernard Shaw has remarked, for all that we know, Christianity might work. Dr. King contributes his influence toward getting people to try it.

The Horrid Pipe!

George Frederick Gundelfinger, Ph.D., author of this and of that, is also the author of a pamphlet titled "Prince Albert's Velvet Tuxedo," which complains on the front page that the "little" essay was offered to thirty-one magazines and periodicals and rejected. Dr. Gundelfinger seems to be one who is anxious to tell others their faults. This "little" essay is an attack on tobacco. Of course, tobacco's a dope habit and the people that use it stink, and the money spent on it could feed a lot of babies and buy Bibles for South Sea Islanders. Dr. Gundelfinger tells us that "the minister who uses tobacco or liquor cannot write or deliver a godly sermon"—but he would quibble on the point if anybody mentioned Spurgeon. Like many other people who have more thoughts than facts for argument he accuses Lady Nicotine of being the leman of John Barleycorn. Cigarettes first, then booze. "It is doubtful," says this labored stylist, "if so many hands would grasp the flabby palm of Silenus if they themselves were firm and unstained." Did Dr. Gundelfinger ever hear of the custom of ladies leaving the dinner table and of men remaining? After the Elizabethan days it became less and less fashionable for women to get drunk in the presence of men. But men at dinner continued, in fashionable homes, to see who could empty the most bottles right down until the Prince of Wales, Mrs. Victoria's son, introduced the after-dinner cigarette. Why? Let Dr. Gundelfinger and other anti-tobacconists look it up for themselves. The cry of the boys in the trenches is for tobacco. Dr. Gundelfinger seems to be the type of man that objects to giving it to them. Tobacco is a nasty habit, all right. So is meat eating. Let Dr. Gundelfinger join with George Bernard Shaw is contemplating the horror of making one's stomach a grave for dead animals? And what sensitive man will eat eggs? Unborn chickens? Or peanuts—the poor little tubers that the anxious mother plant nestles so tenderly in the warm soil?

"The Glorious Hope."

Jane Burr of Croton-on-Hudson, author and publisher of "The Golden Hope," impresses one as having a lot of ability. But as a novelist—well, she starts off a realistic, rather sensationally drawn but graphic, story of a country girl's encounter with New York Bohemia and finishes off with a burst of incredible romanticism, merges into semi-allegory with a philosopher-man, and the erstwhile country girl being proposed to by every man she sees. Also she has some magical quality that makes a success of every play she reads, even when producing them.

Until after Eve leaves her husband "The Glorious Hope" does show force, a little inartistic perhaps, but the study of the girl's acquaintanceship with the long-hairs of Gotham, her love of Stanley and his artistic dreams too big to grasp—so he dawdles with them—is strong, impressive. After that the story becomes simply ridiculous, with Stanley returning from Paris as the famous Oisseau and wanting to throw over the wife that has made him famous for this erstwhile country girl, who seems, of a sudden, to have begun administering aphrodisiacs to all the males she meets.

In fact, "The Glorious Hope" makes one feel that Miss Burr began the book to show something that she has observed about life, and finished by trying to crowd Marjorie Benton Cooke out of bed.

Books and Authors.

D. Appleton & Co. announce a new novel by Edith Wharton, or, in fact, two new novels. One will be published soon and called "The Marne;" the other to come next spring, will be "A Son at the Front." Mrs. Wharton has not done much war fiction though she has been busy in the war zone from the first. The stories she has written of war influence, however, have been among the best.

Coningsby Dawson, author of "Carry On" and "Out to Win," and numerous other books, is a lieutenant in the British army and got in the way of a shell fragment. He came to New York to speak for the British war mission, and arrived in time to celebrate peace.

An item of interest for bibliophiles will be "Corn from Old Fields" (John Lane Company,) which will appear shortly. It is an anthology of old English poetry gathered by Elanor Brougham, much of which has never been reprinted or only in books of inaccessible rarity.

Talbot Mundy, whose stories of India have the romance and dash that is very desirable to the jaded taste, has a new book ready, "Hira Singh." (Bobbs-Merrill Company.)

Some years ago Samuel Cranston Benson was a preacher-pacifist—in fact, somewhat afflicted with Bryanitis. He went to the front as an ambulance driver. He has told about it in "Back from Hell." A. C. McClurg & Co.)

This is supposed to be true. It happened in Cleveland. A young lady inquired at the library for a book. As is usual with young ladies in libraries, she couldn't remember the name, but it was the story "of a young man brought up by monks." The librarian suggested "The Cloister and the Hearth," "The Monks of Malabar," "Friar Tuck" and "Monastery Bells." Then the Sweet Young Thing was cross-questioned until the librarian finally discovered the book wanted. It was "Tarzan of the Apes."

Almost everyone knows about the Brownies, or at least knows of them. Palmer Cox invented them. The new Brownie book is "The Brownies and Prince Florimel" (The Century Company.) There is an Indian Brownie, too. He arrived some years ago after a 6-year-old boy had painfully written Mr. Cox asking for the redskin.

Robert Gordon Anderson is the author of "The Cross of Fire," a first novel (Houghton Mifflin Company.) Mr. Anderson is well known in publishing circles. It was largely due to his enterprise and faith that Sergt. Empey won fame with "Over the Top."

S. G. Hanson in "Commercial Egg Farming" gives expert advice to farmers and poultry fanciers (E. P. Dutton & Co.) He has made a success of the egg business himself. It is no trouble to make a success of that business these days—if one can get an egg now and then.

William Stanley Braithwaite, in his annual review of the poetry of the year, has selected "Nocturne of Remembered Spring," by Conrad Aiken, as one of the twenty-one best books of the year. After which, Mr. Aiken will probably not feel like renewing the quarrel with Mr. Braithwaite conducted some time ago to—if not entirely for—the amusement of innocent bystanders.

Will N. Harben's new novel is "The Hills of Refuge." It is the eighteenth consecutive novel to appear under the name of Will N. Harben and to be published by Harper & Bros.—a rather unique record.

"HE WHO BREAKS."

In "He Who Breaks," Miss Inna Demens (Dodd, Mead & Co.) is studious of old questions. That these questions are perhaps insoluble does not deter the many brilliant writers who perpetually examine them, offer suggestions and present new illustrations. Probably no modern theme has so much engaged the novelists as the relation of sex to art. Miss Demens offers no original answers—she does not attempt any answers at all. She shows the problem in a new and vivid aspect. The familiar theories, not necessarily the author's, however, are here—expressed through Biran, the sculptor, who has, with conscious serenity, a little superciliously, theorized on matters of life and love and art. Naturally, when he touches—not a woman, but The Woman, his theories are demolished and amid their wreckage we leave him.

Biran, a man of prominence and perhaps not wholly unspoiled by his fame, believes—as most artists do—that artists have something of a special dispensation to "live their own lives." They are not to be, they cannot be, judged by the standards of the shopkeeper any more than their works can be measured by his yardstick. But, on the other hand, Biran believes in that very familiar theory that the artist must suffer before he (or, in this case, she) can attain self-expression; that, so to speak, it is on the cross that the artist is raised above the heads of his fellows. Biran ventures to experiment with The Woman, a mere girl, Elsa Colt; and, womanlike, she veers from art to love in a way that first delights, then rather annoys if not disconcerts him. True enough, he loved her in the more or less impersonal, detachable way of the selfish man. He aroused the passion, and was apparently unconscious of the difference between a woman's soul and modeling clay—that is, until Elsa stubbornly, perhaps with a sense of contentment, if not without bitterness, resigned herself to the futility of motherhood. At least, in Biran's scheme of things motherhood had been the symbol of artistic futility.

Biran is a famous sculptor when the book opens. He should have been great when it closed, if suffering adds height to artistry—as he imagined. At a recital given by a friend's pupils, Biran is interested in a girl violinist, Elsa. He is more interested to see that none understand her. He thinks that he does. He sets about to prove it; he believes her a brilliant violinist and sets about to awaken her. He does, but he awakens the woman rather than the artist within her.

The distinction of "He Who Breaks" is in the fact that the problem is fairly stated and that the progression is logical. The author has been honest, which is more than most novelists are when they throw sex and art into conflict. She does not make any exception of her hero and heroine and let them escape into bliss. The last third of the book is splendid in its artistic daring and attainment; and it is in the last third that sex novels go to smash, or else equivocate with the "happy ending," or, as here, rise more and more tensely to the poignant end.

PASSING OF SENATOR KEARNS.

BY J. C. DERKS.

The death last month in Salt Lake United States Senator from Utah, marked the end of one of the very last of the famous partnerships of the West—the old West. In many respects the business and personal association between Senator Kearns and David Keith was unique; it was not lacking in those romantic elements which made some of Bret Harte's Sierra miners inseparable City of Thomas Kearns, formerly to the grave.

David Keith, the elder of the Keith-Kearns partnership, fell victim to pneumonia some six months ago. Senator Kearns died of apoplexy on October 18. No doubt his death was hastened by injuries suffered in an automobile accident. He was but 56 years of age, and apparently destined for a long and active life.

Many years ago Tom Kearns and Dave Keith found themselves bunkmates in the silver mining camp of Park City, Utah. Both were underground workers and both were ambitious. With eyes ever alert for opportunity, Kearns and Keith at length acquired an interest in the company which later became the famous Silver King Coalition Company. Little by little they developed the property and added to it, and at length they controlled it. Everybody who has even a smattering knowledge of silver mines and mining knows that the Silver King has long been and still is one of the bonanza properties of the world. It has produced wealth mounting high in the millions, and it was the genius and practical application of Kearns and Keith that made the mine.

With the Silver King as a foundation—and a strong foundation it was, indeed—the partners sought new fields of endeavor. Their activities extended. They acquired mining properties in Nevada and California, and often it has been said that the mine over which was waved the magic wand of the partnership proved always to be a producer. So rarely did failure attend their ventures that Keith and Kearns were accounted wizards of a sort.

As a combination making for success perhaps no two men in all time joined forces of so different type. Kearns, an Irishman of impetuous will and action, was venturesome; Keith, a Scotchman, guided by the traditional caution of his race, approached an enterprise only after mature deliberation. Thus, while Kearns initiated with eagerness and enthusiasm, Keith's steady hand gripped the brake wheel firmly, and therefore it may be said that many a financial undertaking, conceived in audacity, was brought to fruition under perfect control.

It may well be imagined that men of such distinct individualities should frequently find themselves at variance of opinion concerning the merits or demerits of a proposition. Each had for the views of the other the highest respect, and it is common knowledge in Salt Lake that many a deal of really enormous proportions was decided by a cast of the dice. It was a way of determining the issue when argument had ceased to avail, and it was this trust in chance that stamped Keith and Kearns western men of the West.

An estimate of the value of the estate left by Senator Kearns is difficult. Probably it will reach well above $20,000,000. Announcement in press dispatches is that Kearns left no will, and any attempt to hazard a guess at the amount of wealth he had accumulated probably would be wide of the mark. In addition to his extensive mining interests Senator Kearns had vast holdings in real estate. The Kearns building in Salt Lake, a ten-story structure, is one of the monuments left behind. He owned an immense ranch at Santa Rosa in this State and another, yet much greater in extent, in Nevada, near Reno, which is conducted by his son Edmund. His residence in Salt Lake, a magnificent stone structure, is easily the most costly place of abode in that city. He was heavily interested in the Salt Lake route, having been associated with former Senator W. A. Clark in that Los Angeles-Salt Lake short line project. He was a director in at least three of Salt Lake's leading banks. To share the Kearns fortune are the widow, two sons and a daughter. One of the sons, already referred to, was married only two months ago; the other, Thomas, is a lieutenant attached to the flying school at Berkeley.

The philanthropies of Thomas Kearns no one will ever know. The chief act of his charities, and one which will longest endure, was the erection, equipment and maintenance of the Kearns St. Ann's Orphanage at Salt Lake, a splendid institution in charge of Catholic sisters, where hundreds of homeless orphans are cared for and fitted for the business of life. Mrs. Kearns devotes much of her time and attention to the welfare of the orphanage.

An amusing story of how $5000 was raised for this work was told at the time in Salt Lake. In 1910 a great washout in the Meadow Valley wash carried away the tracks of the Salt Lake Route, so that for a period of six months, more or less, traffic was entirely suspended between Los Angeles and Salt Lake over that road. The disaster entailed an enormous loss, which had to be borne by the stockholders. It appears that when the assessment on the stock was levied it amounted to something like $150,000 for Mr. Keith. Now, a man whose money is constantly at work does not always possess $150,000 in ready cash, no matter how wealthy he may be rated. Thus Keith found himself in a quandary.

"Great Scott, Kearns, I can't raise this money in the time stated," he exclaimed. "And I don't think it can be raised in town on the instant."

"Well, you should have thought of that before," was the unsympathetic rejoinder.

"You're in just as deep as I am. What are you going to do about it?"

"Oh, I'm always prepared to meet those little obligations," chuckled Kearns. "I'm not worrying."

"But, man alive, see my fix. What am I going to do?"

"How much would you give above the interest if I got this money for you?"

"I'd gladly give $5000."

"Very well, here it is," and, to the astonishment of Keith, his partner handed him $150,000 in cash, or its equivalent.

It developed that Kearns, foreseeing the demand upon the stock of the crippled road, had brought some $300,000 in cash from New York for the purpose of meeting the obligation. And what is more, and a point which emphasizes the fearlessness of Kearns's character, is the fact that he brought the money in a gripsack. "It was a chance I took," he calmly remarked when asked what he would have done in case of a hold-up.

At any rate, St. Ann's Orphanage got $5000 which it did not expect to get.

About three years ago Senator Kearns made a trip to the Panama Canal Zone. Upon his return he wrote an exhaustive article upon the perplexing Culebra slides. He had a theory that the slides were due to gas in the earth's interior, and that the bottom would continue to fill in spite of the removal of huge quantities of earth from the sides. Senator Kearns, although not an engineer, based his theory upon his practical knowledge as a miner. Identical conditions, he maintained, had occurred in his mines at Park City. The article aroused wide attention, and drew a learned technical reply from an engineer then engaged on the canal work.

In the United States Senate, Kearns was the author of the law establishing the principle of extra lateral rights in mining, an act whose validity was sustained by the Supreme Court of the United States six or seven years ago.

Among other enterprises owned by Kearns and Keith was the Salt Lake Tribune, a wonderfully prosperous newspaper, and easily the leading paper of the intermountain country.

In politics Kearns was a Republican. He was active in Utah partisan affairs, but won prominence chiefly as the backer of the "American party" in Salt Lake, an organization formed to gain control of the city government with a view of launching an era of civic improvement, of which the town stood in great need. The "American party" performed its mission and then died, as third parties usually do. With the advent of the "American party," however, Salt Lake's entrance into the metropolitan class was begun. Twelve years ago Salt Lake was a country village, overgrown of population, but sadly lagging in those things which go to make a city. Once started on its way, the town went forward until now it has more than its share of skyscrapers, more than its share of paving and more than its share of community prosperity.

It is not too much to say that the "American party," backed by Senator Kearns, put Salt Lake in the rank of first-class cities. The "Mormon fight," so long and so bitterly waged in Utah, is, if not forgotten, at least quiescent, and the people are pulling together, and no man contributed more to this happy condition than Thomas Kearns.

Planned to Fly to Germany.

The two German lieutenants, Julius Stadelfauer and Paul Bastgem, who recently escaped from Sutton Bonnington Camp, Nottinghamshire, were recaptured the other day. They were walking along a lane at Kreeton, twelve miles from their place of internment, when a discharged soldier called out, "Good-night." When they replied, their tones made him suspicious, and he told the police, who mounted bicycles and overtook the men.

The German officers confessed that they were following the course of the Trent towards the coast and were looking for an aerodrome, where they meant to steal an airplane and fly to Belgium or Germany. One had a map and the other a compass, but their food, which was carried in kit bags, was nearly gone, and they had suffered from want of water. They made no resistance.—[London Times.

THE UNDERFED CHILD.

Three hundred thousand children under 5 years of age die in this country every year, and many of those who survive grow up to enfeebled maturity. The greater need for thrift is not in pennies, nor sugar, nor any material substance, but in humanity itself. For this reason I took as my work for the year an experiment in feeding a group of children, giving them a balanced meal at lunch time cooked by the children of the cooking class.

A total of 1170 children were classified, and their weight record was compared with their class standing at the end of May. There were 825 pupils rated as normal, 70 per cent. of the school; 345 were under weight, 30 per cent. of the school.

The 70 per cent. of normal children gave but 56 per cent. of the failures.

Taking the normal children as a class by themselves, 88 per cent. had done satisfactory work, and 12 per cent. had a poor rating; while 22 per cent. of the underweight children were rated as unsatisfactory. In other words, the underweight child has almost twice as many chances of failure as the normal child.—[Thrift Magazine.

MAKE NO CHANGE

UNTIL YOU HAVE CONSULTED

CLARKE,

THE SAGE OF WESTLAKE PARK,

ORDAINED MASTER PSYCHIC AND HEALER.

Every day a stream of people pass in and out of his office on Alvarado street, some go away smiling, others more hopeful than for years, for this marvelous psychic, who sees all and tells all without asking a solitary question, is always able to restore the wavering faith in others and give them back that self-confidence which makes for success. He helps you gain what you wish at once, almost immediately removes the cause of any bad luck, bad habits, unseen influences, sickness, trouble or failure of any kind. He helps you win back the love you have lost.

"THE MERE PRESENCE OF THE SAGE SUFFICES TO PARALYZE DESTINY."

Says the Belgian Seer and Mystic, Maurice Maeterlinck, "Fatality shrinks back abashed from the soul that has more than once conquered her; there are certain disasters she dare not send forth when this soul is near: and the sage, as he passes by, intervenes in numberless tragedies. . . . When such is the case, the event needs must halt before reaching bloodshed and tears."

When you enter the presence of the Sage your destiny is halted like when a huge rock impelled down a mountainside by the inherent law of its being is caught in the grip of irresistible counter forces. It is then for you decide whether you will let your life run on in the natural course of events, or whether with the help of the Sage and the necessary knowledge now at hand you shall make your life what you will—make the Ideal Real.

WHAT IS COMING.

Down through the ages, Seers, Saints and Sages have proclaimed man's divinity; have taught of "One God, one law, one element;" have foretold "One far-off divine event, to which the whole creation moves." Today epoch-making events are about to take place. Representatives from the nations of the world are soon to meet in solemn conclave to prepare the most momentous document in the history of the world—the great treaty of peace that will lay the foundation for the dawn of the long-awaited millennium. The mind of the Seer is stunned as the great vision of the future unrolls:

At some soon day shall Love incarnate be,
Then there shall come that long-delayed event,
Of which the poet-prophets have foretold—
O Worlds! A wondrous Love-born man I see,
Clothed with effulgent immortality,
By Truth made free, moving among the stars!

Thousands of the best people of this city and surrounding country have consulted the master psychic, and are amazed at what he is able to tell them. He not only gives you more help, more knowledge and power than any other psychic, but more than all other mediums and psychics combined.

All are welcome to his beautiful home, opposite Westlake Park, where they may read all the inspiring books of his large library, whether they wish to have a reading or not. Those who wish to take up character reading as a pastime or profession will find all the latest books on palmistry, astrology, graphology, card-reading, phrenology, the science of names and numbers, etc., at the circulating library for loan or for sale.

Today new opportunities are at hand. You may be able to get a better position, better salary or business, dispose of your property to advantage. The time to do things is now. Call at once. Readings daily and Sunday, 10 to 7. Low fee—50c.

For appointment phone Wilshire 2956.

Take W. 6th or W. 7th st. car to Alvarado.

AMERICA'S GREATEST PSYCHIC.
50c—READINGS THIS WEEK—50c
Calls you by name and tells the object of your visit without asking a question. Names enemies and friends. If the one you love loves you; how to influence anyone you desire, even though a thousand miles away. Develops personal magnetism. He tells exactly what you wish to know about, love affairs, marriage, divorce, if friends are true or false. Gives advice on all matters of business.

He gives more satisfaction, more encouragement more success, more help, more facts than any other psychic. He is worthy your confidence.

REMOVES EVIL INFLUENCES.

Do you find the one you have bestowed your affection and trust upon acting cool and indifferent? Has a rival or obstacle of any kind crept between you and your future home, or has misfortune assailed the quietude of your happy home? COME TO THIS GIFTED MEDIUM and find help.

THE PROFIT

is life's sunshine, conscious power, magnetism to attract and strength to hold. It's not so much in what I tell you as it is what I do for you by my special efforts that I put forth in your behalf to overcome all your sorrows and troubles so that you can have the power to win your greatest desires. What good is a psychic's advice unless they are able to lift you out of your troubles, worriments and bad luck? None whatever.

I will accept no fee unless you receive perfect satisfaction.

Hours 10 to 6 DAILY; SUNDAY, 12 to 2.

Tells you all about your sweetheart, wife or husband, how to win the love of anyone you desire. He tells you of journeys, changes, wills, deeds, speculations, investments, how to obtain best results, whom to trust and whom to shun, whom to marry and what they are like. He sees all and tells all without asking a question. If you are ill, in mind or body, he will help you or make no charge.

There is no case too difficult, no mystery too deep, no condition too complicated to be remedied by this acknowledged master of occult forces.

No matter what your desires, doubts or troubles may be, consult this strangely gifted man. He stands supreme, endowed by nature with a marvelous power so different from all others, the recognized leader of all clairvoyants. Trance Medium (Ordained)
This Week.

She asks no questions; tells your full name; tells the names of friends and enemies; tells you what you have called for; tells all about your business affairs; tells things you should know. Does another share the love that should belong to you, or is there someone else's love you wish to gain, or have you secret rivals or enemies you wish to overcome? Do you want to get proofs, facts and names in regard to whether husband, wife or sweetheart is true or false? Do you want success in luck, love, marriage, health, business and speculation? Special attention given to the location and discovery of old estates, lost documents, lost or absent friends; in a word, whatever your troubles, suspicions, hopes, fears or desires, you are earnestly invited to call, and you will be rewarded by obtaining a clear insight into the future. Also, if you care to learn the lives and fate of those dear to you. All business sacred and confidential. Evil influences broken. Teaches you how to control the one you love and overcome your enemies.

Come and I will tell you your troubles, and if I can't help you it will not cost you anything, and you will have the benefit of a good reading by a reliable medium free. Is this fair? If yes, 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. Sunday included.

Automobiles for Sale.

A REAL OPPORTUNITY.

If you are going to purchase a used car YOU OWE IT TO YOURSELF to see our stock of over SIXTY USED CARS. You will not be treating yourself right if you take it for granted that the first car you see is the one to buy. Compare our values, compare our GUARANTEE, compare our standing in the automobile industry with others, and do not overlook the fact that we are NOT speculators in used cars—then make your selection.

A FEW SUGGESTIONS.

1917 HUPMOBILE touring car, excellent condition in every respect, fully equipped; cord tires, including extra tire; a positive bargain at $1200. TERMS.

1917 VELIE ROADSTER. Looks like new, and is practically as good as a new car. It is easily worth more than our price of $900, on TERMS. This is a real investment.

FORDS—We have a Ford roadster and a Ford truck to offer on reasonable TERMS. Our price on FORDS is within reason.

BUICK SEDAN (5-passenger enclosed car.) This is the little 6-cylinder car, and is as good as it looks. $1350, on TERMS.

We have MANY lower-priced cars, ranging from $175 to $350. These are NOT overhauled or guaranteed EXCEPT that we will guarantee them to be exactly as represented. You cannot go wrong on one of these cars, as we will give you full details regarding their condition.

OVERLAND 1918, MODEL 85, touring car, $700. Terms. Just try this car out. It is an exception. It goes over the hills in high, and is better than the average new Overland. Try it out.

MAXWELL TOURING CAR, 1916 model, at $450, TERMS. This is about the price of a FORD, and there is not half the equipment on a Ford, such as ELECTRIC STARTER, DEMOUNTABLE RIMS, extra tire, etc. It operates about as economically as a FORD, and is far superior in riding qualities and appearance.

CADILLAC touring car at $175. DON'T think because the price is low that the car is not serviceable. Such is not the case. Most of the equipment found in the later model cars will be seen on this one.

HUPMOBILE SEDAN (5-passenger inclosed car.) $1350. Terms. Fully equipped in every respect. Looks new, runs like new, and is practically as good as a new car. This car reflects the exceptional care that was given it by its former owner. As we are not speculators in used cars we have no hesitancy in furnishing you the name of the former owner, and in addition to this we will guarantee the car fully, adding a liberal service period as well.

HUDSON 1917 CABRIOLET. $17.50 Terms. This car is in excellent mechanical condition throughout; has wire wheels and cord tires all around, with one extra; paint is in exceptionally good condition; everything about this car shows that it has had the best of care. At the price we are asking you will consider this car an exceptional buy when you see it.

ATTENTION!

CHANDLER SIX
CHUMMY ROADSTERS.

You do not dare to purchase a CHANDLER until you have investigated the REBUILT, REFINISHED, FULLY GUARANTEED ones that we are offering at a range of prices from $800 to $1800, on TERMS. You cannot respect yourself as a wise purchaser unless you at least learn about these values, and what CHANDLER SERVICE and CHANDLER GUARANTEE will mean to you for the next year to come. Our business has been the marketing of CHANDLERS since they were first placed on the market. We know practically every Chandler owner, and we know quite a bit about the manner in which he has taken care of his car. We will not accept a used CHANDLER in exchange on a new one if it has been abused. We do not have to. We cannot secure all the NEW CHANDLERS that there is a demand for, so you may rest assured that we are particular about the used cars we accept in exchange. If you do not believe this, try us out with some car that is not up to standard, and see how quickly we refuse it. We are not independent, but we are careful of our reputation, and we do not want to be forced to offer a poor used car for sale.

Closed Sundays.

HOLD YOUR BONDS IS REQUEST OF M'ADOO.

PAY OFF CONTRACTS, TOO, SO PRICES WILL NOT SAG BELOW PAR AFTER WAR.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—Despite the operation of the treasury sinking fund for buying up a limited quantity of Liberty bonds thrown on the market, treasury officials said today nothing can prevent the price from continuing below par after the war if many holders sell their bonds.

Consequently a campaign of education seeking to have owners hold bonds will be started after the next loan.

The treasury has practically given up hope of developing a scheme for artificially stabilizing the price.

The extent to which the sinking fund has been used to absorb bonds has not been disclosed.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 15.—An appeal to all Liberty bond buyers to complete the payments on their bonds, to prevent them from being disposed of in the open market, was sent out by the Twelfth Federal Reserve District Bank here today. The appeal followed the receipt of a communication from Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo, saying that all bond contracts should be fulfilled in full.

In cases where employees have bought bonds through their firms, and have then obtained employment elsewhere, the contract should be taken over by the new employer or by a bank in the community where the buyer resides, Mr. McAdoo's message said.

Only most urgent necessity should compel the cancellation of such contract, the message said.

FAMINE IN EUROPE STRENGTHENS CORN.

PROVISIONS JUMP ON REPORT THAT LARGE QUANTITIES OF FATS ARE WANTED.

Strength and activity characterized the trade in oats, as well as in corn. Hedging sales, however, became plentiful on the bulge.

COMMERCIAL.

LOCAL PRODUCE MARKET.

Trading was heavy at the opening on the local market yesterday. Prices on most of the stock offered soared owing to a shortage to meet the early rush. Later the market was a whirl of activity and all commodities were bought in rapidly by housewives, grocers and peddlers. All lines of produce for the last week have been steadily advancing and produce men say prices have not yet reached their height owing to the greater demand made by the government.

Trading in general tapered off towards the close. The influenza epidemic is held responsible for the slower business in the afternoon. The consumers seemed to be purchasing only staple supplies actually needed for food.

Due to the present situation no circular will be issued, or any bids asked by the Quartermaster General's office on the December potato and onion requirements of the various camps. However the depots have advertised for their December requirements and bids will be received by them up to about November 19, for furnishing camps within their respective zones only. Those desirous of bidding should apply directly to the nearest depot quartermaster.

The local meat market has enjoyed a healthy demand for the past week which wholesalers say is due in part to the increasing demand from consumers and orders for export. Steers derived the greatest benefit from this improvement, but all classes of meat came in for a share, ewes excepted.

Choice steers, in a limited quantity, made their appearance on the market for the first time in many months. Most were used to fill export orders. The balance found an outlet in the retail section at good prices. The quality of cows continues to improve and better prices were obtained.

The following prices were obtained by local wholesalers yesterday:

TEACHING MEN HOW TO COOK.

Don't Believe it, Eh? Then Just Read What's Doing at Riverside.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

RIVERSIDE, Nov. 16.—A cooking school for men is the latest innovation to be introduced in the free evening classes arranged by the Board of Education. All wives are urged to send their husbands, and mothers their sons.

Features of the instruction are those relating to the modification of milk for babies, designed for young married men; the preparation of breakfast, which it is conceded will interest bachelors and married men alike, and the art of preparing chafing dish suppers and assembling picnic lunches.

Classes will be held twice a week in the cafeteria of the Girls' High School, under the direction of Miss Orrie Groce, the school's cooking expert. With so many women and girls entering vocations heretofore regarded as the exclusive field of the male sex, numerous men have declared their intention of enrolling for the culinary course.

LONG BEACH AGGRIEVED.

Wants to Enjoin Los Angeles Because of River Silt Deposited in the Harbor.

A motion to instruct City Attorney George L. Hoodenpyl of Long Beach to institute injunction proceedings against the city of Los Angeles to prevent this municipality from permitting overflow waters from the Owens River to escape via the Los Angeles River into Long Beach Harbor, clogging that port with silt, was made at a special meeting of the Long Beach City Commissioners yesterday.

The motion was withdrawn at the request of the Long Beach City Attorney, who stated that he is endeavoring to adjust the matter with the City Attorney of Los Angeles, and who asked that the order to resort to legal proceedings be held up, pending a final reply. A daily average of 300 cubic yards of silt has been deposited into Long Beach Harbor for the past forty days by overflow from the Owens River, according to the report of the public works department.

IS KILLED BY CAR.

Man Steps from One Electric Train and is Struck Down by Another.

James G. Swartz of near San Marino was killed by a Pacific Electric car yesterday afternoon at La Cienda avenue and Huntington drive, Alhambra. He stepped from an eastbound Oak Knoll car and in front of a westbound Monrovia car.

In the hope that his life could be saved by taking him at once to Los Angeles, he was placed on the car, but his injuries were such that he died before reaching the city.

The accident occurred about 3:30 o'clock.

He wore a Masonic charm, and in his pocket was found a street car computation book made out to James G. Swartz. His widow was notified and came to Los Angeles.

PERSHING IS AWARDED NATION'S WAR MEDAL.

GEN. BLISS ACTS FOR PRESIDENT IN CONFERRING HONOR ON LEADER.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN EASTERN FRANCE, Nov. 16.—The Distinguished Service Medal was conferred on Gen. Pershing at his headquarters today, Gen. Tasker H. Bliss representing President Wilson. The ceremony was witnessed by the members of the Allied missions, and was most impressive.

Admiral Benson, representing the navy, and William G. Sharp, the American Ambassador, also were present.

Gen. Bliss, in presenting the medal, read the order by the Secretary of War, which stated:

"The President directs you to say to Gen. Pershing that he awards the medal to the commander of our armies in the field as a token of the gratitude of the American people for his distinguished services, and in appreciation of the successes which our armies have achieved under his leadership."

After reading the order, Gen. Bliss called to mind that when the first division went away, many doubted if it would be followed up by another for at least a year.

"But," he added, "you have created and organized and trained here on the soil of France an American army of between two and two and a half million men. You have created the agencies for its reception, its transportation and supply. To the delight of all of us you have consistently adhered to your ideal of an American army under American officers and American leadership.

"And I know that I speak for our President," said Gen. Bliss in conclusion, "when I say that, as to those who have died the good God has given eternal rest, so may He give to us eternal peace."

BRITISH SUBMARINES SUNK MANY WARSHIPS.

DESTROYED A TOTAL OF 313 VESSELS AND ONE ZEPPELIN DURING WAR.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LONDON, Nov. 13.—(British Wireless Service.) Details can now be given of the part which British submarines played during the war. This service destroyed the following enemy warships:

Two battleships, two armed cruisers, two light cruisers, seven destroyers, five gunboats, twenty submarines and five armed auxiliary vessels.

Three battleships and one light cruiser were torpedoed, but reached port badly damaged.

Other enemy craft destroyed were: One Zeppelin, fourteen transports, six ammunition and supply ships, two store ships, fifty-three steamships and 197 sailing ships.

In no case was a merchant ship sunk at sight. Care was taken to see that the crews of all vessels got away safely.

In addition to carrying out their attacks on enemy war craft, the submarines played an important part in convoy work.

SEA TRADE FOR AMERICA.

Opportunity Here to Gain Markets of the World, Hurley Declares.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—The war has revived the American merchant marine and presented Uncle Sam with a golden opportunity of restoring the American flag to the seven seas and keeping it there.

What American business men make of this opportunity to obtain a vast foreign trade of rich profit depends upon their initiative and the wisdom of the United States government as the demands of war transportation relax and the great fleet of American ships begins to ply the routes around the world.

Edwin N. Hurley of Chicago, chairman of the Shipping Board, sailed for Europe on the Olympic today with a twofold object in view. He will participate in the Allied conferences on the allocation of tonnage for the transportation of food and reconstruction materials from the United States to Europe. He will also study the British and French plans for re-establishing foreign trade and expects to come home prepared to advise the administration and American producers and shippers on the means of taking and holding the American share of export business.

Before departing on this mission Mr. Hurley addressed to every organization of business men in the country an appeal in which he said:

"I am going to call upon your organization for some teamwork. The time has come for Americans everywhere to put themselves solidly behind American ships.

"Our railroads must no longer stop at the ocean. We are building an American merchant fleet of 25,000,000 tons—3000 ships. We are backing modern ships with modern port facilities, establishing our bunkering stations all over the globe, and will operate with American railroad efficiency. We will carry American cargoes at rates corresponding to our railroad rates—the cheapest in the world. Fast American passenger and cargo liners will run regularly to every port in Latin America, the Orient, Africa, Australia.

"Are you taking steps to use the ships to increase your own prosperity? Do you realize that American products of factory, farm and mine can be delivered to customers in foreign countries on terms which will build lasting trade?

"Do you realize the possibilities for bringing back raw materials to extend your products and trade?

"We must all take off our coats and work to bring these American ships home to the people of every American interest and community. The manufacturer must think of customers in Latin America as being as accessible as those in the next State. The farmer must visualize ships carrying his wheat, cotton, breeding animals, dairy products and fruit to new world markets. The American boy must think of ships and foreign countries when he chooses a calling.

"Has your organization appointed a live committee on merchant marine? Is the chairman of this committee a man of international vision?

"Are you applying the new world vision to the interests represented in your organization and learning what ships can do toward widening your markets?

"These are your ships. It is your duty to bring them close; regard them as new railroads, spread knowledge about them through investigation, meetings, discussions.

"Public neglect ruined our old merchant marine. Congress was not to blame—it simply reflected the indifference towards ships of the average American. Once more we have a real American merchant fleet under way, backed by far-reaching policies for efficient operation. We must dispel indifference and keep our flag on the trade routes of the world. We are going to take trade from no other nations. But we must serve our own customers and help other nations in their ocean transportation problems after the war.

DAYS OF OPPORTUNITY.

"I want to hear personally from your organization. These are precious days of opportunity. The nation is united for team-work and service. Let us 'wake up, America!' Which means waking up ourselves. I expect you to write me outlining your views and making any suggestions that you think will be helpful in our work."

As he was leaving for New York, Mr. Hurley, in response to an inquiry, admitted that he expected to give considerable attention to foreign-trade problems while abroad.

"British policy," he said, "seeks to develop all the resources of the far-spread British empire. A world-wide inventory is being taken of the metals, the fibers, the crops and other resources of British colonies, so that John Bull may supply his own needs as far as possible, and may increase the prosperity of Britons everywhere by developing their resources, broadening their trade and raising their incomes and living standards.

"Our task is to use American merchant ships, American dollars, American factories and American ability to help other nations in the same way.

TRADE FIELDS.

"Since the Civil War we have learned what railroads, money and energy will do for undeveloped sections in our great West. After the world war we must learn what American ships and American money and American energy can do for the undeveloped sections of other nations—such sections as the rich mineral country of the west coast of South America, the great fertile Amazon basin, the growing nations of Ausaralia and South Africa, so like our own in many ways. We shall have the ships, and they must be filled both on the out voyage and homeward bound, and the very basis of business for our merchant marine is to build new trade for ourselves by helping other nations increase their production and finding them new markets.

"Before the war both Great Britain and America were commercially asleep. America had no mercantile marine, and could neither develop her own trade in manufactured goods, nor serve other nations by improving their markets for raw materials. Great Britain had her wonderful empire, but permitted Germany to develop many of its resources through German ships and German scientific production. Germany overreached herself because her philosophy of trade and shipping was wrong—based upon selfish exploitation and one-sided dealing. England and America have both learned their lessons. They are now waking up to the possibilities in a new world of international service. 'He profits most who serves most.' One nation cannot prosper at the expense of another.

"World trade is not one-sided—both parties to a bargain must be better off after the exchange is made. Trade in both raw materials and manufactured goods is unsound and transitory unless behind it the nations making the exchange are developing their agriculture, their mines, their factories, their transportation, wealth and living standards. Our new merchant ships will take us into this great field of international service and international opportunity. It is time for Americans everywhere to think of world trade from this angle of raw materials."

WAR FUND QUOTA FAR OFF.

Four Western States Go Over Top, and California will, Declares Moggs.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 16.—Oregon is the fourth Western State to attain its quota toward the $170,500,000 United War Work fund, it was announced today at western headquarters. Oregon reached its goal yesterday, at noon. Nevada, Utah and Montana already have been reported as having reached their quotas. Oregon's quota is $767,250.

California had attained $3,209,155 toward its quota, an increase of about $700,000 since noon, at the 6 o'clock compilation of figures today. Ernest L. Moggs, California campaign director, declared tonight that this State was taking its war work campaign as it took the last Liberty Loan drive, with "the enthusiasm and spirit of intensive work coming in the last days of the campaign. I have no doubt of California," he said. "We are simply going to have a whirlwind finish."

Word was received here tonight that the campaign had been ordered extended two days, to end Wednesday night, November 20, instead of next Monday night. The news came in a telegram from New York headquarters of the campaign and local officials said they had not had it long enough to determine what special steps they would take to utilize the added period.

WILL EXTEND FUND TIME.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 16.—With only $108,405,408 on hand towards its revised goal of $250,000,000, officials of the United War Work campaign announced tonight that the drive, scheduled to end next Monday night, would be continued until Wednesday night.

Eleven States have passed their quotas, according to telegrams received at national headquarters, but pending official confirmation, none of these reports has been recognized.

The eleven States which establish the fact that they were first to pass their quotas will have the honor of having Y.M.C.A., Knights of Columbus or Salvation Army huts named after them. The eleven States which show the largest oversubscription will be similarly honored.

The official report issued tonight showed the nation's total divided as follows:

"Eastern army department, $38,868,974; Northeastern department, $10,601,136; Central department, $42,337,957; Southeastern department, $5,815,901; Southern department, $5,245,330; Western department, $5,267,887.

AIR MAIL LINE TO EAST.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—Mail from Los Angeles may soon reach New York by air route in thirty-six hours.

Postmaster - General Burleson soon will have assigned to him enough equipment and army aviators to make the air mail service from the Atlantic to the Pacific a regular thing and it is hoped to make the passage from New York to Los Angeles in thirty-six hours as soon as the flying fields and beacons are all established and the night flying made as safe and certain as the day flying now is between Washington and New York and between New York and Chicago.

The air mail service from this city to New York has been 100 per cent. for the last three months in all sorts of weather, and so successful has been the financial result that the service is more than self-sustaining. One of the most conspicuous things to western visitors in New York are little white mail boxes with the legend: "This box for airplane mail only." One of the results of the war has been to advance the use of air in peace times at least a quarter of a century and to squeeze the Pacific Coast closer to the Atlantic by annihilating more than half the time for the transmission of mail and light packages.

Los Angeles will lose, temporarily at least, the great aviation repair and reconstruction depot planned for this point for the rehabilitation of all aircraft for the Pacific Coast. Signing of the armistice may delay this for several years, but it is believed that as soon as the air mail service between the east and the Pacific ports is well established the aviation repair depot will be started, and all army and civilian air experts agree that Los Angeles is the logical place for this great plant.

Volunteer Players Still on the Job.

Lifting of the influenza quarantine at the cantonments has been followed by the return of the Volunteer Players to their work of amusing the men remaining in service. The Misses Mirza Marston and Leota Howard are here shown saluting E. H. Philbrook and asking for a ride in an anniversary model Apperson car. The Volunteer Players defray all their expenses besides donating their services, and they appreciate free rides from motorists.

AMONG THE FANS.

With winter coming on and new players drifting in for the winter, the local club will soon have to enlarge their quarters to pre-war size.

Now that the war is over and the "flu" going out of business, the checker clubs all over the country will be holding championship tourneys.

Preston Ketchum, who has lived in California the past fifteen years, has returned to his old home in Madison, Wis. Mr. Ketchum was a member of the local club several years ago, but has made his home in San Francisco for the past ten years.

Wandsworth recently ran the following news item in his column in the Chicago Daily News: "W. T. Kerr of Rennerdale, Pa., received word from Newell W. Banks, world's champion checker player, who is now in service overseas, that a match has been arranged between him and James Ferrie, eleven pieces a side, two-move restrictions. Why not play checkers?"

LOS ANGELES TIMES GAME, NO. 625.

"Aryshire Lassie."

(Taken from the Melbourne Weekly Times.)

A new line.

Following is some interesting play by A. Bodan in the "Glasgow Herald," on what appears to be a new line of the "Aryshire Lassie" opening. Mr. Bodan calls it the "Bristol," but that is not correct; it is an "Ayrshire Lassie" game. Score:

11-15	12-19	4-8	3-8	19-23
24-20	27-23c	27-23	30-16	17-3
15-18a	8-12	8-12	8-12	12-19
22-15b	23-16	23-16	25-22	27-18
10-19	12-19	12-19	9-14	2-7
23-16	31-27	32-27	22-17d	B. wins

a—15-19 would, of course, be Bristol.

b—Both the text and 23-14 give great scope for analysis.

c—21-17 or 25-22 is preferable. The inherent weakness of the "knock-down Bristol" seems to also cling to the "run-off" in this game.

d—Fatal. 28-24 also loses by 19-28, 22-17, 12-19, 17-8, 19-22, 26-19, 2-7. Other lines, however, which have a better appearance are 27-24 and 27-23. The former seems preferable.

a—So as to get White to obstruct the diagonal on which his queen's bishop must operate. Ed Lasker, in his Strategy, suggests Q-R4 ch for a like purpose.

b—I expected Q-K2, so as to prevent Black's advancing his pawn to K4 and to prepare for the advance of White's knight to K5.

c—I had originally intended Kt-KKt5; P-KR3, Kt B3. The move made, however, is O.K.

d—If BxB; B-K5, BxP ch; KxB coming out with bishop and knight for rook and pawn.

e—R-K2 looks safer, but White finds a way to meet all the difficulties which the text invites.

f—This saves the situation. Black cannot take the rook, as White by retaking bishop with queen would threaten QxRP mate. Black would then have nothing better than R-K7, leaving the bishop at Kt7 to be captured.

g—White has an awkward position to handle. This, though giving Black control of the center, is safer than Q-K2.

h—An extraordinary oversight for an important game. Black should have played R-K1; R B3, Q-Q3. So long as Black had control of the center he had the easier game to play, but if the queens and rooks were exchanged White would have the easier ending on account of Black's doubled pawn. The legitimate result in either case, however, would have been a draw.

ARRANGES LECTURES ON FOREIGN TRADE.

UNIVERSITY EXTENSION GETS SERVICES OF PROMINENT AMERICAN EXPERTS.

During these first post-war days, the Chamber of Commerce is striving to impress upon the business men of Los Angeles the importance to this city of foreign trade.

The manufacturers and merchants realize that Los Angeles is the natural port through which the trade of the Pacific Coast should flow. They know that Los Angeles is the closest port of call between the Panama Canal and the Far East; they know that Los Angeles has the most direct railroad lines and the easiest grades to the interior. They know all the city's many advantages, but, and here is the point to be emphasized, these facts, so well known here, must be made known to foreign merchants.

The University of California extension division, with the co-operation of the Chamber of Commerce, is arranging for a number of lectures on foreign trade for the special benefit of Los Angeles business men. Lecturers, not only of national but of international reputation, are being sought. The university feels that, because of the importance of the subject and the many angles presented by it, only men of eminent standing, specialists in their fields, should be chosen for the work.

Prof. Bernard Moses, professor emeritus of the University of California, has already promised to come south from Berkeley to give three lectures. Prof. Moses was a member of the Philippine Commission in 1902, delegate to the Pan-American Scientific Congress at Santiago de Chile, and to the international conference of American states at Buenois Aires, and plenipotentiary to Chile. The extension bureau is also in touch with Dr. W. E. Auginbaugh, foreign and export editor of the New York Commercial, and holder of the chair of foreign trade at the University of New York.

It is hoped that the work can be started by the first week in December. Information may be obtained at extension headquarters, No. 509 Union League Building.

[BY PACIFIC CABLE AND A. P.]

TOKIO, Friday, Nov. 15. — The Emperor, Foreign Minister Uchida and Mayor Tajiri of Tokio have sent congratulatory messages on the Allied victory to the heads of the Allied states and various Allied officials.

Foreign Minister Uchida said the problems of the peace conference would be settled easily, but that others connected with the reorganization of the world were more complicated and would require long consideration. He hoped the Japanese would carefully consider the lesson of the German downfall and arrange the national policy of Japan to meet the new world situation.

MEDAL FOR PERSHING.

PARIS, Nov. 16, 6:15 p.m. — American Ambassador Sharp, Gen. Bliss and Admiral Benson went to American main headquarters today to present to Gen. Pershing, the American commander-in-chief, the American Distinguished Service Medal. Much interest attaches to the ceremony, as the medal recently was presented to Marshal Foch, Field Marshal Haig and Gen. Petain by Gen. Pershing.

Presentation of the medal to Gen. Pershing is regarded as a mark of tribute to his work in assembling the American troops in Europe and then conducting them in the decisive campaign.

FULTON BESTS MEEHAN.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 16. — In one of the fiercest four-round fights ever staged here, Fred Fulton of Kansas tonight won a decision over Willie Meehan of San Francisco. The men slugged their way through every minute of the four rounds. Meehan centered his attack on Fulton's body, while the latter concentrated on Meehan's face with a constant succession of straight lefts.

Fulton towered head and shoulders over Meehan and had a distinct advantage in reach. This Meehan attempted to nullify by infighting.

The fight by rounds:

ROUND ONE.

The men started infighting, both playing for the body. Whenever Fulton could get Meehan at arms' length he drove straight lefts into his face. Near the close of the round Meehan drove Fulton against the ropes with a fusillade of blows to the stomach. Round even.

ROUND TWO.

Meehan attacked Fulton's body while the latter played for Meehan's head with straight lefts. They fought head to head. Meehan was bleeding freely as a result of Fulton's sharp punches to his face. Fulton's round.

ROUND THREE.

Meehan rushed Fulton to the ropes, despite several lefts to his face. In a rapid exchange of blows Meehan had Fulton backing up. Fulton got in some more jabs to the face and Meehan, partly blinded by the flow of blood, clinched. Fulton's round.

ROUND FOUR.

Meehan rushed Fulton to the ropes, swinging to the body. They exchanged a volley of rights and lefts to the head. Standing toe to toe, both threw science to the winds and slugged. Meehan was nearly out when the gong rang. Fulton's round.

A feautre of the evening was an impromptu bout between Mayor James Rolph, Jr., of San Francisco and Roscoe "Fatty" Arbuckle, a motion-picture actor, in which his honor made a record by scoring a knockout without striking a blow.

Preliminary bouts at tonight's boxing show resulted as follows:

Jimmy Duffy received an unpopular decision over Joe Benjamin, four rounds.

Joe Coffey knocked out Roy Conway in three rounds.

"Wildcat" Leonard and Billy Shade boxed four rounds to a draw.

"Salinas Jack" Robinson was given a decision over Steve Dalton, four rounds.

Walter McDevitt received a decision over "Red" Murphy, four rounds.

THEY ALL SING AT LEWIS.

Northern Camp Made Melodious by Man Who Kicked Classics Out.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

CAMP LEWIS, Nov. 9.—If you add an "S" to the name of "Everybody Sing" Lyons, Y.M.C.A. singing director at Camp Lewis, you have it exactly, for everybody does sing at the cantonment. The soldiers have their phonographs, pianos, orchestras and bands—but it is when singing that they are the happiest.

Many men have reported at Camp Lewis who said they cared little or nothing for singing, couldn't sing and didn't care to learn. After a session with Robert J. Lloyd, singing director for the war camp community service, or "Everybody Sing" Lyons, however, they promptly came to believe that singing had its place in the life of the soldier.

When Mr. Lloyd arrived at Camp Lewis he promptly visited the Chief of Staff. He asked that training in singing be made a part of regular work of developing Hun killers. So well did he plead his case that men came to Lloyd in the Liberty Theater battalion by battalion until all were filled with enthusiasm.

SINGING CONVERTS.

As they came out of the theater they hummed snatches of popular airs which a few minutes before had filled the building. They were singing converts. And they have been singing ever since.

J. Festyn Davies, a musical director of note in the Northwest, was the first singing instructor at Camp Lewis. He confined his instruction, however, to chorus work, and his pupils, some of whom had been on the grand-opera stage, took part in programmes which pleased music lovers wherever they were given.

But when Lloyd and Lyons came popular music only was taught. Just now the cantonment is resounding to the stirring strains of "Mr. Zip! Zip! Zip!" which Mr. Lloyd wrote and which the soldiers say is "some song."

Before the United States contracted to help the Allies lick Germany, Mr. Lloyd did not know a single piece of popular music; he admits that he confined himself to the classics. He soon found out, however, what kind of music interested the majority of men at camp and proceeded to teach it to them.

WAVES OF MUSIC.

The first group of singers consisted of only sixty voices. Later as many as 10,000 men, more than a brigade, nearly half a division, sang under the direction of Lloyd. In regular formation they stood on the prairie parade ground, their combined voices sending wave on wave of music across the drill field.

Civilian visitors at the cantonment always praise the singers. The giant choruses to them are among the most interesting and entertaining of the features at the camp.

Mr. Lloyd superintends the teaching of singing for the whole cantonment and directs the large choruses. Mr. Lyons teaches singing at the Y.M.C.A. huts and directs many of the smaller groups of men.

"Singing soldiers" from the cantonment played a prominent part in the Fourth Liberty Loan campaign in the cities near the camp. In groups of twenty or more they marched down business streets singing through megaphones. They never failed to get an ovation—nothing less.

COUNTLESS INSTRUMENTS.

There isn't a single barrack at Camp Lewis without a phonograph. A woman whose identity has never been disclosed gave more than a hundred phonographs and records to the soldiers months ago, and since that time others have followed her example. In many of the barracks are pianos, and all the recreation halls and buildings of that character have them.

There are countless ukuleles, mandolins, banjos, guitars and other instruments in nearly every barrack—and they are used.

Every regiment and separate unit at Camp Lewis has its band, too. Practically without exception the leaders are men who directed bands in civil life and are accomplished musicians. The bands are popular at gatherings and activities of all kinds at the cantonment, including smoker and athletic contests. No review is complete without its bands and no parade in a city near the cantonment is complete without Camp Lewis bands.

Bandmaster Reginald W. Dunn, pianist, violinist, composer, wrote the music for the "Ode to Peace" that opened the last Hague peace conference, but today he is leader of the Thirty-seventh Field Artillery Band and Orchestra. He is rapidly whipping the band into one of the best in the Northwest.

FRIEND OF CELEBRITIES.

When he came here no one knew him as Dunn, friend of celebrities, composer, artist, whose compositions have been sung by Melba. Just as one of the fifty-five other men, he joined the band when the call came for an organization, but three or four days later, by choice of his fellow-members, he was selected to lead the band, and the day following he was playing in Tacoma for the Liberty Loan campaign — and getting more applause than had been given any of the older organizations.

"The war offers every man a splendid opportunity for discipline," said Mr. Dunn. "It will promote the development of the man within by his discipline."

Mr. Dunn is writing a march for the regiment. He has composed an Indian suite, an Irish suite and several operas. During the last few years he had studied under Prof. Daniel de Lange, founder and director of the Amsterdam Conservatory. He counts among his warm friends Percy Grainger, Walter Damrosch, Godowsky, G. W. Chadwick and Charles Wakefield Cadman.

HUNS WHIPPED TO FLIGHT.

Berlin's boast that the recent evacuation of the St. Mihiel salient was "a retreat designed for well-ordered strategical purposes" is exploded by a Blythe soldier with the American forces in France. He is William T. Utter, formerly of Corona, son of Rev. William S. Utter of Palo Verde Valley, and for two years principal of a high school.

Young Utter was taking his post-graduate course at Columbia University when he joined the overseas expedition. In a letter to his father, dated September 22, the young soldier describes the flight of the Huns in their evacuation, as a precipitate and frightened retreat. Immense quantities of commissary stores, ammunition, musical instruments and armament were left behind as the Prussians fled in disorder, he states. He adds that many prisoners allowed themselves to be captured with joyous "kamerads," while their unhappy comrades-in-arms were beaten on their way by their officers, who gave them no chance to give themselves up. Captured Germans, states Utter, showed amazement at the strength of the Americans, as they had been told the Americans numbered only a couple of hundred camp followers who were making money from the Allies.

Walter F. Burr, another valley youth in France, writes that captured Germans stated their officers were carrying whips to beat the dispirited soldiers onward. One captured German, who was half blind, declared his left eye had been cut out by a whip blow from his oberofficer.

TRADE LICENSES REMAIN.

William Dunkerley of the local bureau of exports of the War Trading Board, who has been especially active in his work since the beginning of the war, has received instructions to function as usual until peace has been officially declared, possibly six months in the future. That means there will be no change in the matter of licenses to import or export within that time.

Mr. Dunkerley said yesterday that the foreign trade of Los Angeles' merchants with Mexico and the republics of South and Central America is increasing by leaps and bounds, in spite of the fact that hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of goods consigned to those sections had been credited in the export reports of New York, San Francisco, New Orleans and other ports, where it had been necessary to ship the goods because of the lack of overseas merchant vessels at the local port. This has been a distinct hardship to Los Angeles merchants, for by reason of this arrangement values had appeared in the export figures of other cities for goods that had been manufactured and shipped from here.

"There are a number of our larger firms that have secured a footing in the commercial world south of us," said Mr. Dunkerley, "for they have sent representatives to those countries charged with the duty of investigating trade conditions and what are needed there. It has proven a paying proposition, and with the close of the war I look to see still further activities along that line. It has cost money to make these investigations, but it has been well expended."

LLOYD GEORGE FAVORS COALITION ELECTION

FAVORS IMPERIAL PREFERENCES; OPPOSES THE COERCION OF ULSTER.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LONDON, Nov. 16.—(British Wireless Service.) Premier Lloyd George has sent a letter to Chancellor of the Exchequer Bonar Law, leader of the Unionist party, outlining his policy regarding the general election and the principal issues of the day.

The Premier says he is convinced there should be a general election, his principal reason being that it is essential there should be a fresh Parliament possessed of authority to deal with the difficult transitional period which will follow the cessation of hostilities.

Mr. Lloyd George considers it should be a coalition election, the constituents being invited to return candidates who will undertake to support the present government, not only to prosecute the war to a final end and to negotiate peace, but to deal with problems of reconstruction.

Dealing with imperial preferences the Premier says:

"I have already accepted the policy of imperial preferences as defined in resolutions of the imperial conference to the effect that preference will be given on existing duties and on any duties which may subsequently be imposed.

"One of the great objects which must be aimed at in the future is to maintain an improved agricultural position, and for this purpose a great deal can be done in many directions, including, for instance, improvement, indeed a complete change, of the transport situation.

"In order to keep up the proper standard of production and develop it to the utmost extent possible, it is necessary that security should be given against unfair competition, to which our industry has in the past been subjected by the selling of goods below the actual cost of production."

Dealing with the home-rule question, the Premier said:

"I can support no settlement which would impose a forcible coercion of Ulster. Eighteen months ago the government made alternative proposals for a settlement of the Irish problem. It offered either to bring home rule into immediate operation, while excluding the six counties of Ulster from its operations, but setting up at the same time a joint council which would be empowered to extend legislation of an Irish Parliament to Ulster, or set up a convention of representative Irishmen to endeavor to find a settlement for themselves.

"The second alternative was adopted, but unfortunately, after nearly a year of earnest deliberations, the convention found themselves unable to arrive at anything like an agreement.

"In these circumstances I the right to bring a settlement effect based on the first of the alternatives. I recognize, however, that in the present condition of land such an attempt could not succeed, and that it must be postponed until the condition of Ireland it possible."

VOL. XXXVII. SUNDAY MORNING, NOVEMBER 17, 1918. THE MART {Bargains in Blocks and Squares. Transactions in Houses and Lots.

FACT AND COMMENT.

It used to be said in jealous rival sections that Southern California's principal crop was tourists. It might give satisfaction to some communities, therefore, to learn that this crop for the local season now opening is going to be the biggest of its kind on record.

Tourists in great numbers had already started for this section from all over the East and Middle West when the influenza epidemic came to harass everybody at home, and that, it should be remembered, was before the glorious peace with victory, which has now brought such joy and optimism to the nation, was even a first-class prospect. Now the disease has abated on the other side of the Rockies so that people feel safe in venturing abroad, and has dropped off to such an extent in this part of the country that they will have their former hesitation about coming here. Of enormously more importance as affecting tourist travel, the war has come to a triumphant close.

Thousands of manufacturers who have been bound to their desks by important war contracts for the government, and thousands of business and professional men who have been tied down to their occupations on account of the sustained speeding up of every-day activities, and the shortage of man power in every line, are ready now for the relaxation and rest which they believe is their due. They are coming to the great summerland of the Pacific in such numbers as they never came before, and they are bringing their families for a good long stay. Great numbers of them are never going back.

The big tourist hotels of Southern California without exception report an unprecedented number of telegrams from the East for reservations. The rental agencies of Los Angeles declare that never before have they received so many inquiries at this season of the year for furnished and unfurnished residences, flats and apartments. There has been an avalanche of them since the armistice was signed. It is quite evident that even with the restriction on building removed, it will be [illegible] Los Angeles can possibly do [illegible] provide new buildings rapidly enough to house the visitors that will flock here from now until next summer.

Some idea of what to expect may be gained from the size of the vanguard that is now arriving daily over the five transcontinental railroads. Hundreds must have left their homes almost immediately upon the receipt of the peace news, having apparently been waiting for that great moment before actually securing transportation.

A Prediction.

The Fact and Comment man has no particular desire to pose as a prophet, but one prediction seems so logical as to be worth recording. It is this: There are going to be literally hundreds of great estates laid out by people of wealth in and around Los Angeles in the next year or two. Our collection of "show places" is going to be added to and multiplied from now on. Great numbers of those coming here will be men who have made fortunes either through the general stimulation of industry during the war, or in the carrying out of contracts directly for the government. Many of these men are through with active business life and have made up their minds to settle down on the most delightful of earth's spots they can find. That is Southern California and most of them know it. They will come here and build the beautiful homes that they have dreamed they would some day occupy.

Some of them will signalize the sincerity and permanency of their choice by making investments in city and country real estate, or in our growing industries and businesses, settling down and watching their wealth grow. Some will invest in large tracts of land, fertile, for development and set in picturesque environment, establishing fine country estates, with blooded live stock for their diversion and practical profit, and the setting of an example for the upbuilding of agriculture as their helpful object in life. Those coming with such intentions will find that innumerable others ahead of them have set the pace and demonstrated what can be done with the right soil and ample capital for development in this favored region. Throughout the dull times of the past year or two country realty in beautiful suburban districts against the foothills and in other beautiful situations has been selling right along, indicating that many of prospective "gentlemen farmers" have already progressed so far as to secure their land.

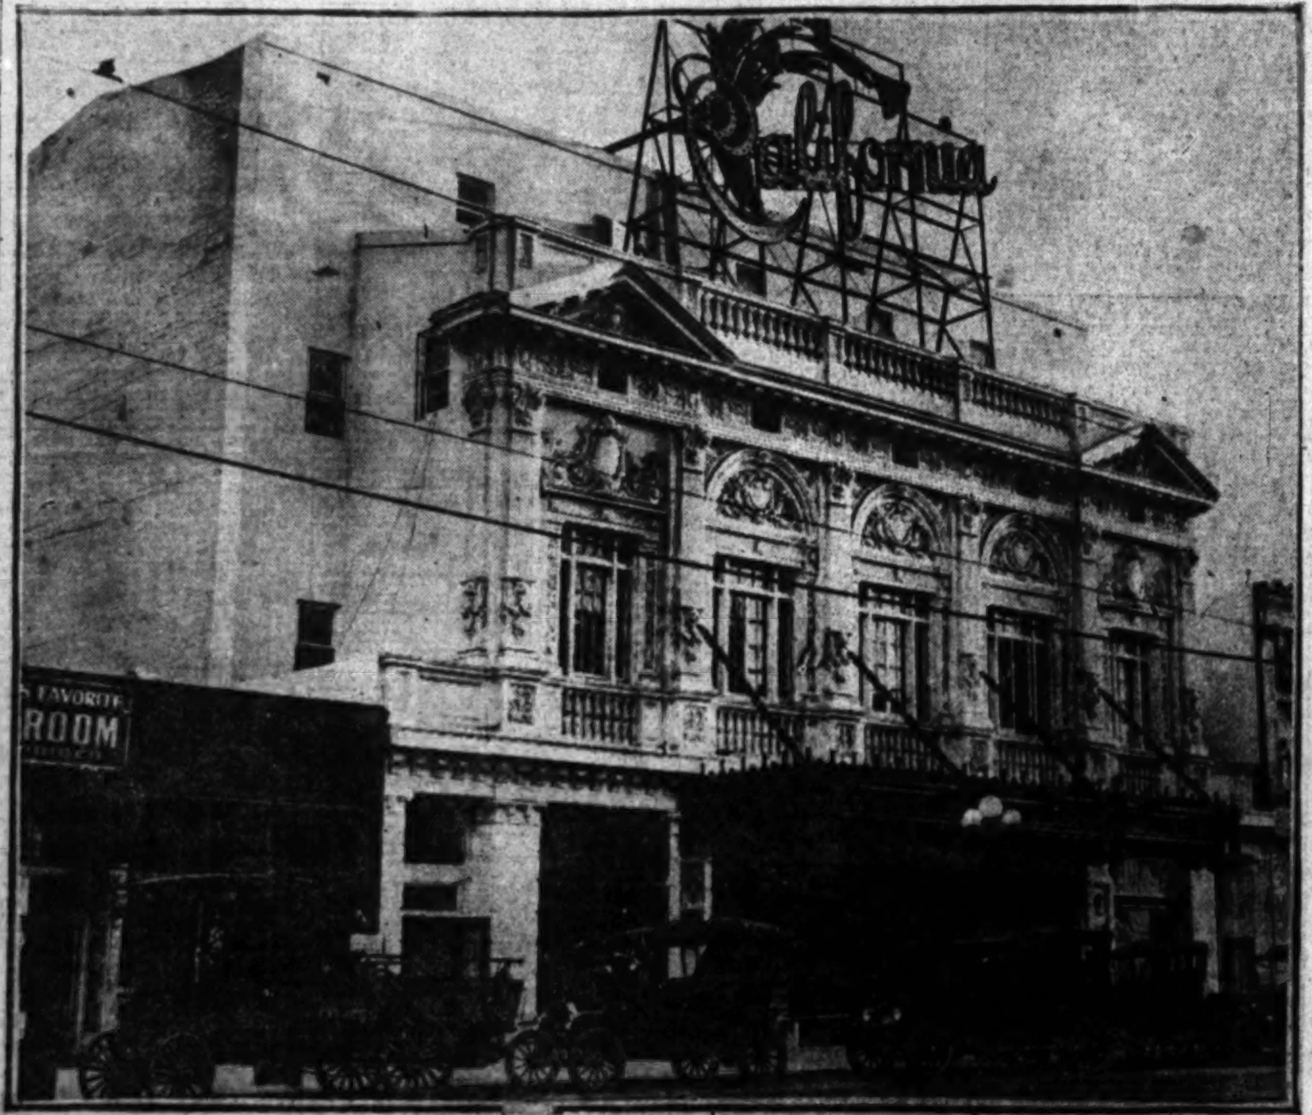
Workers, Too.

It may reasonably be assumed that there will be a great and immediate influx of tourists and new permanent population from all walks of life. Southern California has something of charm and practical attraction for everybody.

Throughout the lean three-year period of dullness which preceded America's entrance into the war, Los Angeles was laying a sure foundation for future prosperity by building an unprecedented number of new factories. This picking up in industry was turned into a great spurt when Uncle Sam called upon the country to drop everything else and concentrate on war industries. Los Angeles, it would hardly be putting it too strong to say, has become a great manufacturing city in a year. And the industries that have been established are here to stay. Smokestacks mean pay rolls, and pay rolls bring people. The workingman and the man of moderate means appreciate and long for life in California as much as do their wealthier fellow-citizens.

It is hardly necessary to comment on the obvious fact that all this influx of population is bound to give a wonderful impetus to the real estate market. The thousands who come will in themselves represent an enormous purchasing capacity and a huge amount of new money. The removal of the ban on construction has already started the builders going, and the realty brokers are optimistic over the sudden picking up in inquiries for vacant properties. The market for improved residence property is good now, owing to the small supply and big demand for this kind of holdings. It is only a question of time, and a very little time at that, in the opinion of the writer of these comments, until things will be hitting along on "all six" again. Those who are thinking of doing any investing in real estate, and who are putting it off, would do well to take stock of the new and changed situation which has come so suddenly to the world in the past few days, and buy while the buying's good.

South Main Street's Palatial New Motion Picture House.



The California Theater, Early Opening of Which is Announced.

The structure, built for F. A. Miller by Col. J. B. Lankershim, is one of the handsomest and most pretentious of its type on the Coast and cost, with its equipment, upward of $250,000. Its auditorium has a seating capacity of 2500. The building was planned by A. B. Rosenthal and erected by the contracting firm of Winter & Nicholson. The theater combines some of the best features of the newer playhouses of the East, Harry Leonhardt, one of Mr. Miller's associates, having visited a number of Atlantic seaboard cities in quest of the latest ideas in planning and arrangement.

NEW AUCTION HOUSE.

Attractive Structure on South Figueroa Street Thrown Open to the Public.

The spacious new auction house of Hart & Ball, No. 1026 South Figueroa street, devoted to the sale of real estate, live stock, merchandise and household goods, has been thrown open to the public.

The building is of attractive design and of red brick and concrete construction, with a frontage of sixty feet. The two floors contain over 12,000 square feet of floor space.

The arrangement of the building marks a new departure in auction-house construction. On the lower floor are located the large display hall, the main salesroom, office, lavatories, ladies' restroom, smoking-room, rug and carpet department, linen and bedding department, kitchen utensils and miscellaneous departments and kitchen and dining-rooms, where lunch is prepared and served to patrons during each auction sale. On the upper floor are located the refrigerator and linoleum departments, together with twenty-five storage-rooms for individual consignments. A separate department for private residence and out-of-town sales is maintained, and business throughout the entire Southwest will be catered to.

The firm is composed of Lewis S. Hart and Harry P. Ball.

HOTELS LEASED.

East Fifth-street Hostelry Secured by Syndicate — Santa Barbara Property Changes Hands.

During the past week, E. W. Cason & Co. leased the Hotel Bowers, at No. 609 East Fifth street, and also sold the furniture and leased the Hotel Barbara at Santa Barbara. The latter is a house of about 100 rooms belonging to Neal Callahan. The furniture, it is reported, sold for $15,000, and the lease, covering a period of five years, called for a given total rental in the neighborhood of $50,000. This included also the garage in connection with the hotel. Thomas Cupit, Jr., of Chicago, and E. D. Hurlbut of Park City, Utah, are the new proprietors of the Barbara.

The Hotel Bowers was leased by the Riverside Heights Company, John A. Merrill, president, to Ben Weingart, head of a local hotel syndicate. The lease calls for a term of three years and a given total rental of $20,000. The Bowers will be renamed the Hotel Hoover. It is a reinforced fireproof structure, containing 125 rooms. J. D. Minster of E. W. Cason & Co. represented all parties in the two transactions.

FIRM DOUBLES ITS CAPACITY.

CARBURETOR MANUFACTURERS SECURE SOUTH LOS ANGELES-STREET BUILDING.

The W. Ross Campbell Company, through Richard C. Willis of its leasing department, reports having concluded negotiations with the Harry A. Miller Manufacturing Company for a long-term lease, which will give this company an additional working area of nearly 100 per cent. The premises involved is a two-story brick building owned by Anna Gregg and W. C. Twiss and containing over 15,000 square feet, located at the northeast corner of Seventeenth and Los Angeles streets.

The Miller company is manufacturer of carburetors used on all classes of airplane, marine and automobile engines. It employs a number of experts and many machinists in the manufacture of this product. The expansion at this time is necessary to allow for additional machinery and employees which the firm must take on to handle its rapidly-increasing business.

Mr. Willis also reports leasing a garage at No. 248 Winston street for Frank Harbert to the S. Bachmann Cigar Company. This company has recently put on several automobile trucks for delivery of its product in Los Angeles and vicinity and has taken over this garage for housing its cars.

HARVARD HOME SOLD.

Announcement is made of the sale by Karl Stern of a six-room residence at No. 900 South Harvard boulevard to Dave Gould of the Gould Hat and Frame Company. The deal was made direct between the principals.

A COUNTRY HOME PLACE.
BELOW REAL VALUE.

Do you want to get away from the city's noise and travel out into the countryside, but not too far away. Where you can have the glorious mountains with their pure air, but not have to climb them. Where the city and the ocean in the distance give you an ever-changing restful view. Plenty of ground; think of it—five acres in the highest state of cultivation, orange and lemon and grape fruit all in full bearing, and enough to put the property on almost a paying income basis. Many other fruit trees, ornamental trees and shrubs of every variety. Located on Foothill boulevard, about 25 minutes from Broadway in the very choicest residential section. Surrounding vacant sites are considered cheap at $37,500. This is improved with good eight-room house, large sleeping porches, plenty of light and air and many thousand dollars have been spent in improving and beautifying the grounds, yet we can offer this choice home place for many thousand dollars less than the site alone is worth. FOR SALE—
GET WISE TO YOUR OPPORTUNITY.
You who remember or have been told about the wonderful increase in value of farm lands from 1864 to 1868. Cheap money makes high price lands.
YOUR OPPORTUNITY.
FIVE, TEN, TWENTY or more acres of the Old Mission Lands. These are part of the large tract selected by the Franciscan Fathers in 1797 when they had the choice of all the valley. With their usual good judgment they took the best, choosing the wonderful fertile and almost frostless slope on the north side of the valley. Many fine orange and lemon groves now give proof of their good judgment. There is now growing on these lands this season, tomatoes, bush lima beans, beets, alfalfa and all kinds of garden truck. We are not asking citrus land prices. We are selling good level land under irrigation and cultivation as low as $350 per acre in twenty-acre tracts; smaller tracts a little higher.

OIL SHORTAGE IS INCREASING—

No better investment can be made now than test holes in new territory. The country needs all the oil you can find, and you have a safe and sure market.

But don't resort to old-fashioned methods of drilling with large and expensive machinery. Never forget the cost of a hole increases in the approximate proportion to the "square of its diameter."

So drill smaller diameter holes with the latest and most efficient portable machines ever built for territories from 800 to 2500 feet deep. Write us for particulars and circular.

[illegible] IS ONE OF THOSE HIGH-CLASS INvestments that we speak of in our general ads, a dry goods and specialty store in good town 30 miles from Los Angeles. Established [illegible] years, never changed hands or been offered for sale by anyone except myself this time. It cleared about $6000 last year and is steadily growing. Invoices about $15,000. A cleaner or better all-around store cannot be found in California. This is the kind of store a broker takes pleasure in showing; everything open, books well kept, stock in A-1 condition, all carefully selected and not a dollar's worth of junk in the place. The owner is retiring and is not in any hurry to sell, but you can rest assured the man or woman who gets this store has one of the very best propositions of this kind in the entire country. The wholesale stores would be the best way to get a line on it.

WEEKLY FINANCIAL REVIEW

NEW YORK, Nov. 16.—The many unqualified assurances from official sources that the coming period of trade adjustment will be managed with due regard to all interests was the paramount influence of the week in the securities market.

Washington is understood to be co-operating heartily with the leaders of finance and industry to effect an easy transition from war to peace. It is generally recognized that some of the most delicate problems now facing the big interests of this country have their origin not only in the countries of the Entente Alliance, but in Central Europe as well. A comforting feature of the domestic situation was the announcement by the Treasury Department of a reduced programme of war taxation.

Foremost trade authorities agree that the immediate aspects of the general business are very confusing. Commodity prices recorded further downward revision this month, but buying in many lines was at a standstill in anticipation of further reductions.

The end of the week found prices of active stocks 2 to 10 points under the corresponding period of last week. Industrials, shippings, oils and motors were most adversely affected, rails yielding only nominally.

Apart from developments due to the termination of the war, it is generally believed that credit restrictions will continue to exercise their restraints. From present indications time money will hold at prevailing rates, with little or no increase of supply.

CITRUS MARKET REVIEW.

ORANGES AND LEMONS.

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 15.—The movement of new-crop navels from Tulare county has not come up to early expectations and will be further delayed by the rainfall of yesterday and today. Just how much rain has fallen has not been ascertained, but reports from Tulare county state that the rainfall has been sufficient to stop picking and extended throughout the entire citrus belt. The cool nights have been coloring up the oranges but it is thought that the ratio of acids and soluble solids may drop a little as a result. Tests are showing as high as 13 and 14 to 1, however, and any drop in the ratio will have little bearing on the shipping of the fruit.

Latest estimates place the navel crop of Central California at between 1500 and 1600 cars. The Valencia crop will probably total close to 1200 cars.

Cash prices on Central California navels are on a basis of $6.25 for cars running 250 boxes 126s and larger and $6.75 for cars having 30 per cent. 126s and larger—shipment next week. F.o.b. quotations, usual terms, range from $6.50 to $7.50, according to sizes.

Florida shippers are placing cars over a wide territory, Florida oranges being reported in Seattle, Portland, Trinidad, Colo.; El Paso, Texas, and up in Calgary. Florida market has dropped about $1 per box. Cars now rolling are reported offered at $3.50 f.o.b. shipping point. Floridas are reported to be showing heavy decay. Boston reports as high as 12 per cent. on shipments to that market and southern markets such as El Paso as high as 20 per cent.

Prices received on sales of Porto Rico oranges continue to favor buyers, the ruling prices follow: 96s, $2.55 to $3.75; 126s, $3.10 to $4.25; 150s, $3.50 to $4.55; 176s, $4.15 to $4.85; 200s, $4.10 to $4.98; 216s, $2.80 to $4.45; 250s, $2.80 to $4.10.

Arrivals of Jamaica oranges in the United States are light. The few selling are showing waste and necessitate repacking. Ruling prices follow: 126s, $4.25 to $4.88; 150s, $4.38 to $5.18; 176s, $4.88 to $5.00; 200s, $4.90 to $5.05; 216s, $4.25 to $5.00.

No new-crop navels have been offering in the auction markets so far. The first car in the New York auction last year was a car of Unabest and Unagood brands shipped by the Lindsay, Merryman Exchange. The car was sold on December 10, the Unabest brand averaging $4.70 and the Unagood $4.25.

So far this season a total of 59 cars oranges have been shipped from Central California as compared with 2 cars to the corresponding date last season.

Northern California reports but two cars shipped to date. Last year to same date no fruit had been moved.

There is very little activity in Southern California packing-houses. Redlands shippers do not expect to move any fruit before the first of December. Pattee & Lett have picked some navels in the Riverside district which are now being sweated. Orange county will probably move some fruit along the latter part of November. Duarte fruit is said to be coloring up in splendid shape. Similar reports are also being received from groves in various districts, but on the whole it is a little too early to look for much satisfactory shipping fruit.

The southern navel crop is expected to run about 60 per cent. of the 1916-17 navel output, which totaled 28,095 cars of 400 boxes each, thus placing the present crop of Southern California navels at about 16,857 cars.

A few straggling cars of Valencias and "off bloom" navels still remain to be sold. The supply of strictly fancy fruit is very light and is selling as high as $10.65 per box average. Poor stock is meeting with keen competition from Porto Rico and Florida oranges and is selling at averages ranging all the way from $4.25 to $6.00 per box.

There is no established working basis on lemon prices at this time. Railroad congestion east of Chicago has delayed the arrival of supplies to eastern markets, causing a temporary higher market than a week ago. Western markets are well supplied with lemons and prices have been generally lower. The "flu" epidemic is subsiding throughout the entire country east of the Rockies and it is expected that a further decline in prices will result when supplies that are now rolling reach their destination.

California's lemon crop will total close to 10,000 cars this season, provided no setback takes place. The greatest consumption of lemons (both California and foreign) in the United States during any year for the past ten years has not exceeded 11,500 cars, thus showing that California shippers are in a position to supply the entire wants of the country for lemons without calling for a box of the foreign product.

COTTON DECLINES ON NEW YORK EXCHANGE.

IN EARLY DEALINGS PRICES JUMPED 90 POINTS, BUT REACTED AT CLOSE.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 16.—In the early dealings on the New York Cotton Exchange today, sales were made at advances of 15@90 points. December contracts, which led the advance, were in demand from spot houses, while Wall street bought on balance. Poor cable service prevented Liverpool business from being a feature and foreign trades were light on both sides of the market.

The South was a small seller, while reporting very strong spot conditions with poor grading and picking, because of continued rains in the Southwest. After the call, the market turned considerably weaker, under liquidation by people who were disappointed at the light Liverpool support. December lost all of its early gains and dropped to 30 points below the previous close, while later months showed declines of about 20 points.

The reactionary movement which followed the opening advance carried prices down 75@120 points from the top, with southern hedge selling a prominent feature on scale down. Final prices were steady, net 5@55 points lower.

RECRUDESCENCE OF L.A.I.

BY CHAPIN HALL.

Perhaps there are more people interested in the affairs and the stock of the Los Angeles Investment Company than almost any other local corporation and the recent activity displayed in the collateral of the big concern has been the cause of much comment.

After being quoted from 30 to 32 for many months with little or no trading the price advanced the other day until a sale was made at 50, and although it has since dropped back to 40 the significant fact remains that it is being actively traded in.

Perhaps the primary cause of the activity may be found in the fact that the Standard Oil Company is drilling within a few hundred feet of company acreage in the southwest. Indications are not wanting that a well may be brought in, in which event it is a logical surmise that the sand may well extend into the holdings of the investment company, in spite of the fact that a test well sunk on the company property was resultless.

So much for the speculative angle to the stock-market activity, an angle in which those actively connected with the company are not as much interested as they are in the fine prospects along the lines upon which the organization specializes, i.e., the development of acreage and the building of homes.

Building operations have been maintained upon a small scale during a part of the war period, and at this time it is said that the demand is fast catching up with the supply, so that an early resumption of a complete building programme is soon anticipated, a schedule which may call for the completion of twelve to fifteen homes every month.

A 500-acre tract adjoining the company's last improved holdings in the southwestern part of the city is next to be opened, and with the reclamation of this land from an acreage to an income basis it is claimed by company officials that the Los Angeles Investment Company will pass from the red-ink side of the ledger to a dividend basis.

Former United States Senator Frank P. Flint is working hard to secure further relief from the government ban upon buildings, and he is hopeful that his efforts may bear fruit. Already buildings costing less than $10,000 may be built unrestricted, and structures up to $25,000 by procuring special permits. It is Senator Flint's contention that steel should be made immediately available for buildings of all classes. He points out that automobile manufacture is to be restored to 75 per cent. of its pre-war efficiency, and claims that there should be a prorating of steel allotment for the benefit of those Southern and Western States in which it is possible to continue a building programme during the winter months.

"Not all of these who come to Los Angeles to spend the winter are wealthy tourists," the Senator says. "Many of them—from 8000 to 10,000, perhaps—are mechanics. Some of these remain; some return, but thousands of them are available for employment while they are here. This labor should be utilized, and it may be without working injustice upon others. Los Angeles has not as many war babies to bury as the eastern cities, which were called upon to produce emergency material in large quantity, and she should not be called upon to undergo the same reconstruction restraints that necessarily prevail in these cities. From 12,000 to 15,000 artisans could probably be profitably employed here during the winter in the building trades, but we must get to work. Excavations should be going in now."

Local Stock Exchange.

As per forecast, the market yesterday assumed a distinctly bullish tone, and there were marked advances in many of the well-established stocks, while the entire board stiffened under an avalanche of buying orders that bore evidence of final emergence from the unsettled condition of the days immediately following the cessation of hostilities.

General Petroleum and Union continued to hold the spotlight on the oil side of the board. General sold up to $118 and closed at that figure bid to $118.50. This stock may be legitimately held for a still further rise, in the opinion of many, while Union, which sold yesterday up to $114.50 and closed at three-quarters, has by no means reached its maximum expansion. In all probability the market will continue to advance.

Trading on the local exchange was brisk throughout the short session. Quite reminiscent of ante-bellum days. There was "pep," and dash that has been lacking during the drab days and a larger percentage than usual of listings were in demand.

Golds were much in evidence, Tom Reed, as usual, being the most active, starting in with a sale at $1.50 and quickly being run up to $1.60, receding slightly toward the close, the final sale of the day being recorded at $1.56. United Eastern brought $4.45, and at the finish $4.47½ was asked. The cheaper stocks were also in evidence, Adams Mining appearing in the sales record at 2½, Gold Ore at 5, Jade at 8 and 8⅛, Sunnyside at 4 and Yellow Pine at $1.35.

Libertys were firm with a rising inflection and trading was heavy, ranging from 95½ for first and second 4's to 99⅝ for the first 3½ per cents. The fourth 4's sold around 97⅝, closing at ⅝ bid. Industrials were strong and the entire market buoyant.

PREFERRED STOCK.

In the absence of sufficient Class A bonds to supply the demand the public is turning to high-grade, preferred stocks and some of the recent issues are proving very popular. These stocks relieved of the normal tax are quite attractive to the investor, who is looking for investment rather than speculation. Just by way of showing the trend of good preferred stock the following comparison of five standard industrials has been made by Blyth, Witter & Co., and offers an interesting study in values:

	Price.	Yield.	Net assets per share.	Net liquid assets per share.	P.c. of earnings to total charges.
Holt Mfg. Co., 7% pfd.	97½	*7.18	$505.00	$313.00	1130
Calif. Pckg. Cpn., 7% pfd..	104	*6.75	311.00	220.00	1060
Calif. Wine Assn., 6% pfd. .	90	6.67	703.00	281.00	334
Nat'nal Biscuit Co., 7% pfd.	110	6.36	290.00	79.00	263
Central Leather & Mfg. Co., 7% pfd.	107	6.54	310.00	128.00	400

*—Yield will be considerably higher at maturity because of definite sinking fund which redeems fixed amount each year and which provides a call price of $110 per share and $115 per share, respectively.

NEW YORK STOCK MARKET

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, Nov. 16.—Settlement of contracts for both accounts, fear of untoward events over the week-end, and announcement that the local money pool intends to maintain existing credit restrictions served to unsettle today's stock market session.

Fully one-third of the trading was confined to such leaders as United States Steel, shippings, Mexican Petroleum, Southern Pacific and prominent equipments, other industrials, rails and specialties following in minor degree.

Marine preferred immediately manifested reactionary tendencies, falling 3½ points to its recent low figures, rallying materially, but yielding again in the final dealings.

Other favorites, especially United States Steel, lost ground when Baldwin Locomotive, Studebaker and related equipments fell back. Rails were dull until the end, when pressure of offerings caused the Pacifics and coalers to surrender gains of 1 to 1½ points, the tone at the close being distinctly heavy. Sales amounted to 315,000 shares.

Bonds in general were firm, with a slight easing among convertible rails and industrials. Trading was light, Liberty issues making up the greater part of the operations at no material alteration from yesterday's final quotations. Total sales, par value, aggregated $3,550,000. Old United States bonds were unchanged on call during the week.

The bank statement disclosed an expansion in actual loans for the week of almost $44,000,000 and a contraction of $38,500,000 in excess reserves, reducing total reserves to about $29,000,000.

Liberty bond closing: 3½s, 99.094; first convertible 4s, 96.40; second 4s, 96.00; first convertible 4¼s, 98.58; second convertible, 4¼s, 97.80; third 4¼s, 97.90; fourth, 4¼s, 98.00.

CORPORATION PERMITS.

[EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SACRAMENTO, Nov. 16.—Northern Warehouse Company of Chico, organized by rice growers of the Sacramento Valley, and especially in the Butte county rice-growing district, for the purpose of erecting a warehouse for the storage of the 1918 and subsequent crops of rice, has permission from Commissioner of Corporations E. C. Bellows for the sale of shares of its capital stock.

The permit authorizes the sale of 25,000 shares at Par, $1, for cash, so as to net the company the whole amount of the selling price. It is issued conditional upon the approval of the Sub-committee on Capital Issues, Federal Reserve District, No. 12.

The warehouse was practically complete when the permit was issued. It was built on the line of the Sacramento Northern Railroad, and will hold some 200,000 sacks of rice.

Pacific Commercial Warehouse, Inc., Los Angeles, has authority from the commissioner to sell 500 shares of its capital stock to Pacific Hardware and Steel Company.

Anaheim Orange and Lemon Association is permitted to sell and issue 50,000 shares of its capital stock, par value $1. The permit is issued upon the condition that it is approved by the Sub-committee on Capital Issues, Federal Reserve District, No. 12.

Commissioner Bellows has entered an order revoking the permit of the California Scientific Food Corporation, Los Angeles, because no evidence has been submitted to show that the conditions upon which the permit was granted were complied with.

The commissioner also has ordered the temporary suspension of the permit of Sykes Standard Fruit Wrap Company, Penryn. The suspension is without prejudice to the company in securing another permit from the commissioner.

Risk a Little Money to Make Much
Will you risk $20 on the chance of losing it or making a small fortune? Don't say it's impossible. Get all the facts. New plan, nothing like it offered anywhere. Drilling now on 400-acre lease in Kansas Big Well territory. Money to pay for first well deposited in escrow. Can be used for no other purpose. Want a few people who have "red blood" and "backbone" to join us on our guarantee of a Square Deal and Big Profits, if we hit oil. We don't want the money of the weak or helpless, or those unable or unwilling to take a reasonable risk. If you believe that "The best way to get a chance is to take one," we want you with us. Send no money, but without obligation, tear out this ad now, and mail it today with your name and address for full information, including illustrated oil folder. Do it now before you lay this paper down, for this opportunity can't last long.

Oil
Royalty Stocks
Are commanding widespread attention, due to their diversity of investment, absence of development risk, high dividend rate and apparent safety of principal. Coupled with this is presented speculative attractiveness of such promise as to justify purchase in preference to most other investments. In response to this widespread popularity we have prepared for free distribution a booklet explaining in detail "Oil Royalties" and their investment and speculative values. We believe this booklet will be of value to possessors of "Idle Capital" or securities paying but a nominal rate of interest.

Big Profits From Little Pigs
Big money is being made raising hogs in California, under scentific management. You can share in these profits without any work by investing in sows under our co-operative, hog-raising plan. You buy one or more brood sows. These sows are yours. For half the pigs we will breed, feed and care for your sows and pigs. We sell the pigs twice a year and send you check for your half.

We insure your sows and replace in case of death. One sow should have twelve or more pigs each year. We do all the work—pay all expense. You furnish the sows—we furnish the ranch, labor and feed. You get half of all pork sold. No stock or land scheme. You get title to your own livestock. If you have idle money here is your opportunity. Write for booklet, full particulars, pictures of ranches, etc., etc.

MOTOR-CAR INDUSTRY APPROACHING ERA OF UNPRECEDENTED PROSPERITY

PRODUCTION TO BE RAPID.

Detroit is Looking Forward to a Quick After-War Auto Business.

DETROIT, Nov. 12.—Detroit's great motor-car industry is approaching an era of unprecedented prosperity. The order of the war board permitting passenger car makers to proceed at 75 per cent. normal presages the resumption of pre-war production much sooner than even the most optimistic members of the trade had hoped. Some of the plants like Ford and Dodge can resume manufacturing on a 75 per cent. basis almost immediately. One factory, the Packard, has already begun making cars on the new basis, others because of the nature of the war contracts taken over by them will require a week or two longer. Several of these plants would not state plans for the future but all are patiently awaiting the individual messages from Washington which would permit them to cease production for the government. While there are problems to be met and overcome, problems that will tax the ingenuity of the industrial giants who are peculiar to the auto world, some auto men predict that the industry will return to normal shortly after the first of the coming year. Others take a more conservative view and believe that six months will elapse before things are in full swing again. All are agreed, however, on the fact that production on a much larger scale than at present is only a matter of time. Raw materials and labor conditions are two of the factors that will have the most important bearing on the situation.

No city in the country is better prepared than Detroit to make the adjustment from war time to peace conditions in an industrial and financial way, say local manufacturers and bankers.

STRONGER THAN EVER.

Financially the city emerges from the war stronger than when it entered. Despite the heavy demands of war expenses, deposits in the local banks are higher than at any time in the city's history. This is due in large measure to the fact that war orders placed here were vastly in excess of the amount the city was called on to raise in the four Liberty Loans.

"Detroit factories," says Allan A. Templeton, adviser for Michigan of the War Industries Board, "lead the country in the quickness with which its great plants were turned over to war work. The conversion back to a peace footing will be as rapid. Henry Ford shut down only ten days for war reorganization; the huge Highland Park plant can be put back to peace production in two weeks. The Dodge industries, it is said, can go back to peace production tomorrow.

"The government has given us every assurance that huge quantities of steel for munitions here will be shipped to the nearest mills, probably at government expense, and rerolled for automobiles and other manufacturing purposes. Much of it can be used as it is for structural work in building bridges, railroads, skyscrapers, etc.

"This city is peculiarly fortunate. The lathes, drills and other machinery which have amazed the world by the number of automobile trucks, airplanes, ships and other war necessities turned out, need little or no alteration before being devoted once more to the quantity production of the things which have made Detroit famous as the greatest of the new industrial centers."

Alvin MacAuley, president and general manager of the Packard Motor Car Company says the markets for the automobile will be found waiting for peace-time production and that eventually there will be employment for every man engaged in the motor-car industry before the war.

"The automobile demand before the war conditions interfered was at its maximum," Mr. MacAuley said. "The business declined, not for lack of demand, but on account

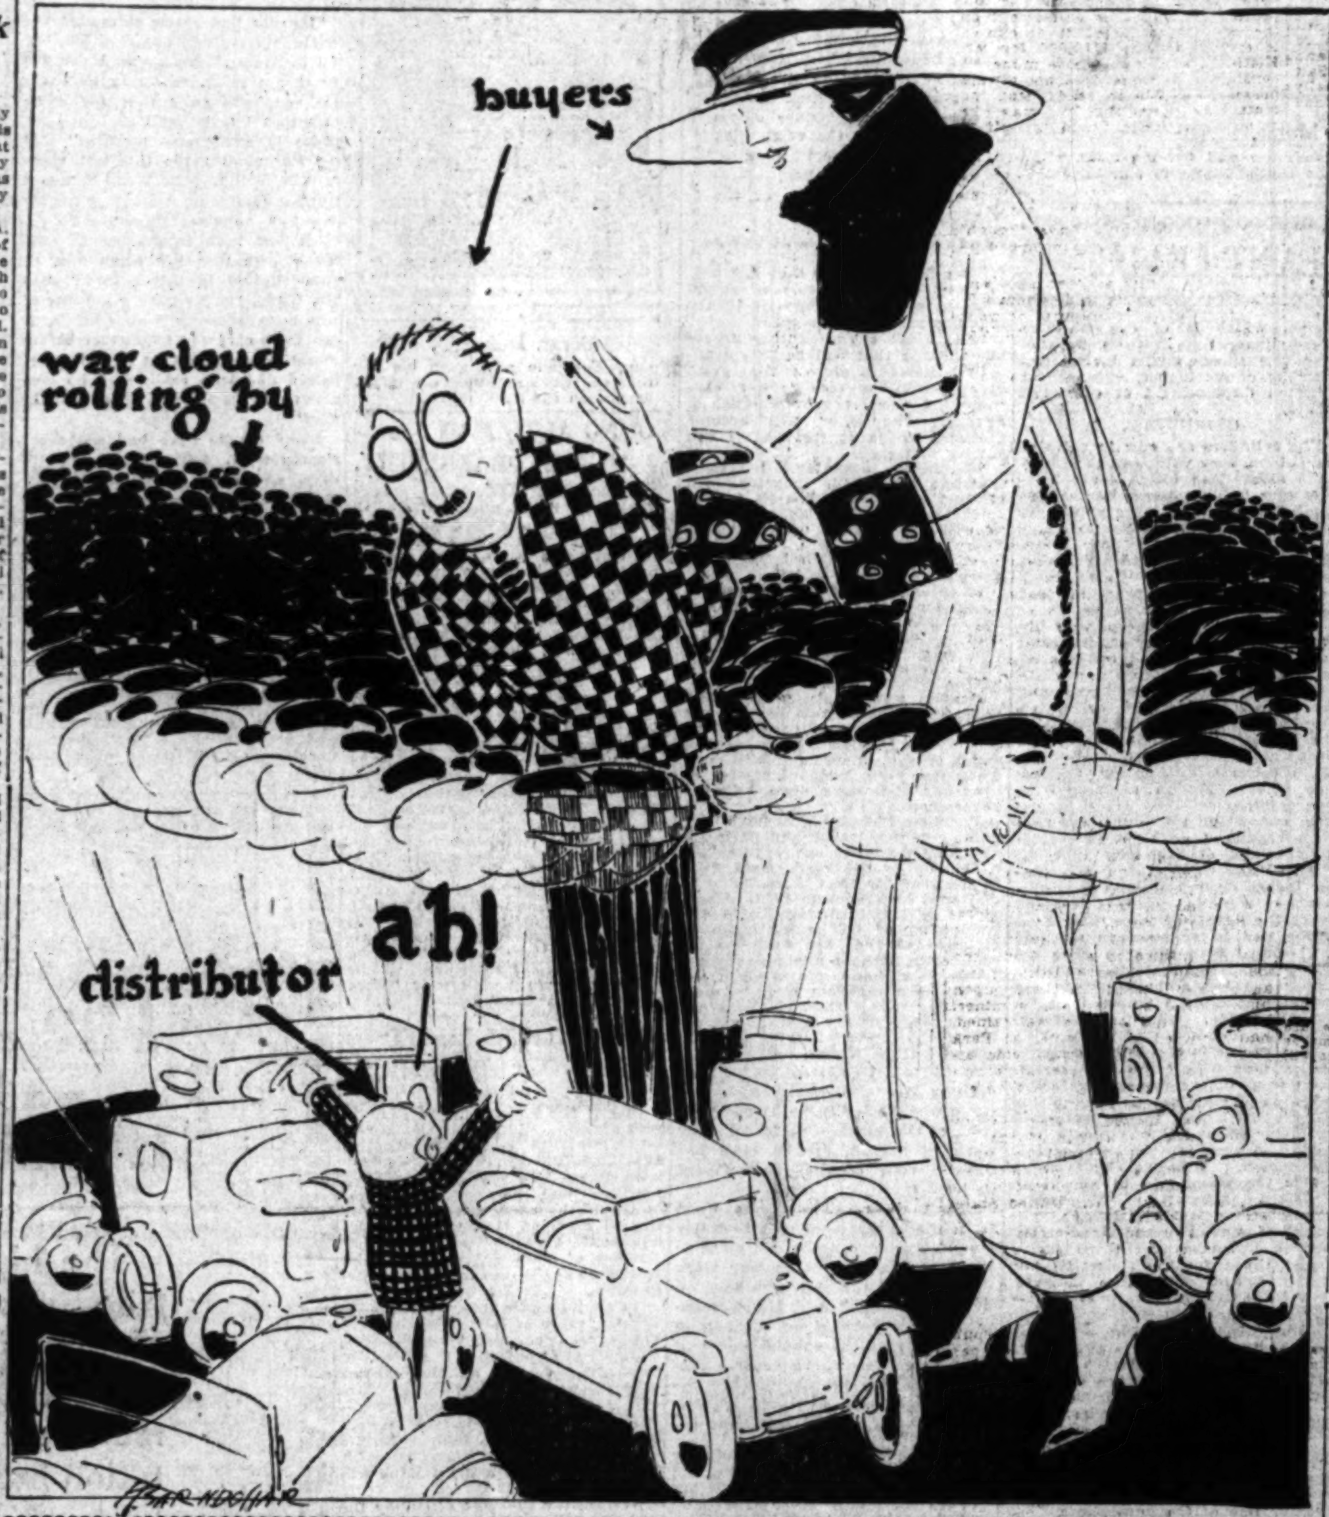
A Compound Pleasure.



WHAT LOCAL DEALERS SAY.

Flood of Speculations Released on Just What is Likely to Take Place.

And now, that the war is practically over—what?

Recent press dispatches from the East, announcing the partial removal by the government of the restrictions on manufacturing of passenger automobiles, have released a flood of speculations, delayed plans and considerations, suddenly bringing the local problems of the buyer and dealer into the sharp focus of public interest.

Mr. Everyman is interested in that car he planned to get as soon as the war conditions changed. The signing of the armistice, followed by public announcements of relaxation from the strict war programme, revived pre-war plans and desires. Where, how and when to buy that automobile? These are the questions the public is asking.

Details and authentic information about the future steps of the nation's war-making machinery are lacking. In the meantime, what is the situation and outlook in the Los Angeles market for passenger automobiles?

Standing on the threshold of a great era of prosperity and commercial development, Los Angeles is vitally interested in that question. The greatest market in the world, in proportion to the population, Los Angeles, as the center of the whole Southwest, has, indeed, a deep interest in the problem.

From the leading dealers in the city, men who have guided the development of the industry here, The Times sought the answer to the question.

Here is the way the situation appears to them:

"Greatest demand in the history of the industry, and uncertainty of supply, on the one hand, coupled with general prosperity and most favorable business conditions, face the automobile dealers in Southern California," is the belief of Harold L. Arnold of No. 603 West Seventh street, distributor of the Hudson, Maxwell and Essex lines of pleasure cars and the Republic trucks.

"Locally, our demand and prospects jumped 100 per cent. since the signing of the armistice. The supply of cars remains the same. In the manufacturing fields I look for a wild scramble for raw materials. This will bring about an uncertainty of prices and conditions. One thing is certain. The price of cars will not go down for months to come. The cost of living and labor are the factors that will govern the price of everything.

"I have just returned from the East, where I had an opportunity to study the situation. At the Hudson plant they had specifications and orders ready for materials to build 20,000. These orders were awaiting the removal of the restriction, and were thrown on the market the moment the ban was lifted. You can see that the big problem of the automobile manufacturers in the coming months will be to equalize stocks and balance inventories."

In Southern California the situation is most favorable, Mr. Arnold declared. "We are receiving about 275 cars a month, and can sell three times that many. The thousands of wealthy tourists who will flock to Southern California this winter will have a strong tendency on the market here, also."

The only ray of certainty to break through the ever-shifting clouds of surmise and daily changes in the situation confronting the buyers, dealers and manufacturers of automobiles is the fact that whatever changes are brought about by the armistice signing, the prices of cars need not be expected to take a course downward.

This is the belief of A. C. Robbins of the Greer-Robbins Company, dealer in Chalmers and Hupmobile lines. It is a belief based upon a careful study of the market and conditions, and partly confirmed by a telegram received from the National Automobile Dealers' Association, of which P. H. Greer, now in the East, is a director.

The telegram confirms the lifting, in part, of the restrictions on pleasure car manufacturing, but explains the ban is not altogether removed. The increase granted by the priorities commission is 50 per cent of the 25 per cent. basis, or a total of 37½ per cent. of the 1917 output.

There is absolutely no doubt about the situation. Cheaper cars will not be here for months to come. Labor, materials and other considerations are unchanged. The output is allowed to be increased only a little. The telegrams from the East tell of the ruling up to January 1, but it establishes the outlook for the time present.

"On the other hand, there is absoluteley no doubt about the bright outlook for the industry. Prosperity and the gradual readjustment of the market will work out the problem of the dealers," Mr. Robbins declared.

A gradual readjustment of conditions rather than a sudden increase of production or decrease of prices is expected by Don Smith, vice-president and general manager of the Earl V. Armstrong, Inc., of No. 932 South Hope street, Chandler dealers

At the same time Mr. Smith is optimistic about the immediate future of the retail pleasure car business in Los Angeles, and is able to announce constantly growing deliveries of the Chandler car.

"The removal of the government's restriction, to my mind, is not as important a factor as the price of raw material and labor. It will take a longer time to readjust these, but they are important in determining the price of the automobiles, and, consequently, the output," he declared.

"I can add this," Mr. Smith concluded, "the people who have sold their old cars with the expectation of getting new ones for about the same money after the removal of restrictions, are bound to be disappointed for months to come. Cars will not become cheaper, from all indications, at present."

The removal of the output restriction on the manufacturing of pleasure cars has brought the automobile dealers to the verge of the greatest automobile-selling period in their history, according to H. W. Tuttle, assistant manager of the Howard Auto Company, Los Angeles agents for the Buick automobiles.

"We have the demand. It is now up to the factory to give us the supply. Our experience with the great Buick organization warrants the confidence that it will reach the maximum output in the shortest possible time. The last official information from the factory was that they expected to go on a 100 per cent. war basis January 1. Now it is our understanding, the Buick factories will, in all probability, be released from the existing contracts, or part of them, and turn its energies into the building of Buick cars."

PROBLEMS NOW CONFRONTING AUTO TRADE.

BY L. G. THOMPSON.

Permission for motor car manufacturers to resume production of passenger cars might lead some to believe that the shortage of automobiles would soon be overcome, but permission to resume production and the ability of the factories to get the necessary material and labor are two very different things.

Beside that handicap, the factories will have to convert their machines and methods again, as nearly every big plant that has been producing passenger cars is busily engaged in war work, and as it took them months to get under way for a different product, so will it take time to change back.

Even were the men and the materials available, which they are not, it will take months to resume production in any appreciable quantity, and in the meantime the demand for passenger cars is on the increase.

When production is once more started it will take from a month to six weeks at the earliest to have cars ready for delivery from the shipping department, and by that time stocks will have been so greatly depleted that the small numbers produced will be like a drop in a bucket as compared to the demand.

EUROPE IN NEED.

Not only is all of Europe sadly in need of new motor equipment, but thousands of men in America have delayed the purchase of cars to contribute to war funds. Now that they feel free to make an investment in cars needed for essential transportation, they will help to create a demand greater than the possible supply.

The workingman who for the first time in his life has been able to save money out of increased earnings has begun to look around for a suitable car, and the demand for cars that will suit his needs will be at a premium, for the workingmen will buy thousands of them.

Farmers have been working their cars overtime and need new ones, business men have done likewise. Business has expanded and requires more motor transportation than ever.

Against this increased demand from many sources stands the handicaps of a smaller supply of skilled labor and essential materials than existed before the war, and both commodities commanding higher prices.

Many of the factories would not be able to immediately resume production even if they could get the materials, as they are engaged in certain classes of war work that will have to be continued indefinitely. If we are to feed and clothe Europe and replace the machinery that has been wrecked or destroyed by the ravages of war, resumption of passenger production in quantities will be still further delayed, perhaps for years. Another factor that will prevent the early resumption of activities will be the lack of transportation, for it seems more than probable that our railway lines will have a greater burden to carry during the reconstruction period than during war, motor vehicles will have to supplement our railways even more than ever, increasing the demand still further. No factory can get into full production until it has ample facilities for the transportation of materials to the factory and for distribution of the finished product.

THE SHORTAGE.

The shortage of cars has caused a big reduction of sales forces throughout the country, many agencies ceasing to exist. These will have to be reorganized before the factories could deliver a possible maximum production similar to pre-war conditions. It is a fact that it takes longer to build up a sales organization than it does to get into production of cars.

It is reliably reported that eastern stocks of cars are reduced to the minimum, and there are many warehouses on the Pacific Coast formerly filled with surplus stock that have not stored a car for months. Floor stocks are the rule rather than the exception. It will take months to replace depleted stocks with a normal supply to insure prompt delivery.

Packard and Ford are two notable examples of factories that ceased production of passenger cars weeks ago and became 100 per cent. efficient on war work. Practically every large motor car plant in America was rapidly attaining the same rate of efficiency, and would have by the first of the year.

Cadillac, Pierce and White are engaged on classes of work that cannot be stopped immediately. Chandler, Hudson and Reo factories are in like positions. So on down the entire line.

Some manufacturers have taken up tractor manufacturing, and with the available facilities will be unable to produce the maximum of either, but will have to divide their energies between the two lines.

To create new factories to take advantage of the market is just as impossible as to build cars; neither men or material are available for that.

If Europe is given a priority claim on essential manufactures so that it can quickly get back into shape and become self-supporting once more, American factories must supply the demand, for there is no other available supply of products manufactured in quantity production, and the war has taught the Europeans the advantages of the American-made goods. Europe will bid against America for many things beside motor cars or other automotive vehicles, as well as many articles that can easily be produced in the present motor-car plants.

There is but one answer for the query, "Will motor car prices drop in the near future?" and that is, "Certainly not."

LOOKING OVER THE COAST SITUATION.

D. T. Pryor, assistant service manager of the Northeast Electric Company of Rochester, N. Y., has been in the city the past week and has been making his headquarters with the Electric Equipment Company, which represents the Northeast Electric Company, as official service station in this locality.

Mr. Pryor has been making a business trip for the Northeast company, visiting most of the stations in the Southwestern section of the country and is on his return trip East. He has also been relieving Manager Campbell of the San Francisco plant, who has been at the factory on business connected with Coast matters.

"We are well satisfied with the service situation in Los Angeles," said Mr. Pryor, "and we have found that the Northeast equipment which has been used exclusively on Dodge Bros. motor cars has developed no chronic faults, and aside from the few minor difficulties always experienced due to wear and tear and some lack of care, the system as a whole has given no trouble. The same thing might be said regarding the new Northeast ignition unit, which is also used on all Dodge cars."

Mr. Pryor was very enthusiastic regarding the new plant of the Electric Equipment Company, which he saw for the first time, and which he considers one of the finest plants in the country.

HUGE ORDER FOR ANGEL CITY.

Direct confirmation has been obtained of the rumor that a million-dollar order has actually been placed for Los Angeles delivery of a motor car new to the American market, and The Times learns on good authority that the words "unrestricted delivery" formed the basis of the contract, which was drawn up between one of the strongest motor car manufacturing concerns in the United States and a Los Angeles automobile distributor who occupies the same relative position in Southern California.

The new car is said to occupy a unique position with the motoring public. It is of such high-class production it appeals to those who want something a little better than the ordinary small family car. For the same reason it also will be the one American car which will have sufficient speed and comfort coupled with its nifty lines and modern make-up to suit the man of means, who now finds that to get those features in a motor car he must have a heavy car and a chauffeur to drive it.

HIGHWAY HISTORY IN OHIO

An event of national interest took place near New Concord, O., recently. It was the laying of the last brick to complete the improvement of the national highway between Zanesville and Cambridge, O. The act alone was not of particular significance, but the fact that it was almost 100 years to the hour when the last brick was laid since the road was formally opened for travel between Wheeling, W. Va., and Columbus, O., is fraught with import, according to James L. Irving, the representative of Cole and Elgin cars in Southern California. It demonstrated how slow-moving this country has been in improving permanently its main highways.

"The removal of restrictions upon highway improvement that was announced last Wednesday will mean a great deal to the future of this country," said Mr. Irving. "The European war has demonstrated the wonderful advantages possessed by any country through having well-maintained roads. The returning American soldiers will bring first-hand evidence of what better roads mean, and they will be responsible for tremendous influence being brought about in behalf of improved highway conditions in this country. Better roads and motor cars will mean the biggest advance in transportation the country has seen."

Concern has been Preparing for Peace Work.

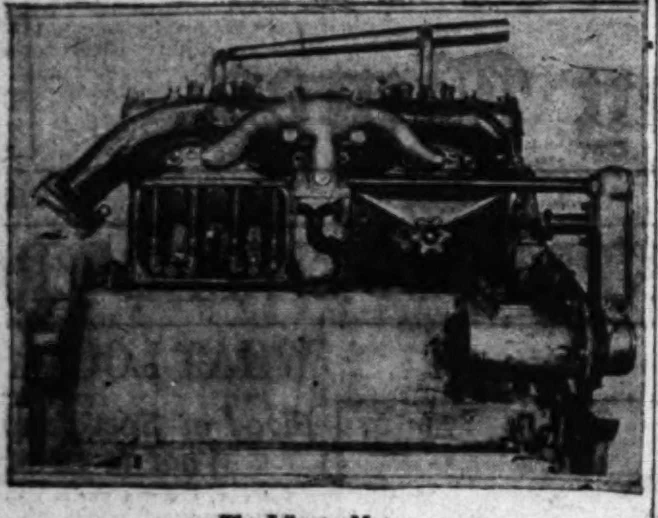
Company Looking Ahead for a Long Time.

Making a flying trip through his territory to immediately inform the dealers of the factory's activities and plans, J. P. Scearce, district supervisor for the Liberty Motor Car Company, was in town the past week, making his headquarters with Lynn C. Buxton.

"The plant of the Liberty Motor Car Company has been a very busy place, along with so many other automobile factories, in doing war work of various kinds besides turning out their own product," says Mr. Scearce, "as we have had contracts for 2500 trailers and 2500 trucks, as well as 1000 shells per day, but, as this work has been carried on under a separate roof, it has not interfered with our regular Liberty production.

"The company has been looking ahead for some time anticipating a cessation of hostilities and a resumption of normal conditions, which they feel presages a big demand for motor cars, and they are accordingly planning a big production just as soon as conditions warrant.

"In my travels over the country it has been a pleasure to see how the Liberty factory was justified in building a motor that would successfully use the lower grades of gasoline, for all along the line it has proven to be one car that has not been bothered by the cheaper fuel which has been doled out to the motorists, and it has been a great satisfaction to Liberty owners to know that they were so well fortified."



The Liberty Motor,

Now used in Moreland trucks of the four-ton and five-ton sizes. The Moreland company is the first in the United States to announce this installation.

LOCAL TRUCK PLANT LEADS.

The Moreland Motor Truck Company has just announced the installation of the Liberty motor in Moreland four-ton and five-ton trucks.

This motor was designed at a conference held in Washington in the early spring of 1917, to become the standard power plant for United States Army heavy-duty vehicles, the truck in which it was to be used being known as "Class B." This conference was attended by the leading engine and motor-truck manufacturers in the United States, as well as a number of army officers who had been in charge of the truck equipment on the Mexican border and the test work that had been undertaken there by the War Department. The Liberty motor, as it now stands, has been in use in the War Department, at the cantonments and posts in this country, for considerably over a year and its showing has been such that motor-truck manufacturers feel this motor to be the highest development of a truck power plant ever produced.

There are a number of very interesting features embodied in this motor, which is of the standard four-cylinder type with a bore of four and three-fourths inches and a stroke of six inches, which gives a piston displacement of 425 cubic inches.

CYLINDERS.

The cylinders are cast in pairs of the L type, with valves on the right-hand side. The heads are removable and held in place by thirteen one-half-inch studs. The valves are two and one-eighth inches in diameter in the clear, two and three-eighth inches outside diameter, 45 deg. seat, with a lift of 11-32 inch. The valve stems are inclosed by pressed steel cover plates.

The water jackets are of very liberal construction, taper one-half inch below to one and one-quarter inch above. Sparkplugs screw directly into the cylinder heads and are entirely surrounded by water. Cooling water enters the jackets at the lowest point and leaves the heads at the highest point—thus no drain cocks are necessary, the entire cooling system draining from one point.

In comparing the connecting rods with regular practice it is considered to be of the long type, its length being thirteen and one-quarter inches or 2.21 times the stroke, whereas standard practice is about twice the length of the stroke. Both upper and lower bearings are laid out central with the rod. The rod is of the I-beam section and the upper end has a bronzed bushing two and one-eight inches long for the piston pin, while the lower end is of the four-bolt type.

The piston is six and one-eighth inches long with three one-quarter-inch rings of the conventional type, with 45 deg. saw-cut. The piston pin is one and three-eighth-inch diameter and is located two and five-eighth inches from the lower end of the piston. A single lock screw holds the piston pin in place.

The crankshaft is of the conventional three-bearing type. The crank pins are two and three-eighth inches diameter and three inches long; the front main bearing two and three-eighth inches diameter and three inches long, and the center and rear main bearing two and a half inches diameter and four inches long.

In order to decrease the number of spare parts necessary only two sizes of bearings are used. All bushings are of the bronzed back with babbitt-lined construction.

The crank case is of aluminum, very deep and well-ribbed. The parting line between the upper and lower half is three inches below center line of the crankshaft.

FLY WHEEL.

The flywheel is inclosed in a three-inch S.A.E. bell housing. A three-point suspension is employed, two arms being cast into the bell housing, and a trunnion bearing on the front of gear cover.

The camshaft is drop forged, with integral cams and flange for mounting the driving gear.

The oiling system is of the force-feed type, embodying the gear type circulating pump. No oil pipes are used, the oil being forced through a passage drilled in the pump body to the header, extending full length of the crankcase, and then through drilled passages to the main bearing. Grooves are provided in the main bearings which are in constant communication with the oil holes drilled through the crankshaft to the connecting rod.

A twenty-two-inch fan is used and is provided with a vertical adjustment for taking up the slack in the belt. The belt is two inches wide and runs on large pulleys.

An entirely inclosed governor driven from the forward end of the generator shaft is built into the engine.

Watt L. Moreland, general manager of the Moreland Motor Truck Company, was fortunate enough to secure a number of these motors while on a trip East a short time ago and deliveries have already been made of Moreland four-ton trucks containing the Liberty motor.

Mr. Moreland was greatly pleased to be able to announce Moreland trucks carrying this equipment and be the first in this country to take this step.

This is the same kind of motor that was exhibited at the Moreland Motor Truck Company's plant several months ago and which created a lot of interest among the many hundred people who came to see it.

PRODUCTION TO BE RAPID.

of war conditions which made even transportation by automobile of secondary importance. In brief, the industry with all its facilities and special talents, was called to the colors.

THE PROBLEMS.

"Now that the stress and strain incidental to equipping for war against the most powerful military nation the world has ever seen is past, the automobile demand certainly will reassert itself.

"Markets undoubtedly will be there. The problem will be to obtain the proper materials from the makers of steel and other products of which automobiles are made. They are now working on war materials. The government's announced policy is to taper down the demand for these materials. It follows from this that they can only taper up—if that's a correct expression—in supplying materials for the manufacture of automobiles.

"As to labor skilled in automobile making that will become gradually but steadily more available and at an increasing rate as war contracts are completed or diminished. Probably the labor will become available about as fast as we can receive materials.

"Generally speaking, I predict that the automobile industry will reassert and re-establish its former splendid proportions as rapidly as is wise in existing circumstances. There ultimately will be employment in the automobile business for every man formerly in it."

In anticipation of the greatest demand for motor cars the industry has ever known members of the Detroit Automobile Dealers' Association met Wednesday to arrange plans for an automobile show this winter.

Dealers would not say positively that such a show would be held, but expressed themselves in favor of the annual exhibition. The dealers called off the show some months ago when the need for conservation of light and fuel was expressed by the government.

Forty-six Detroit plants have been making motor trucks and parts for the United States army following a demand by the government early in the year for 100,000 trucks to be delivered in France in 1918. These plants will immediately begin the production of trucks for commercial use, as they are equipped for such work without any preparation. Labor is at hand and most of the plants have sufficient steel to meet their demands. This will be available as soon as the government releases the material, which is expected within a few days.

MAY HOLD SHOW.

Louis Mendelsohn, general manager of the Fisher Body Corporation, one of the biggest factors in war work in Detroit, took a most optimistic view of the readjustment period.

"Until we receive definite word from the government, the best any manufacturing concern can do is to guess at the time when war work will stop and the plants go back on a peace footing," said Mr. Mendelsohn, "but there is no question in my mind that the change will be a gradual increase in peace-time production, with preparation for the complete change, so it will not disturb the factories to any great extent.

"In the automobile industry many factories are still turning out machines ready to go on a 100 per cent. war basis January 1, suggested by the War Industries Board, but still turning out machines on a peace basis.

"Shortage of raw material is the big factor in any guess as to how fast they can speed up production when the time comes to abandon war work.

"We have suffered from shortage of raw material, but have been turning out automobile work right along. There will be a great demand for machines, and factories will hurry to get back on a production basis as soon as they can, to supply the market."

W. R. Angell of the Continental Motors Company was decidedly optimistic and stated that as far as that plant was concerned the shift from war production to peace production would hardly disturb the plant at all.

"We are in fine shape," said Mr. Angell. "On truck motors which we have been supplying for the government, we can return the production to peace conditions on short notice from the government. The government adopted our truck motors as standard and we will not have to make any change for our peace-time production.

"On passenger car motors we can be back on full production on a pre-war basis on two or three-days' notice at the outside. The process will involve merely the changing of dies and jigs which we have in readiness, and we can be booming along as though nothing had happened."

W. R. Mitchell of Dodge Brothers said it would be difficult to make any prophecy as to the time required to get the plant back on its peace-time production basis, and said no notice of any sort had arrived from the government to change the present plans of operation. But in turning out many passenger cars for use of army and government officials on war work, that production could be quickly shifted for the peace-time market.

PASSENGER CAR DEMAND.

Discussing the detail situation, Guy O. Simons, secretary of the Detroit Automobile Dealers' Association, declared the demand for passenger cars was already asserting itself beyond the most optimistic predictions of the dealers.

"Motorists have been patching up their old cars until the used-car supply is being exhausted and new cars must be had at once," said Mr. Simons. "Dealers are already asking for cars and placing orders for delivery at the earliest possible moment. By the time the motor car factories have returned to normal or anywhere near it, we dealers will have swamped them with orders for cars.

"As I see the situation, all motor car plants will have to increase beyond their former normal capacity. However, we expect that this will not be difficult since the selective draft will not affect labor further, as materials will be available in most localities."

"The automobile industry is entering the greatest era of prosperity in its history, both in the home and foreign markets," declared Lee Anderson, vice-president of the Hupp Motor Corporation.

ERRORS COSTLY; AIDS HOSPITAL.

One of the clerical force of the United States Spring Company has hit upon a novel method for increasing the number of nickels deposited in the bottle in the office of that concern, and which are destined to aid our hospital accommodations abroad.

"One of the clerks whose husband is in France proposed that each member of the office force drop a nickel in the bottle every time he or she made an error. For several days there was a big jump in the number of coins so deposited. The idea has not only added to the fund, but business efficiency has resulted as well. Other offices might adopt the same idea with equally good results," said John B. Rauen, secretary and treasurer of the company.

YOUNG AUTO MAN DIES FOR COUNTRY.

Sergt. R. F. Dulmage, of Co. C, Three Hundred and Sixty-fourth Infantry, listed last week as killed in action at the battle of the Argonne, was before he was inducted into the service, one of the most efficient and popular salesmen employed in this territory by the United States Rubber Company, is the statement of Manager J. B. Magee.

Dulmage joined the colors October 17, 1917, and entrained from Camp Lewis last July with the Ninety-first Division for overseas. The last letter received from him was dated September 15, and in it he stated that the division had been highly commended by Gen. Pershing.

He joined the Portland, Or., branch of the United States Rubber Company in 1912, and worked his way from the stockroom to the position he held before entering the service. "We tried to influence Dulmage to enter the officers' training camp, but he refused. The only reason we could get from him was that he feared if he qualified it might be considerable time before he went overseas. He seemed to be afraid it would be all over before he got into action," said Magee.

RESTRICTIONS LIFTED ON AUTOMOBILE TIRES.

One of the first results of the advent of peace, and a matter of greatest interest to motorists, was the announcement by the War Industries Board this week that rubber for tires would be released immediately and the restrictions as to quantity so modified that there will be abundant supplies, although the number of sizes and styles will be restricted as planned in the war programme.

In an interview today, George W. Lichtenberger of Lichtenberger-Ferguson Company, distributors of Norwalk tires, stated that the effect of this order on the automobile tire business will be immediate and far-reaching. With the release of rubber, the Norwalk factory will soon be turning out the famous "Some Rubber" tires in pre-war quantities, and all danger of a tire famine will be ended.

During the shortage of rubber the output of Norwalk tires was greatly curtailed because of the policy of the company to maintain the high standard of quality under any conditions, it being their belief that their reputation for always producing only the best tires would prove their greatest asset after the termination of the war.

STRONG FOR RETREADING.

People are Now Beginning to Wake up to It.

Agent Tells of Change that has Taken Place.

War has Taught Us All Lots About Economy.

"I never had a tire retreaded before nor never had one repaired, but if I can really save money by so doing I am going to do it, as there are so many calls now for extra cash that I feel that I should economize in every way possible," was the statement made this last week to B. F. Wade of the Wade Tire and Rubber Company, by a representative Los Angeles business man.

"It has been interesting to note the change that has come over so many people in this regard," says Mr. Wade, "as we have a number of customers recently who own large expensive cars and who never before would have a tire that had been repaired and who really had no idea about the efficiency of a rebuilt tire."

Many people have had sad experiences with retreads and rebuilt tires, and have passed snap judgment that such work does not pay, and, of course, it does not unless it is done right, and unless the person doing it is capable to judge whether or not the tire will stand the rebuilding, as the satisfaction depends entirely on the condition of the casing.

However, by our new process we have been able to handle so much more business than we used to because if the tire was not worthy of the repair we would not touch it, but now we can take that same tire and fix it so it will give satisfaction and upon which we can give our usual guarantee which goes with every repair job that we do.

The Liberty Motor in Moreland Trucks

The highest development of motor truck power is found in the Liberty Motor—the engine designed and built by the leading engine and motor truck manufacturers to carry the transportation burden in Army work, both at home and in the field.

This motor has been so unusual in its performance and so sturdy in every respect that it will be used by most all well-rated manufacturers for commercial purposes in the near future.

Through a fortunate circumstance this Company secured a number of these motors at a much earlier date than was expected and can fill a limited number of four-ton and five-ton orders several months in advance of a like offering from any other manufacturer.

This motor has no equal in heavy duty work, in simplicity of design, and accessibility. For the unusual transportation conditions in Western Territory it is particularly desirable.

Prompt delivery can be made on four-ton and five-ton sizes.

MOVIE STAR HAS RECORD.

Screen Favorite Real Driver Who Knows Road.

War Stopped Too Soon for Miss Nell Shipman.

Says Women Have Cut Out the Petty Fashions.

Patriotic work has not been confined to men alone. Tens of thousands of women have devoted their time and energy to war work not only in munition factories, in offices and in stores, but in the driving of motor cars for private concerns and for government purposes as well.

The intrepid movie girl has shown herself admirably adapted for this work. One of them in particular, Miss Nell Shipman, of "God's Country and the Woman" fame, has found a means of sparing a portion of her time from the screen to driving a car for the Women's Motor Reserve Corps.

Having owned and driven cars for several years Miss Shipman was one of the first to enlist in this work and she has handled a Premier aluminum six donated by the Leach Motor Car Company for this purpose.

GREAT PLEASURE.

In speaking to W. A. Chapman, Miss Shipman said: "It has been a pleasure, indeed, to feel that I have been performing a patriotic duty and when I say a pleasure I mean it, because driving a Premier is nothing more than a pleasure. Its magnetic gear shift takes all the worry and thought out of driving. I have worn out one set of casings on the Premier already, having covered close to 10,000 miles in a few months.

"My only regret is that I did not enlist in the services of my country earlier so that I could have seen active service at the front before the collapse of the German war machine. It would have given me unrivaled experience in my future work on the screen.

SPLENDID TEACHER.

"I feel certain that this war has been a splendid teacher for the fair sex. She has abandoned the fol-de-rols of petty fashions and adopted serviceable clothes, yet not losing the becoming cut of womanly appearance. Regardless of the work she has gone into, whether it be a farmerette, a chauffeurette, a factory or store worker, the garments that she now wears preserve that modesty and refinement which should typify the American woman."

THE MAXWELL YANK ARRIVES IN TOWN.

"The Maxwell Yank," that energetic car sent out by Harold L. Arnold, the Maxwell distributor, to do the unusual in cross-desert work, was in town one day last week.

Just to show what splendid shape it was in, after all its strenuous doings in the "movies" its crew took it up on Sunset boulevard, and, turning toward an unusually steep bank, drove up to it until the front wheels touched the wall, and without hesitating climbed the slope until the rear springs touched the pavement.

The angle of the slope by measurement was an 85 per cent. grade. The feat was so unusual, Mr. Arnold sent the car out to repeat the performance before the motion picture camera, and soon the public will see another clever stunt developed by "The Maxwell Yank."

MOUNTING TIRE REALLY AN ART.

Mounting a tire is an art itself, and the same should receive more attention than the average motorist thinks. A tire should always be examined on the inside to see that no dirt or small objects of any kind are in the casing, then the inside should be saturated with powder and the casing bounced around so the powder will not form any lumps, and the surplus should be shaken out, then put in just a small amount of air in the tube, just enough to handle same, and insert in the tire. Next the inside flap is inserted. Run the hand along the edges to see that it is perfectly smooth and proceed to put same on rim, being very careful not to molest the tube and flap with tire irons.

If one will use the proper care in mounting a tire, it will lessen a good deal of tube trouble, says Louis Harris of the Tire Construction Company, Inc., Nos. 1243-5-7 South Olive street.

STAGE TEST ON THE RIDGE ROUTE.

Selecting the Ridge Route as a demonstrating test is not the most sensible thing to do unless one is thoroughly familiar with the route, and also knows well just what his car will be called upon to do, and also how well it will perform under these most adverse conditions.

Such was not the case, however, with F. H. Nelson of the Nelson Auto Company, when a party wanted to see how this car with the airplane motor would act when put up against some real work, and the Ridge road was suggested as a test that would be fully convincing.

"I had never had the Nelson car on this trip, nor had I been over the road to know anything about the condition of the roads," says Mr. Nelson, "but I did know what the car would do and had done for me in other places, so I did not hesitate a minute in making the test, and every performance of the car completely verified our confidence in her.

"The trip is not one that I would recommend as a pleasant joy ride, at least not the detours or the last part where construction has been under way, for it was so bad and rough that we slowed down to three and four miles per hour, with the little car pulling on every stroke of the motor, but we did not find it necessary to shift gears, but pulled steadily on high all the time, with the result that before the end of the trip I had a real rival as a Nelson booster alongside of me and one more who went out skeptical came back convinced."

Miss Nell Shipman,
Popular movie star, who has covered more than 10,000 miles at the wheel of a Premier in the service of the Women's Motor Reserve Corps.

OLD CAR MAKES TRIP AGAIN.

Boston certainly is the limit for narrow streets, many of them one-way traffic only, reported Ira G. Cripe, who, with Mrs. Cripe, returned recently after having made a double transcontinental tour in their Chandler car. Two years ago, in the same Chandler, the Cripes made their first double transcontinental trip, upon that occasion turning south at New York City and not including the New England States in their itinerary, as they did the last time.

In relating his experiences to Jack Koerner of Earl V. Armstrong, Inc., the Chandler distributors, Mr. Cripe said: "We went east over the Santa Fe trail, taking in the principal points of interest, such as the Petrified Forest. We visited relatives in Cerro Gordo, Ill., then resumed our journey, and arrived on the Atlantic seaboard in New Jersey. At New Brunswick we visited the Wright-Martin airplane works. At Hanford, Ct., we visited the former homes of Harriet Beecher Stowe and Mark Twain, and at Cambridge the homes of James Russell Lowell and Henry W. Longfellow.

"Turning southwestward from Boston, New York's sights were taken in and then Philadelphia, Washington and Mt. Vernon. We started back from Hagerstown, Md., over the old National road, and followed that route into Missouri. Heavy rains were encountered in Illinois, and chains had to be used on all wheels to keep the car out of the ditch. In the Panhandle of Texas roads were good, but the country had suffered greatly from drought. From Clovis to Socorro, N. M., the roads were in terrible condition, but little worse than in some parts of the East, where they had been cut up badly by army trucks going to Atlantic ports with heavy loads."

The Cripes covered 10,162 miles on this trip. Their Chandler is equipped to form a bed on the seats, and they camped wherever night overtook them. The commissary department is contained in a box on the running-board. They experienced absolutely no engine trouble of any kind, Mr. Cripe said, and upon arrival here had eastern air in all tires, not having had a single puncture on the return drive.

TRUCK USERS PLAN TEST.

Users of one-ton trucks, who employ their vehicles for moderate tasks and over fairly good roads, are debating among themselves whether solid or pneumatic tires are best adapted to the job of saving time and money.

L. W. Bekamp, who recently purchased a one-ton truck at Fresno for use on his ranch, is an advocate of the 36x6 casings and tubes with which he has had his vehicle equipped. E. S. Rawson, one of his neighbors, who is also a Chevrolet owner, has decided to stick to the solid tires, and between them a friendly rivalry has developed.

Each has agreed to keep an accurate check on every item of expense in connection with his machine, with the single exception of charge for drivers. Mileage, gasoline and oil consumption, repair bills, tonnage hauled and several other items will be recorded, and on June 1 the two will compare notes in defense of their tire theories. The experiment is being watched with interest by farmers in the San Joaquin Valley of California.

DON'T BE TOO QUICK DISCARDING RIMS.

RUBBER MAN GIVES OUT SOME TIMELY ADVICE FOR AUTOISTS.

Do not be too hasty in discarding your present rims or in going to any unnecessary expense at this time to make your wheels conform to any certain size of tire, as a result of the order cutting tire production down to a smaller number of sizes and types.

The following is the advice of F. H. Osler of the Osler-Racine Rubber Company, and which he has been passing out to his customers for some time when any of them have shown anxiety over the rim situation: "We have always carried a large stock of unusual sizes as a matter of giving service on Racine tires and for this reason we are now in a position to help many a motorist out who may be contemplating the expense of cutting down his rims.

"Of course there are sizes which we have not got, nor never have had, nor never even had a call for, but we had a stock of unusual sizes made up which were to be discontinued and now have them here, with others coming in, and it may be that we can help some motorist out and save the expense of rim cutting at this time when there are so many causes demanding our surplus cash."

BAKERSFIELD PASSES NEW AUTO ORDINANCE.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

BAKERSFIELD, Nov. 15.—Acting upon the recommendation of the Automobile Club of Southern California, the City Council has adopted a new ordinance regulating signals to be given by motorists when turning corners in the city streets. Automobile drivers must now hold the hand out horizontally when turning to the left. When turning to the right the arm must be raised upward at an angle of 45 degrees, and when slowing down or stopping the arm must be lowered to a like degree. Penalty for not conforming to the rule is made punishable by a fine or not less than $5, nor more than $25, or by from ten to fifty days in the County Jail.

UP BIG BEAR WAY.

Although duck shooting is far from its usual standard at Big Bear, the roads in that district were never in better shape according to the touring bureau of the Automobile Club of Southern California. Report has it that better shooting is to be had on Baldwin Lake than on Big Bear itself.

WHAT LOCAL DEALERS SAY.

tor of the Stutz automobiles, is another dealer who is optimistic over the immediate outlook. "As soon as the government releases some steel, our plant will begin to turn out cars. They have many parts on hand, and will proceed to make the parts needed to complete the cars first. In this way we will be able to get the Stutz cars months ahead of the regular time," he said. The Stutz factories have been making military tractors for the government, but now, it is expected, it can be released from existing contracts in that line.

Optimism tempered by a careful consideration of the numerous factors entering into the situation is the outlook of Fred S. Albertson, head of the Albertson Motor Company of No. 1101 South Hope street, Dodge Bros. Motor Car Company distributors.

"The conditions confronting the Dodge Bros. organization are very favorable," he explained. "When the government called upon us to take a hand in the munition making, a special plant costing more than $13,000,000 was built, special machinery installed, and labor supply obtained. In this manner Dodge Bros. succeeded in keeping intact their old plant and organization, and today are in position to manufacture pleasure cars for the general public as fast as the raw material and labor conditions will permit.

"At the same time we must not lose sight of the fact that practically all warehouse, factory and dealers' stocks in the pleasure cars have been exhausted, and that the inevitable freight congestion will have a strong bearing on the market. It seems to me, the moral is, buy your pleasure car now."

Mr. H. Eckert, Southern California manager of the Earl C. Anthony, Inc., agents for the Packard and Reo cars, in discussing the immediate future of the pleasure car market, laid particular emphasis on the course to be taken by the government in the matter of existing contracts with automobile manufacturers for war munitions and supplies.

"I do not feel that I can give any authoritative information regarding future events. No one can. But it seems to me the speed with which automobile manufacturers can expect to revert to normal or pre-war pleasure car production will depend upon the steps taken by the government in abrogating existing contracts.

"I can say, however, that so far as the present is concerned, the Earl C. Anthony (Inc.) organization is prepared to supply practically every make of car handled by it, and do so for an indefinite period. We have a representative in the East, who personally attends to shipments of cars. So far we have not been curtailed to any appreciable degree in our pleasure car sales. In the commercial field practically every model is ready for delivery." Mr. Eckert was careful to point out that, while the supply situation can be expected to remain more or less stable, the question of prices is one of uncertainty. War conditions in the labor market probably will remain unchanged, and the prices of cars advance, instead of decrease, he thought. "We can guarantee the prices only twenty-four hours in advance," he declared. The conditions outlined by him apply to all the Southern California agencies of the Earl C. Anthony, Inc., Mr. Eckert said.

The only authentic information received by the J. V. Baldwin Motor Company of No. 1155 South Olive street, agents for the Saxon line of automobiles, is that no new models are to be expected for some months, Mr. A. S. French, general manager of the company, said.

"Another equally certain thing is that there is no need to expect lower prices as the result of the resumption of the pleasure-car manufacturing," he added. "Mr. Baldwin is now in Detroit, looking after our interests, and I feel certain that whatever radical changes or conditions are brought about by the lifting of the ban, will be met by the J. V. Baldwin Motor Company.

"So far as the local conditions are concerned, we are able and have been able to supply the demand, and hope to be in the face of the anticipated increased demand."

Normal deliveries, and retention of the present prices are seen by Mr. E. E. Caister, vice-president of the Al G. Faulkner Company, Inc.

"It is too early yet to make predictions of what is to come. Seen in the light of present conditions, no immediate increase of production or sudden drop in the prices of pleasure cars can be expected," he said.

H. W. Nerney, manager of the William L. Hughson Company, KisselKar dealers, looks forward to a gradual readjustment of the supply, but a continuance of present prices until the labor conditions and other factors entering into the manufacturing of automobiles is adjusted.

"In the last few days we noticed a great increase of sales. People who are waiting for a drop of prices are going to be disappointed, however."

A telegram from the Franklin factory, telling of bright outlook and a decided increase in production in a short time, was received by Mr. Ralph Hamlin of the Ralph Hamlin, Inc., dealers in the Franklin and Scripps-Booth lines.

The Franklin factory was to put into effect another restriction January 1, but the recent ruling of the priorities board will make that unnecessary, it is believed. "We are selling the Franklin and Scripps-Booth cars right along, and expect to increase as we go. I have had no official news from the Scripps-Booth factory, but believe the situation there is good, also," Mr. Hamlin said.

ARRIVAL OF TIRES COMES WITH PEACE.

The arrival of a carload of tires last week for the C. Fred Thompson Tire Company, Mason tire distributors for this section, was second to importance only to the great peace news that came so joyously, and one particularly pleasing feature about this shipment was the fact that it contained a goodly number of the Mason cord tire, which has created such a sensation among certain classes of motorists.

People operating stage lines or those persons using their car for large mileages every day have been interested in this new cord for the principal reason that it has one-eighth of an inch more thickness of rubber on the tread, and these stages as a rule drive their tires until the tread is worn right down through the fabric or cord, or in other words, wearing them out, so naturally a thicker tread would be of interest to them.

Cadillac Policy for 1918-1919

The Cadillac Motor Car Company announces herewith its policy for 1918-1919.

Prices will be restored, at once, to figures which prevailed before Cadillac production was restricted by governmental order.

Decreased output resulting from governmental curtailment necessitated an increase of three hundred dollars on all Cadillac models.

This three hundred dollar increase is now removed on the entire Cadillac line—the readjusted prices to be in effect after twelve o'clock midnight, Saturday, November 16.

It must be remembered that the Cadillac Motor Car Company has been on an exclusive war basis, and deliveries will naturally be limited until the factory is restored to a peace footing.

The respect in which the Cadillac is held, the world over, has been greatly emphasized by its splendid performance in war service, and by the further fact that the United States Army has adopted the Cadillac as its standard seven-passenger car.

Cadillac capacity has always been swiftly absorbed, but, in view of the facts cited above, prospective buyers will do well to be forewarned against a demand without a precedent.

We assume that peace will shortly follow the signed armistice. In that event, the entire capacity of our factory will be devoted to the production of Cadillac cars.

In spite of that fact, we do not believe it will be possible to build, during 1919, all the Cadillac cars the world will want.

GOOD EXAMPLE OF EFFICIENCY.

Excessive Traffic Burdens are Taken Care Of.

Five-Ton Trucks do the Trick Very Quickly.

Time and Labor are Saved by the Packards.

Shortage of railway facilities for handling the excessive burdens of traffic caused by the war has given an impetus to motor-truck hauling and has had the effect of extending the radius of the motor truck's field from local work up to hauls of 100 and sometimes 200 miles.

An example of the efficiency of trucks for long hauls and heavy, bulky cargoes, is the contract of Allen Bros. of Los Angeles to deliver 200 steel storage tanks for fuel oil to numerous points throughout Southern California. The Union Oil Company wanted these tanks delivered and set up at its various distributing stations, and found that the work would be delayed if they depended on railway transportation.

By the use of Packard five-ton trucks, the contractors were able to make prompt delivery of the entire lot to points as far distant as San Diego, and the surprising feature was that the actual cost of transportation was considerably less than if shipped by rail.

With a two-wheeled trailer behind the truck to carry the tanks, which are too long to be carried on any ordinary truck frame, two men handled the tanks, even to unloading them directly on the ground where they were to be set up.

A great deal of time and labor was saved by the ability of the Packards to haul the tanks over soft ground, in many places, and unload within a few feet of the point where the tanks were to be set. Railway spurs and side tracks were usually too far away to make close delivery possible.

While the tanks were ten feet in diameter and thirty feet long, they made a bulky load, but so far as weight was concerned it was an easy task for the five-ton Packards, as the total weight of the tank and the timbers for unloading was slightly under that figure.

Two hundred freight cars were released for Uncle Sam's war work and a marked saving in freight resulted from the use of the trucks as transports.

Lumber is being hauled to points from thirty to forty miles out of Los Angeles by a local concern, as they have found that both time and money can be saved. The trucks once more shows its efficiency by delivering the timber direct to the building site without having to be handled a second time, as would be necessary if it were shipped to a suburban point by rail. The lumber concern uses Packards and carries from 7000 to 8000 feet at a load, making good time over the excellent roads of Southern California.

An El Monte hay and grain dealer has a fleet of four Packard trucks with which he has handled thousands of tons of hay during the past summer.

His train of trucks goes directly into the field to load, and delivers direct to the warehouse, or, on army contracts, to a siding on the eastern limits of Los Angeles. Each of the trucks is rated at two tons capacity, but it is customary for Stafford to load them with four tons each and then attach a big trailer with a load of seven tons. In this way the train of four trucks, working in a fleet, handles forty-four tons to the trip. By traveling together, a smaller crew is needed, as the men assist one another in loading and unloading. During the height of the season the trucks were worked by three crews, and kept running day and night. This is another instance of the ability of trucks to release much-needed freight cars for essential war work, and at the same time cut transportation costs.

PASSENGER CARS ARE NOW UTILITY.

"We have won the war and we have learned many things and included in the long list is this: The passenger automobile is not a 'pleasure car.' Rather it is one of the most important utilities that is manufactured," remarked A. C. Robbins of the Greer-Robbins Company, distributors of new Chalmers cars.

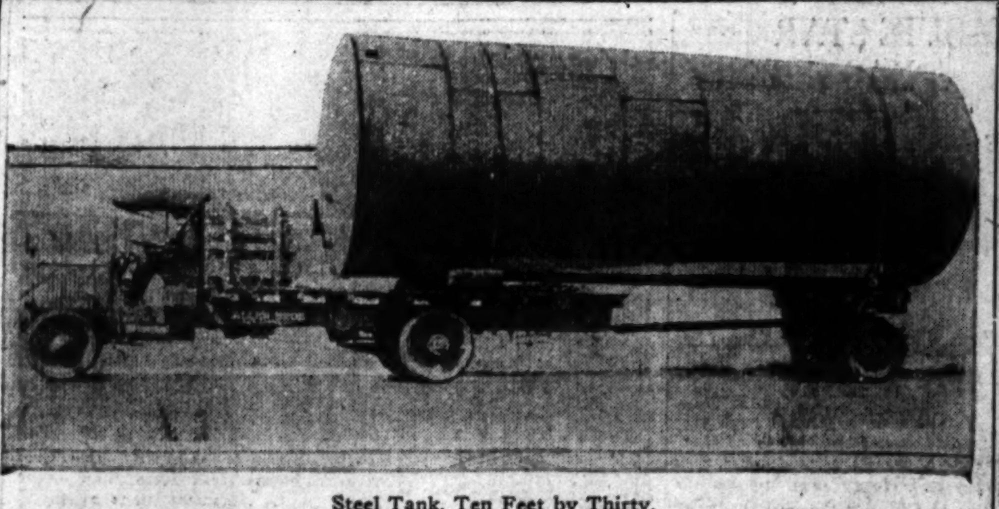
"Because we used the automobile for recreation, the generally accepted term for that type of vehicle was 'pleasure car.' Manufacturers employed it in their advertising and so did dealers. Salesmen used it and the public did also. While from long habit we continued to use it over here after the world war started, the Allies and the Central Powers were employing the automobile in huge numbers in their operations. It was no 'pleasure' proposition with them. They knew the automobile's worth and utilized it to the limit.

"Over here, when the lid was clamped on manufacturing after we entered the lists, millions of motorists and many others realized that the automobile was one of the greatest of all the essentials this nation possessed. Because our Allies and our armies needed them, it was up to us to get along with what we had on hand as best we could. It's all over, but we've learned many a lesson.

"We have learned to value the automobile in almost countless ways. As a result of war pressure on the railroads we travel by automobile when we formerly boarded a train. And owners have learned to take better care of their automobiles. This one feature alone will mean a saving to owners and more mileage for the future. The government will permit the manufacturing of cars again, but the great demand for steel and all manner of raw material will mitigate against reduction in prices for some time to come it is believed."

THREE CREWS BUSY POSTING HIGHWAYS.

With three crews on the road the sign-posting department of the Automobile Club of Southern California is attempting to completely revise its sign system in California by the first of next year. At present the work is being completed in Riverside, San Bernardino, Los Angeles, Ventura and Santa Barbara counties. Kern, San Luis Obispo and Tulare counties are next on the programme.



Steel Tank, Ten Feet by Thirty,

On way to San Diego via Packard truck, just one of the 200 tanks delivered throughout California for the Union Oil Company, 200 freight cars saved for Uncle Sam.

NEWEST INCLOSED MODEL.

The season's newest inclosed model is the Cadillac eight, seven-passenger suburban, which has just recently been placed on the market by the Cadillac company.

Don Lee was showing the first of these models last week. The number sent to the Coast will be limited during the next couple of months on account of the heavy demand from all sections of the East.

The suburban is a larger edition of the brougham. This has always been a popular family car among Cadillac buyers. The suburban is a single compartment car mounted on the 122-inch chassis. A long smooth cowl and horizontal roof lines carry the appearance of low swung strength and roadability.

The weight of an all-aluminum body is so distributed over the chassis as to balance the car and occupants against the whip and road shock often connected with brisk travel. Four large doors make it easy to enter or leave any seat without disturbing the other passengers. Large crystal plate glass windows at side and rear permit unusually open vision in a closed car. Those in the doors lower almost flush with the sills, while the two rear panes open more than two-thirds of their length. These with special ventilators in the cowl, and the windshield adjustments, furnish an ample supply of fresh air, and make open travel pleasant in bright weather. Silk shades for the rear doors and windows shut the afternoon sun from the rear seats of the car and rear quarter lamps illuminate the interior without casting an objectionable glare which would interfere with night driving.

New patterns of mohair velvet are used for the upholstery. A pleasing contrast is achieved by the use of striped material on the seats and the arm rears, and unpatterned goods of the same texture for upper work and head lining. The patterns are designed especially for the Cadillac suburban and a few other Cadillac inclosed carriages. The outstanding advantages of mohair velvet, made from angora fleece, are beauty, durability, ease of cleaning and sanitation. The folding seats are large and heavily upholstered. There is plenty of leg room for all occupants.

Inside thumb locks are provided for the two rear doors and left front door. An outside key lock secures the front curb door. The front seat is tilted a little so the driver takes a natural position at the wheel.

The suburban is a popular year-round model. It affords the luxury of a limousine for evening use and can be used for distance touring. A car of this type was recently driven across the continent.

PRICES TO BE READJUSTED.

The important announcement was received yesterday from the Cadillac Motor Car Company, that with the order of the government permitting the factory to return to a production basis, as it was prior to the curtailment order, prices accordingly would be readjusted.

J. E. Brown, manager for Don Lee, Los Angeles Cadillac distributor, said:

"In line with its usual custom the Cadillac Motor Car Company is among the first of the motor-car manufacturers to announce its definite action in view of new conditions.

"Prices are to be restored at once to figures which prevailed before Cadillac production was restricted by governmental order.

"Decreased output, which resulted from government curtailment, resulted in an increase in Cadillac prices. This increase is now removed from the entire line, the readjusted prices having gone into effect Saturday at midnight.

"It must be remembered that the Cadillac Motor Car Company has been on an exclusive war basis and deliveries will naturally be limited, until the factory is restored to a peace footing."

POLISH FOR AUTO DOES SPEEDY TRICK.

As a result of observations and inquiries made among automobile owners in regard to keeping cars properly polished, it has been proved that a majority of motorists do not neglect their cars simply from carelessness, but from the fact that the polishes used heretofore have required considerable real work to accomplish a purpose, and they just did not find time to do that work, according to A. R. Goodale of the International Sales Company, manufacturers and distributors of Duro-Lac.

That there would be a demand for a quick and at the same time a durable polish, has been fully proven by the manner in which Duro-Lac has been received, says Mr. Goodale, for nearly everyone is willing to spend a few minutes occasionally in keeping a car looking like new.

Once convinced of how easy this can be done, motorists have been quick to seize upon it, especially as it works right along hand in hand with the conservation and preservation policy which the government has been advocating in practically every line.

HUDSON MOTOR CARS

Maxwell

Congratulates the motoring public on the successful conclusion of war

In the great emergency, American automobile factories have loyally subserved their private interests to that of the paramount issue, Liberty.

Nevertheless, during the period of war work Hudson and Maxwell experts have been anticipating that with the return of peace America would demand finer and better automobiles than ever before.

They are now prepared to meet that demand and will immediately assume their leading places in the production of "quality" Hudsons and "economy" Maxwells.

Such is American resourcefulness.

CUB HANDLES SUB CHASER.

Men Trained at San Pedro Deliver the Goods.

Young Angeleno Commands Twenty-four.

Only Twenty-one Years Old, but is Made Boss.

Young men in the navy who trained at San Pedro are in demand in the several branches of that service, is the statement made by Ensign John Hanerwaas, who last week arrived in Los Angeles from New York while on a ten days' leave of absence. He is the secretary of the Pacific Rubber Company, distributor of Horseshoe and Gordon tires for California and Arizona.

The young naval officer—he is but 21—is in command of a submarine chaser operating out of New York Harbor, and of the crew of twenty-four, all are his senior in the matter of age. He enlisted at San Pedro immediately after the declaration and after intensive training was awarded the coveted commission last January.

He has been on duty in South American waters and wears the stripe indicating three months' service on convoy duty. When he first went upon arduous convoy duty he was executive officer of the boat he now commands. When his senior was transferred abroad, Hanerwaas was given the command. Many a sleepless hour has been passed on the bridge while convoying troop and supply ships out of Atlantic ports.

"The reputation of San Pedro for thoroughness is well established in the navy. I know that officers are glad to secure men for their ships who have trained there. Old Los Angeles looks mighty good," declared Ensign Hanerwaas as he greeted old friends at the Pacific Rubber Company's offices.

MOTOR EXPRESS WONDERS.

An increase in the food supply of the country, a growing appreciation of the necessity for motor trucks for rural motor routes, a saving in time to the farmers and a lowering in the cost of food supplies to the general public have resulted from the establishment of rural motor express lines in all parts of the country, according to a report by S. A. Miles, member of the National Motor Truck Committee, made to the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, a copy of which has been received by the Gates-Kelley Automotive Company, the Smith Form-a-Truck distributors here.

The formation of rural express companies and the operation of routes have resulted in such widespread benefits as a means toward war-time economy that there will be no abandonment upon the restoration of peace. Operation of these lines requires passable highways and with the public realizing that through the use of trucks commodities have been made cheaper, there will be an insistance upon permanent road improvement to better the conditions under which the truck lines operate.

Home Again, Talking It Over.

Ensign John Hanerwaas greeting Roy R. Meads, president of the Pacific Rubber Company. The young ensign graduated from the auto world to Uncle Sam's navy.

HOOSIERS PAY THEIR TRIBUTE.

Indianapolis paused Saturday, November 2, to admire the remarkable record in Liberty motor production achieved by the workers and officials of the Nordyke and Marmon plant, is the word that was received last week by Al G. Faulkner, Marmon distributor for California. The workers and the officials won the pennant awarded by the Bureau of Aircraft Production for the largest percentage of production of Liberty motors in excess of the assigned quota.

The ceremony of presentation was made a gala affair. A parade with about 5500 factory officials and workers, and headed by prominent military officials from Washington, marched through the city to University Park, where the ceremonies were held. Archer A. Landon, chief of production of the Aircraft Board, and who ranks next to John D. Ryan, was one of the principal guests and speakers.

Figures for production compiled by the industrial relations department of the aircraft bureau show that of a quota of 125 motors monthly, the Nordyke and Marmon plant produced and shipped 308, or a 264 per cent. production. In September the plant was 40 per cent. behind in production, but speeded up to such an extent that the workers accomplished production far in excess of that of any of the five other builders of Liberty motors, and each of them, it is stated, has been at the task longer and was better organized.

Faulkner left last week for the factory at Indianapolis, and expects to be absent in the East until the last of this month.

CARBON REMOVER MAKES BIG HIT.

Some months ago the government officials at Camp Funston determined to try out carbon removers in order to conserve man power in cleaning carbon from their large array of motor trucks and automobiles.

Representatives from a number of carbon remover manufacturers were each given a certain number of machines to clean for demonstrating, and the engines were then dismantled for an examining board in order to determine the exact results. The only machines found to be absolutely clean were those on which the Fearless Carbon Remover had been used.

This was found so successful that it was adopted for the cleaning of all motor vehicles used at Camp Funston.

The Fearless Carbon Remover is finding a ready reception in Southern California, where disposition is being made through the Los Angeles Rubber Company.

We are contemplating buying more trucks in the future and they will surely be MENOMINEES.

STEPHENS Salient Six

HEAT IS POWER

With Perfected Overhead-Valve Engine

The heat caused by the burning of gasoline gives the power to drive the engine. Unless the gasoline is all burned, power is going to waste.

The Stephens Salient Six perfected overhead-valve engine burns all the gasoline, no matter how poor. Its manifold in the cylinder head, surrounded by heat, completely vaporizes the gas and puts it in condition for burning. Large valves feed it into a small, cylindrical combustion chamber, where it is completely consumed, with every ounce of its energy exerted directly against the piston. There is no waste.

Stephens body models, five in number, give a range of choice to satisfy the most exacting demand. They are up-to-the-minute in design, with a quiet, conservative individuality. They afford plenty of room, and their balance and spring suspension are such as to make smooth riding on the roughest road.

CHALMERS
SEDAN

It is both a man's car and a woman's car—this Chalmers.

For it has the power a man likes and the conveniences a woman adores.

Chilly? Pull up the sashes all around.

Warm? Pull down the sashes. One compartment to seat five under one roof.

It's easy on tires, easy on gas, easy on oil and on the driver's nerves, because it handles light, drives straight, swings a corner with grace and accelerates with amazing speed.

A car that is never out of season, and therefore has little depreciation.

Besides the Sedan, there are several types of Chalmers enclosed cars, but the supply is limited, and only the most alert may enjoy these luxurious cars.

BOOSTERS FOR LIGHT TRUCKS.

An Important Result of the Great Struggle.

Lessons Learned by Users of Motor Vehicles.

Faster Machines will Now be Demanded.

One of the rather important outcomes of getting business down to a maximum of economy and efficiency during these wartimes has been the standardization of motor truck units by corporations and business houses representing nearly every line of endeavor, taking the trucking and delivery end out of a happy-go-lucky guessing state and putting it on a more stable and larger paying basis.

From a condition of having a number of large heavy trucks, much larger than was necessary in many cases, many of these firms have seen the advantage of lighter and faster trucks, powerful enough to haul any load that ordinarily comes up in a day's work and yet economical in the matter of operation and upkeep.

One line of trucks which has been responsible for this change in business regime is the Dodge Bros. line which includes a one and one-half-ton truck and a 1000-pound light delivery wagon for quick and lighter work and firms which have discarded fleets of various other makes in favor of the Dodge Bros. line have found that this standardization on one unit has proven an unqualified success because with a minimum loss of time they can keep their trucks moving as parts are interchangeable and easily and quickly secured because an exceedingly large stock of parts are carried at all times.

One firm quick to see the advantage of the lighter delivery trucks was the Sierra Paper Company, who are now operating two of the Dodge Bros. cars in their city and suburban delivery work, and as a means of furthering their service which has been a prominent factor in their organization, they have proven very efficient as well as broadening the scope of their delivery and in voicing his enthusiasm of their work to Mr. F. S. Albertson of the Albertson Motor Company, Dodge distributors, Mr. W. J. Myers, superintendent of the Sierra Paper Company, said they had proven to be both time and money savers in so many ways especially in the saving of man power which is so very important nowadays as these two trucks and two drivers were now handling every bit of their city and close-in country delivery and doing it in a better manner than it had ever been done before.

Since the government, in standardizing their motor equipment has selected the Dodge Bros. car as one of the three passenger cars, there has been a marked increase in the interest taken in this car and the natural assumption seems to be as one firm expressed it, "if they come up to the tests demanded by our Uncle Samuel in this war crisis then they will most certainly measure up to anything that I may have occasion to pu them up against."

CATERPILLAR TYPE; WHAT IT WILL DO.

The employment of tractors of the caterpillar type has brought into quantity production what is declared by mining experts to be a remarkably rich deposit of copper located about 124 miles north of Flagstaff and about ninety-seven miles from the nearest railroad point. Several attempts were made to carry on operations, but until the caterpillar tractor was brought into use each and every one was futile, according to E. M Chandler, sales manager for the Master Carburetor Company.

"The mine is better than 8000 feet above sea level, and the character of the country that is traversed between the property and the shipping point is about as bad as one can find in a desert country. Four tractors were first purchased, and the purchasing agent, knowing the ability of the Master to handle low-grade fuels and its particular adaptability to function perfectly under any atmospheric conditions, had them installed as part of their equipment. The company now has fourteen big tractors on the job, and all are Master equipped," stated Chandler.

AUTO TIRE THIEVES DOING NEW STUNT.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

PORTERVILLE, Nov. 16.—Automobile tire thieves, who have been particularly active during the period when such high prices were being paid for rubber, have varied their technique and are now removing wheels, with tires attached, from such machines as are left unguarded in out-of-the-way places.

Report of several such thefts has been made to the officers. Most of the thefts have been made from cars standing at the curbs in the outlying residence districts.

NEW SERVICE HEAD.

The service department of the Liberty Motor Car Company of Detroit is now in charge of Albert Gough. Mr. Gough's experience includes a connection with the Shaw Electric Crane Company of Muskegon, where he was engaged in production work, and more recently with the service organization of the Chalmers Motor Car Company.

PAIGE
"The Most Beautiful Car in America"

Now for Peace

"LET'S GO!"

A glorious and enduring Peace! And we and our Allies have won it with our courage, our brains and our brawn.

Now let us turn from War to the Work and Responsibilities of Peace. We Americans have a gigantic task before us. It is our job to clear away the wreckage of War, to rebuild and reorganize half the World.

Let's start this instant to do it—start with the calm confidence, the ingenuity, the thoroughness, the resistless energy with which we started to Win the War.

It was the great privilege of the Paige to stand shoulder to shoulder with scores of other great American Companies and fight, not in trench and turret, but beside lathe and drill-press.

In this Hour of Fulfillment we wish to speak a word of appreciation to those who have worked whole-heartedly with us, who have expressed their own red-blooded Americanism in a way to make our course and accomplishment possible.

We all had many difficult and weighty problems to solve. And yet, we realize, these War readjustments of business brought much graver uncertainty and greater privations to the 2,000 Paige Dealers throughout the world than they did to us. They were forced to make heroic sacrifices in order to save their undertakings, and their investments.

They responded magnificently. We shall remember those Dealers and the way they met and passed the Test.

Our service with the Colors has brought us a recompense, which lies, not only in the consciousness of having given our best to Uncle Sam and Victory, but actually, in the invaluable experience we have secured in meeting and solving the unprecedented problems which War forced upon the resourceful men, the strong men, the indomitable men of American Industry.

Our engineers crowded into the War Period years of priceless experience, years of creative work. We have learned new methods of manufacture, new standards of precision, new tests of quality.

We have built new factories, added vastly to our equipment, expanded our facilities tremendously. We were given by the War and War Work new Visions of the need of motor cars and motor trucks. And now that Peace has come and the Markets of the World are re-opened to us—we are prepared.

Paige Owners, Paige Dealers, Paige Patrons throughout the World, whose support and patience so long sustained us, will now find a Paige Company amazingly expanded in ideal and physical asset, in vision and factory equipment—a Paige Company, not merely of Detroit and U. S. A.—but a Paige Company of the World.

GOOD TIME FOR TOURISTS.

With "peace of mind" established, the removal of restrictions upon the purchase and use of gasoline and everything else that relates to the comfort and pleasure of motorists, with the probable exception of the influenza epidemic, Los Angeles motorists again will direct their interest to touring the surrounding country.

Should the rains of recent days mean the inauguration of the season, it will be advisable for motorists to ascertain conditions in the mountains and canyons before undertaking many drives off the paved boulevards, in the opinion of Doc Green, whose hobby is mountain driving and dolling up Scripps-Booth cars.

Care in mountain driving should be exercised at all times, but especially so soon after the early rains, says Green. This is because the water falling on the sides of the mountains washes down quantities of rock and loosens other quantities that are ready to fall at any instant. The vibration caused by an automobile motor has been known to release this rock so that it falls on the car in passing. The rock that has been washed down by the tiny falls often causes slides of much larger proportion, and these have a nasty habit of stopping in the middle of the road.

Green advises all motorists, while on mountain roads at this time of the year, not to attempt speed on the grades. A pile of rock on the inside of the road, a sudden swerve to the outer edge to avoid it, and a collapse of the road due to having been softened by water usually is followed by a plunge over the brink, something not often enjoyed, he says.

MANY AUTOISTS TO TRAIL TO THE WEST.

That this year's transcontinental motor travel will be unprecedented is the prediction made by Bert Hadsell of the touring bureau of the Automobile Club of Southern California, who has just returned from a trip over the National Old Trails route. Hadsell passed at least ten parties each day headed for the sunny South, and found remarkably few machines stranded along the road. The N.O.T. has been thoroughly sign-posted from Kansas City by the Automobile Club of Southern California, thorough replacement work for the entire distance just having been completed.

THROUGH the throbbing cables, under the heaving billows of the ocean, comes now day by day the list of the dead. It is the rosary of our sorrow; we wet its shining beads with our tears. The heartbreak that was dreaded is upon us.

It was the thing that we had hoped to put far off from us, although we knew that, sooner or later, it must come. We foresaw all too clearly this time when we would awake at morning to face dread tidings.

It was not that we cringed or failed to count the cost when we sent our sons forth from the happy pathways of peace to stalk upon the trails of death in the grim shadows of war.

Well we knew the price there was to pay. We knew that the altar would demand its sacrifice.

And now that time is come. Every day the names of the fallen are unrolled before us. And, as the days pass, more and more are the names becoming familiar.

Now and then, already, there are names that leave the list quavering in our hands. We look sadly at our neighbor's house where yesterday Death hung out its black plumes. We wonder across whose doorway the same black plumes will hang tomorrow. We pray God to give us the strength to bear it if that house shall be our own.

It is not that anyone, God knows, prays that his neighbor will be stricken to spare himself. It is only that each one hopes—as, indeed, he is permitted to hope—that it may be God's will to send back to him the son he gave out of his heart's sanctuary and the hearth fire of his home.

Very helpless do we feel, for we stand, as all who went before us in the countless ages have stood, face to face with the twin mysteries of life and death.

Why one should die before his time and another live beyond it—this is the thing we cannot fathom and against which we make blind and bitter protest if the blow falls upon us and we have not God in our hearts to sustain us.

So, all we can say is peace be with the dead—the dear and beautiful dead who died that the world might be free. And to the aching hearts left behind we say also Pax Vobiscum, for they, too, have given the gift of gifts as immortal sacrifices on Freedom's altar.

When in the dusk at close of day the bugles sound "Taps," heads are bowed low in the mansions of the rich and in the cottages of the poor alike, across the wide reaches of the land. They who were one in the Democracy of Life are one now also in the Democracy of Death.

Death has not spared one more than another for any human reason. The heir to millions and vast estate lies side by side with the washerwoman's son in those Flanders fields and on the Marne's red banks.

The lad who went out from the counting-house of the mart found marching with him the burden-bearer of the streets, when the colors called them both. And it well may have been that it was at the command of the humbler man that they met death together.

As we read the list of our dead in these heart-breaking hours, let us not forget that long after we have followed on to meet them again, history will also read the list to unborn generations yet to come.

Nor have we to fear the voice in which history then will speak. There will be no other scroll in all. Time's pages so bright with glory as this.

Each was a sovereign in his own right; each was a ruler in his own land.

They had never known anything but peace their whole lives long—these who are now on the list of the dead. They had never known the necessity for war; they had never acquired a lust for slaughter.

Then came the call from France, whose head was bowed and bloody—France, who had befriended us in the far hour of our first need. The Hun was at her throat; his iron heel trampled her fields.

Came, too, the call from Britain, from Italy and the free peoples of the world in their agonies. The very soul of Freedom, everywhere, called to us.

It was America's trial hour. The great God of the Ages, sitting in His golden chair, looked down upon us and waited for our answer. All that we have ever been led up to that hour. All that we might hope to be depended then on what our lips would say and what our hands would do.

There was, thank God, no hesitation. There was no murmur. Like the eagle soaring from its aerie, America gathered her brood beneath her wings and spread her pinions on the winds of the sea.

It is for freedom, for the liberty of all men, for big and little peoples everywhere that they may have their places in the sun and live in peace and plenty, that America has gone to war.

And it is for these things, and more, that they have died who are now on the list of our dead. Unspeakably tender in our hearts is the thought of them. There is no music in the world to voice the love we bore them. There is no magic of brush or pen to vision our memories of them as they fared forth in their strength and beauty to lie down with death.

Did Abraham more than this that we have done at God's command?

"And they came to the place which God had told him of; and Abraham built the altar there, and laid the wood in order, and bound Isaac, his son, and laid him on the altar, upon the wood."

Well may they rejoice who have borne these sons, the living and the dead. And well may they be comforted whose sons shall not awake again on earth till the last trumpet blows.

For it is not worth while for anyone to have lived at all unless by his life he has made the world a better place than he found it. Thrice more blessed is the world today than it was before because of these lads whose names are on the list of the dead, and because of the mothers and fathers who bore them.

Grieve not for those who died. All is well with them. They bivouac with Peace. There are no burdens now for their shoulders. Their tasks are done.

The right way to shampoo

How this treatment helps your hair

To keep your hair lovely and abundant you must, by the proper treatment, keep your scalp healthy and vigorous.

Is your hair dull and lifeless? It can be made rich and lustrous. Is it greasy, oily, or dry and brittle? You can correct the condition which prevents the tiny oil glands from emitting just the right amount of oil to keep your hair soft and silky.

Try this famous shampoo

Before shampooing, rub the scalp thoroughly with the tips of the fingers (not the finger nails) making the scalp itself move in little circles. This loosens the dead cells and particles of dust and dandruff that clog up the pores.

Now scrub the scalp with a toothbrush lathered with Woodbury's Facial Soap. Rub the lather in well, then rinse it out.

Next apoly a thick, hot lather of Woodbury's Facial Soap, and leave it on for two or three minutes. Clear off with fresh, warm water, finishing with cold water. Dry very thoroughly.

You will enjoy the healthy, active feeling it gives your scalp. You will soon see the improvement in your hair—how much richer and softer it is.

For ten or twelve shampoos, you will find the 25c cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap sufficient, or for a month or six week's general cleansing use. Get a cake today. Woodbury's is for sale at drug stores and toilet goods counters everywhere throughout the United States and Canada.

Send 6c for a trial-size cake, together with a booklet of the famous Woodbury face and scalp treatments. Or for 12c we will send you, in addition to these, a sample of Woodbury's Facial Powder. Address The Andrew Jergan's Co., 23 Spring Grove Avenue, Cincinnati, Ohio.

If you live in Canada, address The Andrew Jergens Co., Limited, 23 Sherbrooke St., Perth, Ontario.

The Garden Beautiful in Southern California.

INFORMATION BOTH PRACTICAL AND SCIENTIFIC. BY ERNEST BRAUNTON.

THE writer remembers looking over a farm and discovering a place where part of the rounded face of a huge rock or stretch of granite was bare of soil for a space fifty feet across. Asking the owner what it was, he replied: "That's a place where the world comes to the top of the ground." The answer really was a good one, quite aside from its grim humor. One had a different feeling when on this particular spot. It seemed a fundamental. It was the only spot for miles in every direction, that man had not changed or appropriated to his use. A certain amount of reverence is felt when standing virtually on "the foundation of the world."

This feeling of awe and reverence comes over the traveler whenever he enters the trackless forest. One is walking on soil that has never known of man's dominion over the earth. It is as it was, figuratively, at least, in the beginning of things. The soil is the same, probably, as it was millions of years ago. Countless generations of the trees may have lived, fallen, and decayed; all in the same soil. Therefore, is it sacred to one who loves nature. He is much to be pitied who has not knowledge and experience of the forest primeval. The writer glories in the memory of days spent in hardwood forests on lands not of mountainous character, through which flowed large rushing streams. We have none such in Southern California, but we have some of the largest coniferous forest reserves in the world and we should inhabit them far more than we do.

There is much more to forests than mere trees. Not only do they have an atmosphere and life wholly their own, wholly different from any other natural division of the globe, but the specific vegetable life is greatly at variance with that found elsewhere. The writer well remembers light spots in woods of oak and other trees where enough sun and air could enter to allow jack-in-the-pulpit, may-apples, etc., to grow. He remembers the first time he found trilliums or wake-robins in an open spot in a Southern California forest, and how he shouted in glee at finding dog-tooth violets under the shade of giant redwoods farther north. Wake-robins and dog-tooth violets had both been plucked over a score of years before in open woods in the Mississippi Valley. Here in Southern California coniferous forests are rich in variety of plant life and one need not be a botanist to enjoy it, because nearly all is attractive and much of it of recognized commercial value. When in the midst of nature's bounteous stores we should not rush along as though on business bent, having eyes and seeing not, but stop and study the luxuriant life present on every hand and note how amply sufficient and satisfying is the hitherto untrod forest. "He lives most who thinks most, acts the noblest, feels the best."

An Awful Grouch.

"I note that you are still booming the avocado in your Farm and Tractor Section of the Times and think that you should have a few facts in regard to the industry. I have been in it for the past six years. I bought the best known nursery stock, planted and cared for them according to the best authorities and did everything possible to get them going. Results nil.

"Nurserymen and those who are selling avocado orchards are advertising in your own paper that the trees will bear in two years. The first fruit I got was from a tree eight years old, two in the nursery, six in the orchard, of these same varieties. Most of the trees died, only a dozen being left out of about 100. Now that I have the fruit, I find it unsalable at any prices. I was offered early in the season, 50 cents per dozen for small ones, and $1.50 per dozen for large ones. Now they will not sell at that. I tried to sell to clubs and cafes but they use only a very few, the Jonathan Club merely buying a dozen at a time and then only the largest kind, not wanting anything that weighs less than a pound to a pound and a half. They are selling at retail for 5 cents in some places, and at 10 to 15 cents for the larger kinds, instead of the boasted 75 cents to $1.50, and they are being allowed to drop to the ground and rot as the work of finding a market for them is more than the cash result from the sale if a man's time is worth anything. This is for your personal information and not for publication."

This letter was received by the editor of the Farm and Tractor Section and turned over to the present writer for disposal. A visit to the ranch revealed a few young trees doing fairly well in a soil much too sandy and lacking in plant food, humus and water-holding capacity for the successful growth of avocados. The section and soil are [illegible] too hot in summer. The young trees should have their stems protected from the sun until the tops shade them. A good mulch three or more feet around the trees, extended a foot on all sides each year until eight feet across and maintained until the low-hanging branches shade that area of soil is a necessity in this locality in order to keep the roots cool and moist. The writer of the letter really has no just cause for complaint and no trees under the same care and conditions of soil and climate are known to the writer that have made better growth or show greater promise.

The trees are both young and small and as "to crop"—the writer is certain he has eaten more in a week than all the trees have borne up to date. The trees that died were victims of neglect. Anyone who has started a young avocado orchard knows that fact without argument.

During the same day ten fruit stands were visited where avocados were on sale. The lowest offer was small egg-sized purple fruits at 10 cents each and larger green fruits (Ganter and Harmon) for 25 cents each. In several places the prices were just double those quoted and a few years ago the better fruits would readily have sold for $1 each. As they become more common the prices will drop still lower, but growers will no doubt be splendidly remunerated for their outlay. The writer does not offer business advice in this department and has had no word to say about orchards of any fruits. We sing of the garden only and again say: Let all plant one or more avocados, until such a thing as an avocadoless garden shall not be known in Southern California.

Hardy Avocados.

Our friend and co-laborer Harry Ellington Brook states that the avocado grows only in almost frostless locations and therefore will never become very common. The average avocado tree now on the market is as hardy as the lemon tree and some, the Fuerte, for example, is as hardy as the orange. They may be grown generally throughout Los Angeles and thousands of young trees in vigorous health have passed unharmed through past winters in this city. They suffer more from sun than from frost. The trunks of young trees should be protected from sunburn until the top is sufficiently umbrageous to shade the stem. Dr. Brook further states the fruits may yet be cheap enough so an editor may eat them. This also brings in the question of how many one may relish, for they are very rich in oil content. Without having more of this world's goods than Dr. Brook, the Garden Beautiful editor and his better half have eaten just ninety-seven fair fat fruits of avocado in the past month. They were of good size, too. The writer personally knows of individuals who are eating from four to six every day. It is doubtful if one may eat enough to be harmful, though we know those who dearly love them but are nauseated by the fat content after eating one large fruit. Doubtless a properly-balanced ration would have removed this feeling. Fresh acidulous fruits should prove a good balance to the oily avocado.

Seasonable Garden Work.

Now is the time to keep roses "in the high." Give plenty of water, food and shallow soil-stirring. They will repay you a hundred-fold. Sow native California flower seeds for that wild-flower garden you determined upon having. Other sorts of seeds and plants in great variety should now be sown or planted. Consult your seedsman and nurseryman as to what is timely, not alone in ornamentals, but in vegetables and fruits. 'Tis a splendid time to clean up and make the garden neat; spade up vacant beds and spots and pulverize soil, at same time digging in a good supply of fertilizer.

The White Sapota.

While looking over a home orchard of sub-tropical fruits last week the writer remarked: "I see you have a sapote." The answer was that it was a mango. This mistake is a very common one and is quite puzzling, as neither seeds nor foliage resemble each other. Casimiroa edulis, the "sapote blanca" of the Mexicans, is a rather common tree in old gardens. There are trees of it in Southern California more than a century old. Close to Los Angeles, at Sherman, are some about fifty years old and now nearly two feet in diameter of base—the writer has not seen them for the past dozen years. The leaves are five-palmate or five lobed, while mango leaves are simple or entire and in shape, size and texture about midway between those of the peach and the rubber tree; usually handsome leaves, and the plants are much less hardy than sapotes.

Countless generations of giant trees have lived, fallen and decayed in California's forests.

BACK-YARD CASTOR BEAN MAKES DEBUT IN COMMERCIAL WORLD.

TESTS of the so-called native California castor beans have convinced Federal government officials that almost all of the varieties have as high an oil content as the imported India bean, and as a result men, women and children are now garnering from the roadsides, waste places and back yards a crop estimated to be worth more than $200,000.

It may be that the heretofore unwelcome plant that intrudes into the gardens and clutters up the highways will produce more airplane oil, acre for acre, than the commercial plantings. Encouraging results from tests of the "back-yard" plant have sent Boy Scouts and unemployed men and women into the highways and byways gathering the harvest.

Lieut. R. M. Mueller, representing the Bureau of Plant Industry, United States Department of Agriculture, is here in the interest of the gatherings of the regular commercial yield and, incidently, of this "volunteer" crop. The price of hulled castor beans has been raised by the Aviation Production Bureau from $3.50 to $4.50 per bushel, or about 10 cents per pound. California castor beans, both "native" and imported, weigh two or three pounds less per bushel than the beans raised in the South and East because of a lesser water content, but the oil content seems to be equal, it is declared.

Lieut. Mueller states that 90 per cent. of the "wild" or "native" beans contain as much oil as the imported India bean. Some of the castor beans found in the waste places of Southern California are more difficult to hull than the imported bean. Therefore, the government has placed a price of 3½ cents per pound for unhulled beans.

Frank J. Kepner, No. 2121 Santa Fe avenue, will, it is reported, be appointed buyer for castor beans for the district south of the Tehachepi. He has already gathered many tons of the uncultivated beans, and the first test of a huller patented by a Southern California man will probably be made at his place soon.

The Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce has done much toward turning the uncultivated castor bean plant into a war aid of promise. Dr. George D. Clements of that organization has made researches into the history and make-up of the California bean, and has been largely instrumental in bringing together the Federal officials and the collectors of the wild bean.

The cost of picking the beans has been found by Mr. Kepner to be about 3 cents per pound. The cost of hulling will depend on the machine designed for threshing. There is no castor bean huller in America that will adequately thresh or hull the beans, Mr. Kepner states.

The total acreage of castor beans in the State is estimated at 15,000 acres, including the so-called native bean. The commercial plantings have not been up to expectations. In the Imperial Valley, where more than 3000 acres were planted, the results have been better than in other sections, but the crop there has not been picked, and the results will not be known for some weeks. The estimate of the Federal officials of production of castor beans was thirty bushels to the acre, but it is believed that an average of nine bushels will be nearer to the results of Southern California plantings.

The plans for planting next year's crop are being held up by the Federal officials pending the definite determination of results from this year's crop, and the selection of seed.

The large, dark colored California beans are almost worthless for oil, it has been found, but the medium and small sized wild beans, which have a grayish tinge, have a high oil content.

About 100 square miles of the San Fernando Valley are being irrigated this year by the Owens River aqueduct, according to a bulletin issued by the Public Service Department of the City of Los Angeles, and this irrigation is greatly increasing the flow of the Los Angeles River. Ranchers in the valley are boasting of water in plenty when other water systems north of the Tehachepi are short of the life-giving fluid this year.

Wherever a test has been made, it has shown that a silo increases the carrying capacity of the farm by one-third, due to the increased feed value of silage. This means that the same acreage may feed more stock or else that the same number of animals may be fed on less acreage. The acres thus released from raising feed for stock can be devoted to the raising of crops for human consumption. Silos will thus help to win the war by increasing the supply of human food.

BACTERIA ESSENTIAL IN LEGUME GROWING.

For the most successful growth of alfalfa, clover, beans, peas and other leguminous crops the proper kinds of bacteria should be abundant in the soil, say agricultural authorities. When new legumes are grown for the first time in a locality the soil should be inoculated with the proper bacteria by artificial inoculation. In some regions soils are already supplied with the proper soil organisms; for example, in many southern localities artificial inoculation for cowpeas is unnecessary and in sections of the Middle West bacteria which thrive on the roots of clover and alfalfa are already present.

Artificial inoculation can be accomplished by spreading soil from a well-established field, where the particular legume which is to be grown has been successful, upon the new land to be planted with that legume, and also by the use of pure cultures of the proper bacteria. The United States Department of Agriculture is prepared to supply enough of the pure culture to inoculate one bushel of seed, and this culture can be obtained in bottles which contain complete directions for use. Application blanks for these cultures may be obtained from the Department at Washington, D. C.

Too much attention can not be given to the preparation of the field for leguminous crops. In a well-prepared seed bed the young plants get the best start and the necessary bacteria will thrive. Sour soils hinder and often entirely prevent the development of the beneficial soil organisms. To remedy this condition an application of lime is necessary. Any kind of lime may be used to advantage, but usually finely ground limestone is applied.

When a field is known to contain the bacteria suitable for a certain legume crop—for example, alfalfa—shown by the presence of numerous nodules upon the roots of alfalfa plants growing there, the soil is desirable for the inoculation of other fields upon which alfalfa is to be sown for the first time. Such soil, well sifted, can readily be applied to the new field through the fertilizer attachment on a drill. Two hundred pounds or more of sifted field soil will be sufficient for an acre and is best applied through the hoes. Broadcasting the soil by hand will require a larger quantity and is best done in the early morning, late evening, or on cloudy days, as the sun's rays are injurious to the bacteria in the thin layer of inoculated soil thus exposed to it. The field should be immediately harrowed after broadcasting the soil. Transferring field soil from any considerable distance is expensive and subject to the danger of introducing troublesome weeds, insects and plant diseases.

Dr. L. O. Howard, Federal entomologist at Washington, calls the attention of farmers to the discovery near San Diego of the European snail, Helix Pisana. This snail attacks many field and orchard crops and even citrus trees, particularly the buds and blossoms.

Three Score Years and Ten in One Business.

*THE PASSING OF A VETERAN. BY HENRY W. KRUCKEBERG.

SEVENTY-FOUR years a poultry breeder, fancier and judge was the record of I. K. Felch of Natick, Mass., whose death was recently announced. Mr. Felch followed the poultry business that many years in his native town, witnessing the early inception, the later development, and finally the fruition of what is now recognized and known as "Standard-bred Fowls," as represented in the American Poultry Standard of Perfection. In 1844, when the boy Felch started to breed poultry, none of the breeds as we know them today were in existence. During the late forties and early fifties no one mated to preserve breed character. Farm flocks were never uniform; there were no books of value on poultry culture and poultry papers were unknown. At about this period some importations of fowls were made from China, then known as "Shanghais"—forerunners of our present Cochins and Brahmas. Detailing some of his experiences at about this time, Felch recites that when he sold several trios at $2 a piece, the interest in poultry took its inception in this country, and that when he received $12 for four birds the incident was the talk of the town, and really was more of an event than subsequent sales of his celebrated Light Brahmas at $100 apiece. Early in life he settled on the Light Brahma, the Barred Rock and White Wyandotte, all three of which he handled successfully for upwards of fifty years, and especially was his name associated with the first mentioned. He was one of the founders of the American Poultry Association, and officiated as judge in almost every State of the Union and in nearly all the large towns of Eastern Canada. In the middle nineties he made a tour of the Pacific States, officiating at a number of shows, and made a flying visit to Los Angeles. Of the old guard (of which our own S. Tyler of Pasadena is still with us to cheer the fancier on his way) he was probably the most consistent and faithful advocate of pure-blooded fowl that America has produced. The intervening years between 1844 and 1918 is certainly a long period for a poultry fancier—many never attain the distinction of following web and feather for more than one-fifth of that time. His rule for building up and maintaining a poultry business was this:

"Sell none but A No. 1 birds as thoroughbreds, killing all that are not, and you soon enjoy the enviable position of a first-class breeder and also a first-class poulterer." Some of the moderns might adopt the rule to good advantage.

Calories and Breakfast Foods.

The readers of newspapers and magazines are more or less familiar with the chemical talks on preparatory food articles, (notably the cereal breakfast foods) in which particular emphasis is given to their heat-producing units, which finds common expression in the number of calories they analyze. This is all good in its way, but it is not the whole thing. Assimilation, and digestibility are also factors. As an evidence of this may be presented the observations made by Dr. E. V. McCollum of the Johns Hopkins University, in a lecture delivered recently in Los Angeles:

"Facts based on scientific investigations were to the effect that milk and eggs contain food elements that are essential to the growth and development of human beings—elements that are found only in these two natural foods, also in the leaves of certain edible plants and vegetables, such as celery, cabbage, lettuce, etc. Milk has the advantage as regards the present cost of these elements for use as human food, but eggs are deservedly popular as meat substitutes, also on account of the many ways in which they can be served to advantage."

Eggs not only possess a nutritive value peculiar to themselves, but in addition they are valuable in that they render more palatable and digestible food that would otherwise be inferior in character. Hen fruit rules high in Los Angeles at the present moment, going beyond the 5 cents apiece that breeders longed for a year ago; but in comparison with prices for other food products they are still among the most economical feeding stuffs the good housewife can buy. Indeed, the fresh egg still maintains its reputation as the greatest breakfast food on earth. Yes, verily!

Are we Increasing Poultry.

During the past year much has been said in favor of the campaign for more poultry on American farms and on the home places of back-lotters and suburbanites. In some localities we believe the campaign has led to increased poultry production; but on the whole the tendency in our judgment has been a decrease during the past two years. The necessity for increasing the poultry industry of the United States is emphasized by Canadian food reports. According to a recent announcement of the United States Food Administration, storage holdings of fowls in Canada on August 1, 1918, were so small as to be almost negligible. The decrease since last year exceeds 94 per cent.

To this statement the Rural New Yorker, a conservative and reliable authority, says that in the United States the shortage is at least 30 per cent from last year. The poultry ruling of last spring forbidding the killing of hens and pullets was largely responsible for this shortage. The trouble was that poultrymen never knew what would come next, and they cut down their flocks rather than take chances. Next spring will see a "come-back" into the business, and most breeders will have better stock than ever before. The War Industries Board has decided that "those engaged in the essential food production, connected with raising poultry and eggs, as well as marketing poultry, are in an essential industry." All well and good; but the only way in which to increase commercial poultry production is to make it profitable for the producers. We regret to say that under war conditions this has been difficult, and at times and in particular cases, impossible.

Leg Weakness in Poultry.

Mrs. A. L. K., Los Angeles, writes for information concerning leg weakness developing in young pullets. The one in question is a Black Minorca, about four and one-half months old, in perfect health one day, and the next unable to stand on her feet. "Is this a disease," the writer asks, "and can you tell me the treatment? Is it contagious? Could the fowl be eaten with safety, in case it should be necessary to kill it?"

According to Dr Salmon, leg weakness is a term which is popularly used to designate any condition in which birds find it difficult or impossible to support themselves upon their legs. It may develop in young chickens kept in brooders in which the heat is not properly distributed or where there is too much bottom heat, also in those which are kept constantly upon wooden floors. It is often seen in heavy cockerels, and also occurs in flocks which have been forced or which are kept in badly ventilated and damp houses. This trouble is probably in most cases of a rheumatic nature, affecting the muscles, tendons and joints. Frequently it consists only of bruises of the feet; while, sometimes, its nature is obscure and difficult to understand.

Symptoms: The disease may come on gradually or suddenly. In the former case, there is first seen an unsteadiness in the walk or a lameness which becomes more aggravated, until the bird, instead of standing upon its feet, sits down upon its legs even when eating. In the worst cases, the birds are unable even to raise themselves to a standing position.

Treatment: First, examine the birds for bruised feet or inflammation of the joints and if either of these conditions is found apply local treatment. In all cases give cooling food, such as bran, barley, rice, green feed, skim milk or buttermilk and vegetables. Avoid condiments, meat and stimulating rations of all kinds. Give five grains bicarbonate of soda daily in the drinking water for grown fowls. See that the heat is properly applied in brooders, and that the birds have dry, well aired quarters.

FARM AND TRACTOR SECTION.

Devoted to the multiform agricultural interests of the great Southwest and issued every week with the world's biggest Sunday newspaper.

EDITED BY HAROLD M. FINLEY.

Communications from practical farmers, ranchers, stock raisers, poultrymen, gardeners and others engaged either in a large or small way in the vital work of food production are gladly received.

Good clear photographs of interesting farm and garden activities are always welcomed. The Los Angeles Times Farm and Tractor Section is the only farm journal in the west printing illustrations in the incomparable rotogravure process.

"FOOD WILL WIN THE WAR."

Farm Conservation

FROM a harvest less in aggregate production than last year, the United States must export at least seventeen and one-half million tons of foodstuffs overseas during the coming season. This is about twelve million tons more than the average pre-war exports, or nearly two tons apiece for the average American farm where most of this food originates.

Rigid conservation of food and feed stored in granaries, cribs, barns and similar buildings—also products now in the fields—are essential to properly maintain our own population and to meet increased foreign needs, according to Food Administration officials. Animal feeds, though in a crude form, must be considered as food, since they are the basis for meat, milk and poultry products.

The vast quantity of foodstuffs stored on farms makes the opportunities for saving them correspondingly large. The government points out several ways in which the exercise of proper care and precautions will result in the conservation of much feed now wasted. These, in spite of their apparent obviousness, will be accepted in the right spirit by every patriotic farmer, who will recognize the necessity for such reminders in these times.

Remove inflammable rubbish, plow fireguards, use care with matches, lanterns and stoves, says Uncle Sam. Supplement these safety measures with fire-fighting equipment kept in a definite place for instant use. Other suggestions follow:

Prevent spoilage and deterioration by putting all foodstuffs possible under adequate shelter. Full utilization of storage space and prompt repair of roofs help greatly in preventing food losses. By sheltering foodstuffs on farms, conservation is effected at the source.

Regard rats and similar pests seriously, as the direct enemy of starving humanity. Exclude them with concrete floors and destroy their breeding places. Rats must not eat holes in our bulwarks of national defense.

More than a million tons of our food exports must comprise meats, fats, dairy products and poultry products. The quantity of this class of food depends largely on comfortable housing and the care which animals receive. Needless exposure and irregular attention may result in reduced production and mortality. Thorough farm conservation demands that live stock be kept comfortable and in healthy condition, thereby securing maximum results from the feed consumed.

In complying with these suggestions and extending them to cover additional sources of loss, farmers are asked to consider this programme necessary until next harvest, even though peace has come to the world. Besides feeding ourselves, the United States is pledged to feed the Allies and we must also supply the people in territory now being recovered from German dominion. We must realize that peace has brought no additional food, but instead increased obligations. Poland, the Balkans and other parts of Europe are now claiming for a share of our present and future reserves.

FARM LABOR AGENCY NO. 191.

The editor of the Farm and Tractor Section is an officially authorized farm labor agent and will receive and forward applications for work from volunteers in any branch of the great farm army, as well as calls by farmers for help.

Farmers or workers wishing to take advantage of this service should anticipate their requirements and desires in order to insure getting results and should be as specific as possible in their communications.

Such calls will be received by letter, telegraph or telephone, and every effort will be made to bring farmers and applicants together in mutually satisfactory arrangements. State wages, wanted or offered.

He Will Be Missed.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA agriculture lost one of its leading lights the other day when William W. Wood, Los Angeles County Horticultural Commissioner passed away at his residence in Whittier. Mr. Wood was a real student of horticulture and, in fact, of farming in all its branches and had for many years given the benefit of his knowledge, experience and executive ability to the advancement of agricultural production in California. Before taking the office of Los Angeles county commissioner nearly a decade ago, he had served as deputy in the State Horticultural Commission and had been State Quarantine officer for many years. He had been a resident of California for over forty years and had witnessed and studied the growth and development of the State's agriculture throughout the days of its greatest progress.

Mr. Wood's earnestness and conscientiousness in the conduct of his official duties won him the respect of all with whom he came in contact. He had the reputation of being a man who went to the heart of things and his example as well as his kindly presence will be missed in the County Horticultural office for a long time to come.

The man behind the Plow is the man behind the man behind the Gun.

And don't forget that this still holds good!

The cartoon was issued by the Food Administration just before the armistice bringing peace to the world was signed, but it applies as much now as before. Millions of soldiers of the United States, and other Allied countries will be kept mobilized and under arms in Europe for another year or more to insure that the treacherous Hun has no opportunity to violate the terms imposed upon him a week ago.

SUGAR YIELDS.

A ton of sugar cane has produced from 119 to 151 pounds of refined sugar in Louisiana in recent years. The sugar product of a ton of beets has been 210 to 285 pounds.

In 1918, over 5000 farmers in California pledged themselves to keep 21,000 more pigs as the result of the pig campaign carried on by farm bureaus. The purpose of the "keep more pigs" campaign was to counteract the effect of the wholesale slaughtering of brood sows because of the high price of grain.

Are you profiting by the agricultural extension work provided for you by the State university? If you want to know how this work can help you, write to the County Farm Adviser.

POSTPONEMENT OF BAY CITY SHOW TO HELP LIBERY FAIR.

C. R. THOMAS, manager of the livestock department of the California Liberty Fair, is in receipt of a message from Joseph E. Painter, manager of the California International Livestock Show, San Francisco, stating that the directors of the northern show have decided to postpone their event until February 8. It was to have been opened on November 2, but the influenza spread prevented. The date was then set for November 16 only to be moved forward again.

As many intending exhibitors at the California Liberty Fair in Los Angeles, had planned on showing their stock at San Francisco, this postponement means more livestock exhibitors for the Southern California show. The setting of a 1919 date for the northern show leaves the Liberty fair livestock show without a counter attraction.

There are still seven herds of cattle in stalls at Exposition Park awaiting the opening of the Liberty Fair, and there are many inquiries from livestock breeders regarding the opening date. It is believed that the Liberty Fair will be opened in the near future, and that it will be a bigger, better fair than it would have been had it been opened on time.

LOS ANGELES COUNTY GROWERS MAKE BIG PRODUCTION RECORD.

A REMARKABLE record has been achieved by the farmers of Los Angeles county in the production of food this year. Both the quantity and value of the foodstuffs grown exceed that of any other year in the county's history.

A report compiled by the County Horticultural Commission office shows that, exclusive of thousands of acres of pasture land that fed meat animals, 311,322 acres bore food in the county during September. This is an increase of 8 per cent. over the 1917 total.

The average condition of crops was 84 per cent. The condition of the naval orange crop increased from 73 per cent. in August to 75 per cent. in September and 78 per cent. in November, and it appears probable that the citrus crop will be the most valuable ever produced.

Beans led in the acreage statistics, 76,882 acres producing these legumes. Hay and stock feed ranged next, with 56,510 acres. Citrus fruits covered 38,864 acres.

Following is the Horticultural Commission's report on acreage during September, with a statement of the relative condition of the crops:

SAN FERNANDO VALLEY'S BEAN CROP SURPASSES EXPECTATIONS.

VAN NUYS.—Estimates of the bean crop of the San Fernando Valley this season have been considerably enlarged since the reports have been coming in from various ranches. It is now thought that the entire crop will reach 350,000 sacks or 35,000,000 pounds of beans. It appears also that this year's production is likely to be 25 per cent. greater than that of last year.

The average production on the Van Nuys, Marion and Owensmouth lands will be over twelve sacks to the acre.

Many sales of Henderson bush beans have already been made at prices ranging from $11 to $11.75 per hundred weight.

The demand for teparys is very light and few sales have been recorded. It is thought by the growers that this variety will move more rapidly during the winter months.

An idea of the extent of the operations and some of the expenditures by some of the growers in this section may be had from the experience of W. J. Petit. Mr. Petit farmed about 1000 acres of beans in the valley this year. His expenditure for sacks was over $5000 and the cost of threshing his crop was about $10,000.

The Vanomar producers are now winding up their campaign on tomatoes after the biggest season in that line since the cannery was established at Van Nuys. More than 2000 tons of tomatoes have been canned and made into sauce. The price to the growers has averaged $18 a ton, and the average yield has been about twelve tons to the acre. The quality of the tomatoes grown here has been extra fine and has run uniform throughout the season. The cannery recently started to pack pumpkins. A large percentage of the tomato pack of the cannery will be taken by the United States government.

DAIRYMEN WARNED THEY MAY NEED COWS NOW BEING SLAIN

THE milk supply of Los Angeles county is threatened by the slaughtering of large numbers of dairy cows for beef, says Assistant Farm Adviser Scribner. Within the last eighteen months, he estimates, 25 per cent. of the dairy cows have been sacrificed.

He warns dairymen that conditions which have made dairying less profitable than other lines of husbandry may change soon, and that then they will need the cows they are now selling to the butcher. He also points out that, with less cows to feed, the price of alfalfa may go down.

Only a comparative few of the dairymen have availed themselves of the excellent milk testing facilities of the County Farm bureau, Mr. Scribner says. He points out that testing is the only reliable way the farmer can determine whether he should or should not sell a cow for beef.

Mr. Scribner answers the question: "What is the Matter with the Dairy Business" by citing the following faulty methods followed by many dairymen:

Tendency to buy all or most of his feed.

Indiscriminate rather than individual feeding.

Poor care of developing heifers.

Ignorance of quality and quantity of production of individual cows.

Tendency to let fodder lie in fields until injured by the weather.

HOGS DRAW LINE AT CRUDE "MARMALADE."

With an increased understanding of garbage utilization and the means of getting more out of the garbage pail although less is put in, many cities have lately modified pre-war regulations. Disposal of garbage by dumping, burning or other wasteful means is being supplanted by feeding it to hogs or by processes which recover from it such products as grease, alcohol, glycerine and fertilizer.

Among the changes in garbage disposal methods hastened by war-time economics was the tendency to withdraw local regulations requiring city garbage to be cooked before being fed to swine. Cooking ordinary garbage causes the acids in fruit peelings, rinds and similar kitchen waste to form a crude "marmalade." Although hogs may at first eat the mixture eagerly, apparently attracted by the new taste, the appetite for this unnatural feed frequently fails in a short time. Unthriftiness and intestinal disorder may follow. The injurious effects are aggravated by the frequent presence of soap which spreads throughout the cooked mixture.

On the other hand fresh raw garbage enables hogs to select the nourishing and palatable portions and leave the remainder. Sterilization by cooking does not appear to be objectionable when the quality of garbage can be controlled, but in ordinary methods of collection, its classification is difficult. Most of the garbage now being fed in the United States is uncooked, and there is no evidence that garbage-fed hogs are more likely to be diseased than hogs fed grain or other feeds, according to the United States Food Administration officials.

BIG PRODUCTION CAMPAIGN BEGUN.

Federal farm aides, and members of the small army of farm advisers throughout the State, are centering thir efforts this fall towards urging greater production in 1919 of those foods and fibers in their several localities that offer greatest promise of increase because of local climatic conditions.

In Los Angeles county farmers are urged to plant more bitter clover, wheat, grain sorghums, beans, sweet sorghums and potatoes, and to raise more hogs. This advice is also given to agriculturists in most of the counties of Southern California.

The farm advisers call attention to the fact that much stock feed can be raised between the rows of trees in an orchard, and truck crops may also readily be brought to maturity in orchards. Much more milo maize, Egyptian corn, feterita and other grain sorghums may be grown as a second crop after grain or hay, as a spring crop on uncultivated lands, and on vacant lots and rights of way. A campaign for raising potatoes on farms and on vacant city lots and backyards will be prosecuted.

Feed city garbage to hogs, urges C. E. Colt, Los Angeles County Farm Advicer.

FOREST RANGE PLANTS.

More than 35,000 plant specimens, representing 4800 species, have been collected on national forests and purchase areas by Forest Service officers in connection with the extensive studies made of the distribution, natural habits and economic importance of the range flora. The data obtained have direct application to many phases of range management, such as intensive range utilization, especially with a view to minimum interference with the requirements of the important forage plants and the utilization of each type at the time and by the class of stock to which it is best adapted. Use of these data is also made in the detection, eradication and fencing of poisonous plant areas, in natural range reseeding, and other range studies.

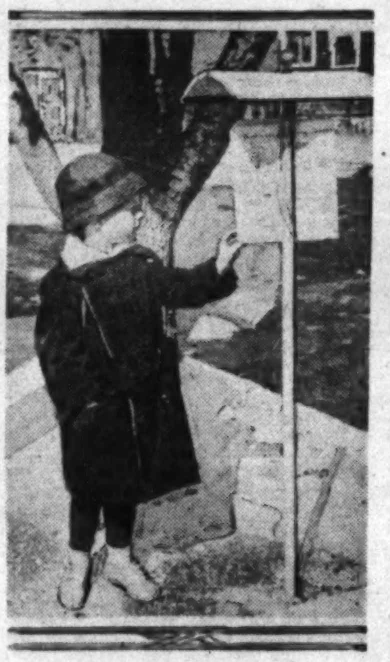
The 1918 harvest does not belong to us; we in America are only the trustees.

PAPER HOLDER FOR RURAL RESIDENTS.

In the accompanying illustration is shown a novel newspaper holder for the owner of the rural or country home. By the aid of this rack it is possible to keep the paper clean and dry, regardless of the condition of the weather. An orchardist near Pasadena devised this convenience, and has been using it for some time.

The rack consists of an iron upright or standard (this one being one-inch gas pipe,) a curved sheet iron top or roof, which is twelve inches wide and eighteen inches in length, and a pair of springs, extending downward from the under side of the roof, the purpose of this being to hold the papers tightly against the upright. The rack is very simple in operation.

The paper boy, as he passes along, pauses a moment in front of the rack, takes the paper from his sack and forces it with a single motion, between the spring and the standard. The entire device has been finished with a coat of aluminum paint, which in addition to preserving it, also enhances its appearance.



A Newspaper Holder for the rural resident. This handy device was designed by an orchardist near Pasadena.

THANKSGIVING TURK WILL COME HIGH.

The turkey has good cause to haughtily strut and drum among the meaner fowls of the barnyard this Thanksgiving season, for his is the highest priced fresh meat which has ever come to the table of Southern Californians. It is indicated that as high as 50 cents per pound will be asked for prime young toms this year.

Poultry dealers are paying from 31 to 36 cents per pound, live weight, and glad to get good stock at that. The answer to the higher price query is the increased cost of grain for unishing His Turkeyship.

As usual, over one-half of the turkeys bought by Southern California this year will come from the Imperial Valley, where more than 125,000 pounds are being prepared for market. Antelope and Palo Verde valleys, Kern county and Texas also furnish Thanksgiving birds for the Pacific Coast. Not enough turkeys are raised on the coast to supply the local demand.

This year huge dressing sheds have been built at El Centro and Brawley, where the birds are dressed and packed into refrigerated cars and shipped to the coast markets. The Imperial Valley Poultrymens' Association has a large hand in the business by placing the prime Imperial birds on the market. The raisers of turkeys in the valley have combined to get a better price for their product and to see that the useless middleman, the independent turkey buyer, is largely eliminated.

The United States Department of Agriculture, last spring, began a campaign for the raising of more turkeys on the farm. The Federal experts, at laying time, tried to make the American farmer see that turkeys were a profitable side line where there was sufficient range for the birds, which feed largely on insects and waste grains. In the grain raising sections of the California interior valleys, the turkeys rid the ranches of destructive pests and glean the grain spilled on the ground.

The mammoth bronze turkey is a favorite in Southern California, the bronze birds being the heaviest and hardiest. The White Holland turkey is preferred by many raisers, who claim that this breed is the most prolific and is more domesticated than the bronze.

The turkey hen begins laying the middle of March and finishes her first setting early in April, her second late in April, and her third about the third week in May. Turkeys have been known to produce four and five settings, but the later poults do not mature in time for the Thanksgiving market. A flock of ten to fifteen hens and a tom will ordinarily produce from seventy-five to 150 turkeys.

DOWN-TO-DATE REPORTS FROM TIMES CORRESPONDENTS.

ESCONDIDO.—Launching the enterprise of securing "feeders" for its $50,000 canning plant, erected this year and just through with a pack of 75,000 cases of tomatoes, the Escondido Canning Company states that it has entered upon the work of securing the planting of 500 acres of peaches in this valley and tributary country, and that while the trees are maturing to the bearing period the ground between the rows will be utilized for the growing of string beans, spinach, peppers, rhubarb and other vegetables, all of which will be canned at the local plant.

Arrangements have been made for the planting to peach trees of the M. L. Howell tract of sixty acres, a mile east of the business section of the city and less than half a mile from the canning plant, the planting to be done within the next few months. Davis G. Coover, field agent of the canning company, is confident that he will be able to secure the planting of the entire 500 acres the coming winter. The Tuscan and Phillips clings and the Lovell free stones will be the kinds of peaches planted. Years ago deciduous orchards flourished in this valley, but in the absence of canneries and with the lack of market, practically all of them were grubbed out and the land put to other uses. The establishment of the cannery here is expected to bring about important changes in the growing of deciduous fruit and vegetables in this section.

BANNER CORN CROP.

ARTESIA.—On the Frampton Brothers ranch here there has just been harvested a real banner crop. On a piece of land containing nine and a half acres, 200 tons of ensilage corn has been cut. For weeks this field has been a center of much attention. The stand was perfect and the corn tall. This record means an average of forty tons to the acre. The ensilage went into two concrete silos, each 14x41 feet and filled them to overflowing.

Three years ago when the sales were first erected this same acreage produced just enough to fill the silos conveniently. But the field has been producing more and more until the present record has been reached. One secret of this success with a corn crop is found in the system of drainage from the cow barns. A stream of water is kept running down the trench behind the cows, which carries off the manure and takes it out over the fields. A large dairy herd is kept and the fertilization is easily handled.

A GREAT COUNTY.

BAKERSFIELD.—George C. Harvey, inspector for the State Horticulture Department, after an investigation of Kern county resources, states in a letter to the local bureau that in his opinion Kern county is the most promising of the San Joaquin Valley. Orange and lemon groves of the county greatly surprised the inspector by their productiveness.

"Any county that can grow such a remarkably wide range of agricultural products, from lemons to hogs and yield both olive oil and petroleum, is not going to starve. I think Kern county is the most promising in the San Joaquin Valley," concluded the inspector.

PROPOSE BULK SYSTEM.

PORTERVILLE.—Through the efforts of the Farm Bureau of Tulare and adjoining counties, the grain ranchers hope to put into effect by next season a system for handling grain in bulk. The first steps for this change in system were taken at the meeting of the Ducor Farm Bureau, when C. M. Conner, the Farm Adviser, was instructed to take up the propal with the grain growers of surrounding counties.

Sentiment here favors the formation of cooperative associations through which to finance the construction of elevators. It is believed the saving of expense by the new plan will go a considerable way toward financing the necessary equipment.

Late olives will make a bumper crop this year, and with prices running upwards from $150 per ton, probably will result in the most profitable output in the history of this district. Last year unseasonable weather conditions resulted in only a little more than a half crop. Labor conditions make the only serious phase of the situation. With the approach of cold weather there is some danger that the later berries cannot be harvested before the first frosts.

"STUNG" ON BLACKEYES.

CLAREMONT.—Ranchers in this district who were induced by patriotic motives to plant blackeye beans in their orchards feel that they have been "stung." The first year rabbits got nearly the whole crop and the legislature prohibited any one from shooting the rabbits. The farmers lost heavily. The next year they took the law into their own hands and killed the rabbits, harvested their beans, paid 10 cents apiece for the sacks and received 9 cents per pound for the beans. This year sacks are 23 cents apiece and beans are selling for 4½ cents per pound, which means a dead loss to the farmer.

BIG FRUIT PACK.

CHINO.—With the fruit season over, the Chino Canning Company has a record of nearly 1,000,000 cans of peaches, the exact number being 960,000 cans. The pack of apricots was less proportionately, for the cannery did not get started until after the apricot season was well under way. However, there were put up 48,000 cans.

Of tomatoes thus far the plant has put up 528,000 cans, and will continue canning until frost comes. All told, the output of the cannery to date is 153 carloads, of which 45 per cent. is requisitioned by the government.

During the busy season there were employed about 250 laborers, while at the lowest stage there were 100 employed. The payroll amounted to $2000 per week, which was a great benefit to the people of this vicinity.

A GOOD SEASON.

WHITTIER.—The Whittier Walnut Association has shipped so far this year 850 tons of walnuts, and, according to Secretary Wallace Gregg, will ship a total of 1150 tons before the close of the season. Last year the total was 800 tons, showing a good increase in the yield of this district this year. The quality of nuts is holding up fine. One carload marketed in Pennsylvania recently aggregated $19,025, which is so far the local record for high prices on a single carload.

FARMERETTES MAKE GOOD.

PUENTE.—B. F. Maxson, manager o[illegible] Puente Walnut Growers' Association, is enthusiastic over results of using farmerettes in his large orchard this season. He was a pioneer among the walnut growers of his section in hiring women to garner in his crop of nuts. Mrs. R. J. Waters, leader of the women land soldiers headed a score of them. They were housed in the West Covina clubhouse, in the heart of the Puente district, and the quantity and quality of their work left nothing to be desired. Some of the girls made $5 per day during the entire season, it is reported.

TO BUILD ELEVATOR.

RIVERSIDE.—The Sperry Flour Company, which for the past three years has maintained a plant and branch office on the Southern Pacific Railroad at Eighth street, has purchased additional property and will erect a grain elevator and enlarge its warehouse facilities. Frank S. Coates, local manager, in making the announcement, states that every effort will be made to have the new plant in operation in time to handle next year's crops. It is believed that the establishment of a grain elevator here will have the effect of extending the acreage devoted to grain, already materially increased by the government's campaign for increased planting.

NEW DATA SECURED.

PORTERVILLE.—R. P. Rex of the Bureau of Chemistry, United States Department of Agriculture, has been here to secure additional data on orange maturity tests, with a view to a possible modification of the Federal "8 to 1" regulations, which have been in force for early shippers for the past two years.

This year it has been found that much of the fruit is testing up to 12 to 1 and in some instances tests as high as fifteen parts of sugar to one of acid. This has been due, it is stated, to climatic conditions which have kept the citric acid at a very low stage. The resulting fruit is insipid in taste and requires further maturing, although its shipment would be allowed under present regulations.

Fruit men generally regard it as certain that as a result of the investigaions now on, the Federal standard will be modified with a provision requiring either a certain amount of net solids or a sliding scale based on acid proportions, thus maintaining the quality of the early fruit.

WATER ANALYSIS.

The Citrus Experiment Station at Riverside is now making chemical analysis of irrigation water, without cost to ranchers. Fill a clean quart fruit jar with the water, paste a label on the side of the jar, bearing name, address, place where sample was taken, whether it came from a well or a ditch, capacity of the well, and date taken.

A potato-growers' observation trip through Los Angeles and Orange counties is being planned by the Los Angeles county farm adviser.

G. E. Gordon, assistant farm adviser of Riverside county, has been transferred to Los Angeles county. R. F. Nebelung, now of the Los Angeles county office goes to Riverside.

MINIMIZING WASTE AND LOSS IN FARM BUTCHERING OF HOGS.

IN SELECTING hogs for farm butchering, health should have first consideration. Even though the hog has been properly fed and carries a prime finish, the best quality of meat cannot be obtained if the animal is unhealthy; there is always some danger that disease may be transmitted to the person who eats the meat. The keeping quality of the meat is always impaired by fever or other derangements. A hog in medium condition, gaining rapidly in weight, yields the best quality of meat. Do not kill a hog that is losing flesh. A reasonable amount of fat gives juiciness and flavor to the meat, but large amounts of fat are not essential. The breeding of animals plays an important part in producing a carcass of high quality. Selection, long continued care and intelligent feeding will produce meat of desirable quality. The smooth, even, and deeply fleshed hogs will yield the nicely marbled meat.

Hogs intended for slaughter should remain unfed for at least twenty-four hours, or better, thirty hours, according to experts of the United States Department of Agriculture. Give them all the clean, fresh water they will drink. This will help to clear the system of food and will facilitate bleeding. Do not excite a hog before killing.

*BARREL FOR SCALDING.

A useful equipment for hog killing includes: an eight-inch, straight, sticking knife, a cutting knife, a fourteen-inch steel, a hog hook, a bell-shaped stick scraper, a gambrel, and a meat saw. A barrel is a very convenient receptacle in which to scald medium-sized hogs. The barrel should be placed at an angle of about 45 deg. at the end of a table or platform of proper height. The table and barrel should be securely fastened to prevent accident to the workmen due to slipping.

Sometimes the hog is stunned or shot before sticking. If the animal is stuck without being stunned, he should be held squarely on his back when stuck. A narrow, straight-blader knife, about eight inches long, should be used. The knife should be pointed directly toward the root of the tail and held in a line with the backbone. Thrust the knife in six or eight inches directly in front of the breastbone. Then turn the knife and withdraw it as this severs the arteries in the neck and insures better bleeding. Avoid sticking the heart, for if this is done the blood will not be pumped from the arteries.

Water for scalding may best be heated in a large caldron near the scalding barrel. A block and tackle for hoisting purposes is valuable for lifting the carcass in and out of the barrel and for hanging up when entrails are to be removed Barrel for scalding.

For the handling of medium-sized hogs this is a most satisfactory method.

CARE IS NEEDED.

For scalding, the water should be at a temperature of 185 deg. to 195 deg. Fahr., a thermometer being used. If the water is too hot, the hair is likely to set, causing even more trouble than if too cold. A teaspoonful of lye or a small shovelful of water ashes added to every thirty gallons of water and well stirred will aid in removing the scurf.

Insert the hog hook in the lower jaw, place the hog on the table, and slide it into the barrel. The rear end of the hog is scalded first for the reason that if the water is too hot and the hair sets it can be removed easier from the rear than from the fore part of the hog. The hog should be kept moving in the water to be sure that no part will rest against the side of the barrel. Occasionally the hog should be drawn out of the water to air, when the hair may be "tried." When the hair and scurf slip easily from the surface, scalding is complete. Pull the hog out upon the table and remove the hair and scurf from the legs and feet at once. The simplest way to accomplish this is to twist the legs in both hands. Use the long hook to remove the dewclaws at the same time. Remove the hair and scurf from the rear end of the hog by means of a bell-shaped scraper.

Cut the skin about three or four inches just below the hocks in both hind legs. Loosen the tendons and insert the gambrel. Now scald the front part of the hog. Then pull it out on the table as before. Remove the hair and scurf from the ears, forelegs, and head immediately, as these parts cool very quickly. Use the bell-shaped scraper to remove the remaining hair and scurf. If the hair fails to yield in any particular region, cover that portion with a gunny sack and pour on hot water. When most of the hair and scurf is removed pour hot water over the entire carcass and shave off, by means of a knife, the hair that is left. Hang up the hog and pour a bucketful of cold water over the carcass and scrape from the surface the remaining dirt or scurf.

The entrails should then be removed. Furthermore, while the carcass is still warm, remove the leaf lard or kidney fat as this facilitates the cooling of the carcass and lessens the danger of the hams and loins souring. The leaf lard should be spread out on a table to cool with the thin menbrane side turned down.

BETTER QUALITY HORSES IN DEMAND.

Large numbers of undesirable, mediocre horses are being turned onto the market at present in all parts of the country in order to save feed, according to reports to the United States Department of Agriculture. As a consequence, the market is glutted with commonplace animals of this description to the extent that the prices paid are unusually low.

The department urges farmers to raise horses of better breeding and quality. The supply of desirable-quality heavy draft horses or animals suitable for artillery or cavalry purposes is below the demand, while the prices of such animals are correspondingly high. In view of both the domestic and foreign demand during and after the war for quality horses, farmers should begin now to stock up their barns with horseflesh of the desirable type. Under existing conditions feeding stuffs for work animals are extremely high in price. On this account it is imperative that the farmer should winter only work stock of the useful, most efficient, and valuable type.

One heavy draft horse will perform the work of practically two undersized, inferior plugs, while such an animal can be fed at about the same cost for maintenance as for one of the plugs. When the farmer desires to sell a heavy horse of quality and breeding, he can always locate a ready market, whereas inferior animals ordinarily can be disposed of only at a sacrifice.

THE SURPLUS CALVES.

The high prices now being paid for beef stock will answer the query of many small breeders of milch cows and many dairymen as to what can be profitably done with male calves not suited for breeding purposes. If properly fed and fitted for market, these calves make very desirable beef. With labor and feed prices as they are, the production of beef, is, of course, a problem to discourage and baffle many. There are others in such circumstances, however, that the production of beef is a problem easy of solution, if they will but try.

Every purchaser, every distributor and every consumer is individually responsible for maintaining a never-failing flow of the best quality of food from America to our troops in France.

Keep a set of books on your farm and see where the dollars come from and where they go.

THE VALUE OF BEET TOPS AS ENSILAGE.

Hitherto there have been three by-products derived from the manufacture of beet sugar. One was pulp, another molasses and the third "beet lime" and all have put money into the purse of the sugar company. The beet top has now come into use as a by-product which adds to the income of the grower.

The beet tops, properly handled, have real value as a feed for live stock. For some time the tops have been stacked as hay is handled and fed with good results But now the tops are being dried and mixed with other feed, being also put up as ensilage.

One large beet grower who had 500 acres of beets this season is clearing up over $5000, it is stated, from the sale of the tops harvested just as they were left lying in the field when the beets were topped for hauling to the dumps. Last year growers received but 20 and 25 cents a ton in the field. Sixty cents has been the price this year. The tops are allowed to thoroughly dry, and are then stacked with a horse rake, hauled to the railway and shipped to the concerns which grind the product fine and use it to mix with other feed for use as a fattening feed for cattle.

The more profitable use, some growers believe, is to take the tops fresh from the field and feed them into a silo, within a day or two after they are cut. The vital point is to see that the ensilage is well packed. In filling it is wise to use a three or four-inch layer of straw between the layers of tops. This straw may be put in each day, as the beets are topped. Salt on each layer adds to the quality, three pounds to the ton being used. The straw gets an added food value.

One acre of beet tops fed in this way, yielding four tons of ensilage, will furnish three steers twenty-five pounds of feed a day for 107 days, it is estimated, as the result of experiments made at Rocky Ford, Colo. It is estimated that one acre of beets will furnish 35 per cent. of the weight of the beets raised. A ten-ton crop will make about three and a half tons of ensilage. From four to six weeks are required to put the ensilage in the best condition.

Prof. F. M. Woll of the University Farm at Davis has stated his belief that the use of beet tops as ensilage is practical in every way. The American Sugar Company has this year conducted satisfactory experiments along this line at Oxnard.

MEETING POSTPONED.

A meeting of the California Cattlemens' Association, which was to have been held in Los Angeles October 31, was postponed to the call of the president. This meeting was one of five scheduled for five cities in the State between October 31 and November 4. There are 557 members, representing 297,000 head of cattle. L. A. Nares is president, and David J. Stollery secretary.

LISTING HEALTHY HERDS.

The adoption by breeders and livestock sanitarians of national reputation of regulations for accrediting pure-bred herds of cattle will, it is expected, greatly hasten the eradication of tuberculosis among meat animals. On July 1, the United States Department of Agriculture issued its first list of 240 herds officially accredited free from tuberculosis. The list also named herds that had passed one successful test. They must pass another test before being placed on the accredited list.

The San Fernando Valley, this year, produced, among other farm products, $250,000 worth of walnuts, 125 carloads of potatoes, and nearly $500,000 worth of dried apricots, prunes and pears.

The irrigation ditches are the trenches of the home front in California.

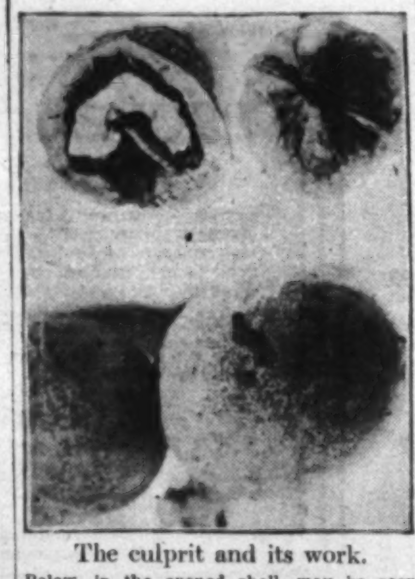
WALNUT MEN OF SECTION MAKE READY TO WAR ON WORM PEST.

WALNUT growers, aided by State and Federal entomologists, are in the midst of a campaign against the walnut codlin worm, or moth, which threatens to become the worst pest ever encountered in the history of the walnut industry in California. Until this year, when this worm injured tons of walnuts in many districts, it was practically unknown, except in Santa Barbara county, where for the last few seasons it made its appearance in a few groves. It has now spread over the entire Carpenteria district, affects 15 per cent. of the Orange county crop, and has been found near Venice, in Los Angeles county.

Ralph E. Smith, State University entomologist, has been secured by the California Walnut Growers' Association to lead the fight against the pest. He has established headquarters at Santa Ana, and has thoroughly organized the offensive.

Quarantine measures have been instituted against the infested districts. Growers in non-infested districts have been warned not to allow the entrance into their sections of nuts, shells or sacks from infested districts.

"While but 1 per cent. of the entire crop has been effected by the pest," said President C. Thorpe, of the growers' association," we are taking every precaution against the spread of this enemy of the industry and have given full publicity among growers regarding means for combatting the pest.



The culprit and its work.

Below, in the opened shell, may be seen the worm, or codlin moth that has caused the walnut growers so much trouble this year; above is a hull in which the new pest has found a lodging.

The walnut codlin worm or moth has the exact appearance and life habits of the ordinary codlin moth which affects deciduous fruits. It was found in France more than fifty years ago, and appeared in California, near Carpenteria, twelve years ago. Its effects on the crop were almost negligible until the last two or three years.

The walnut codlin moth lays its eggs just under the surface of the immature walnuts in the spring, and when the worm is about half grown it bores through the shell and feeds upon the meat. The worms begin to leave the nuts when they start to fall. The pests then seek hiding places in cracks of wooden structures and in the rough bark of the walnut trees, and spin a cocoon. In the spring the moth emerges from the cocoon and lays her eggs in the young walnuts, starting another generation.

Drying trays are favorite hiding places for the worms and cocoons. A great many have been found in the inside of sacks which have contained infested walnuts. Cracks in sheds and outbuildings near infested groves are used by the worms as hiding places.

Prof. Smith urges all growers to destroy cocoons about the groves and packing houses. Drying trays should be thoroughly brushed and then saturated with kerosene, which seems to effectually destroy life in the cocoons. Kerosene should be squirted into all crevices and cleats. Many growers will build smaller drying trays, which may be dipped into a kerosene emulsion, for use in next year's harvest, burning up their present trays. All suspected sacks should be boiled in water for ten minutes.

Boards of supervisors in several districts, including the Los Angeles county board, have appropriated sums to aid in fighting the enemy of an industry which is one of the most important and promising in the Southwest.

HOMECROFTING

IN CALIFORNIA

"Land without population is a wilderness—but population without adequate garden land is a mob, even if you do call it a city."

UNCLE MARSH.

AGAIN we have the show on the mountains. The night air is snappy and light frost have been recorded in the low spots The soil is losing its warmth and vegetable seed planted from now until February will have a struggle. Lettuce is the only line that will make satisfactory progress from seed at this time. The cold nights and the colder soil are excellent for the half-matured vegetables which were planted about September 1, except that pop corn and sugar corn planted on that late date are now about all in except for the fodder value. The pop corn which went into the ground on August 1 has safely made a crop, and we can register August 15, as about the last safe date for planting sugar corn for a certainty of result.

It is a good thing to see the snow on San Antonio peak off there to the northeast of us, because it means that when the heavy clouds come floating around from the ocean across this coastal plain of Southern California they will suddenly precipitate into rain when they come into contact with the cold snow peaks. Last year we did not get any snow on the back peaks until very late and we almost had no rain. We are not prophets but we expect better rains because the snow is here.

"Good-by Summer, good-bye. Good-by!"

With the first chill nights of autumn we have the sign for cutting the asparagus down close to the surface of the soil. Burn the rubbish, as it may be infected. Give the asparagus bed a good raking over, and a covering of about two to four inches of rotted manure if you can possibly get it. A few handsful of nitrate of soda applied in the spring or some common table salt, anyhow, will be beneficial just before you clean up the asparagus bed again.

If the asparagus is planted in a clay soil, a top dressing of river sand about three inches deep every spring will solve all your problems and make it easy for the asparagus to break through.

Once again, I ask you folks who have no asparagus, to tear out that border row of geraniums, or even that rose hedge and make a trench well manured for asparagus roots, which you may plant now or in January. Asparagus is a beautiful hedge; it is aristocratic and merits a place, when formally handled, as a border row along the property side line. In the spring time it will keep you busy eating the luscious sprout; passers by, if they notice the bed at all, will think hyacinths are springing up, and when the spring days have passed and the time of cutting is ended for the year, it will spread out in all the color glory and delicacy of foliage tracery of the asparagus fern.

I have an asparagus bed, now over ten year is not over two hours total. Yet with years old, upon which the total labor each that two hours of labor this bed keeps the family busy eating and canning asparagus all through the spring.

The labor cost of living in California is trifling.

Taking a living from the soil is but a pastime.

MANY PAY TRIBUTE TO TRACTOR MAN.

Many sorrowing friends of the late O. H. Stevens, former president of the Traction Engine and Implement Dealers' Association of Southern California, gathered at his funeral November 5, to pay tribute to the memory of the man who had played so big a part in the upbuilding of the tractor and implement industry in this section.

When the Los Angeles Health Board lifts the ban on meetings, the association of which Mr. Stevens was head will meet at the call of Vice-president H. L. Marsh Among the items scheduled for consideration is the election of a new president. It is believed by tractor men that Vice-president Marsh, because of his unusual grasp upon the affairs of the association, will be chosen.

ELABORATE SERVICE BY NEW AGENCY.

Smith Brothers, Nos. 1616-1624 South Figueroa street, Los Angeles, have taken the local agency for the Cleveland tractor. The firm will establish branches and service stations for the Cleveland throughout its territory, and hopes to be able to place experienced mechanics and desired parts at the disposal of owners within a short time after telephone calls are received, thus amply serving all purchasers.

Representatives of the company state the locations of dealers and service stations will be announced as determined upon.

THE TRACTOR AND THE FOOD SUPPLY.

America's magnificent response during 1918 to the call of democracy for an increased food production was largely due to the tractor, according to J. B. Bartholomew, president of the National Farm Equipment Manufacturers' Association.

In a report made at the annual convention of the association, President Bartholomew said in part:

"I estimate that not less than 1,000,000 extra plow bottoms and many other tillage implements have been at work in raising food in 1918, due to the energy of the tractors we have produced. Our surplus food which is now feeding the Allies and our armies are produced very largely as the result of the work of these tractors, and tractor-drawn machines.

"There is no escape from the fundamental proposition that American farm machinery is at the base of our commercial operations in the foodstuffs that supply a large part of the world.

"There is room for improvement in the methods of manufacturing, distributing, delivering and educating the public in this field. It is to be hoped that some sort of co-operation with some branch of the Federal government may help us to recognize the importance of this industry and put it on a basis commensurate with its importance."

A NEW THRESHER.

Four operations in the harvesting of beans are combined in one in a bean thresher evolved by a California manufacturer and handled by Streeter & Ridell of Van Nuys. Two of these combined harvester-threshers have been in operation in the San Fernando Valley and their work is being watched with interest by bean men. The only other implement aside from this harvester, it is said, is a bean cutter, which cuts the stalks and leaves them in rows. The harvester then scoops up the cut plants; they are fed into the thresher and the beans come out the other end in bags, which are dumped on the ground by the harvester. The bean straw is fed into a wagon accompanying the thresher.

Keep at least a few sheep on your farm to help clothe and feed the doughboys.

The Tractor's Big Part.

sweeping toward the grain they were harvesting. Once the fire entered the grain field there would be no stopping it, and a $100,000 crop would be lost. As quickly as possible the tractors were hitched to batteries of disc plows kept near by, and before the fire could reach the edge of the field wide paths of the growing grain had been plowed under and an effective firebreak created that saved the field. So rapid was the advance of the flames that, although it started a mile or more away, it reached the line just as the firebreak was finished. With horses it would have been impossible to have plowed up this path, for the plowing had to be deep enough to plow under the heavy grain and leave on the surface the moist soil that resisted the flames that licked so greedily along the end of the firebreak. That one fire might have cost the owner of the wheat field more than his tractor expense in a dozen years.

One tractor owner who has farmed for many years both with horses and machines, stated that he found that on his farm a tractor saves the equivalent of four men and fifteen horses, because one man with the tractor can do as much work as five men and fifteen horses.

THEY STAND THE HEAT.

In Arizona, the Goodyear Rubber Company is among those fostering the long-staple cotton industry, and in the work of clearing the virgin soil and preparing it for cotton, the tractor has been found invaluable. Fourteen of the largest types of caterpillar machines are in operation there, and are doing the work of hundreds of horses. The great heat of the Salt River Valley would be too great to secure full efficiency from horses, whereas the machines are immune from these exterior influences and chug along hour after hour doing their work with a regularity and thoroughness that goes far to making the cotton industry there a huge success. The use of these machines not only saves the labor of the hundreds of horses, but they require less supervision than would the animals. The tractors are operated almost constantly, at certain seasons of the year, and they have given universal satisfaction.

Unquestionably, the food programme of the United States for next year will depend very largely for results upon the fullest use being made of all kinds of modern farm machinery, principally tractors. Whenever these efficient power laborers have been used in the past they have helped very materially in producing maximum crops with minimum efforts, and they will do the same in the year to come. The tractor has been tried and found to be the true friend of the farmer, for it will help him when he needs help the most, will work on uncomplainingly under adverse conditions, and will ask nothing more than to be fed only when actually engaged in working.

BUILD THAT SHED.

Arrival of the season of showers in Southern California should be coincident with the erection of sheds or other protection for tractors and farm tools of all kinds. Steel is scarce. Makers of implements and farm power machinery are handicapped by an enforced cut in their output. Farm tools and tractors are valuable. Keep them from deteriorating by housing them. Build that shed today.

THE TRACTOR'S BIG PART IN NEXT YEAR'S PLANTING PLANS.

THE successful general or business man is the one who plans his campaign far in advance. The farmer who will be the most successful in growing bumper crops next year will be the one who plans his work now and takes the steps necessary to enable him to carry those plans into effect.

One of the essentials to be dealt with in looking ahead to the 1919 growing season is the matter of labor. Men were scarce this year and they will be less available next year even though the war has been brought to a successful conclusion. The farmer will, therefore, have to think out carefully his labor problem and solve it before he plants his seed in the spring unless he is willing to find his plans upset at a time when all his efforts are engaged in producing food for America and Europe. The more independent a farmer can be as regards human labor, the greater chance will he have of putting in and harvesting a maximum crop, and unquestionably the best means of attaining this independence is to utilize to the fullest extent the power of the tractor.

The modern tractor not only saves horse power but it saves man power. Horses require a great deal of supervision and direction, and one man will expend as much time and energy in guiding a fractious team of horses as he will in directing the operations of a powerful tractor, possessing the ability of from seven to seventy horses. In these times of labor stringency, it is this quality of the tractor of saving man power that is vital in food production.

GOOD PLOWING ESSENTIAL.

The first essential step necessary to be taken to insure good crops is that of plowing. The sooner land can be plowed to a good depth after the season's crops are harvested, the better the results to be obtained. Therefore, early fall plowing, before the winter rains set in, will put the land in splendid condition for the spring cultivation and sowing. The upturned soil is sweetened and aerated by the action of sunshine and rain, and where stubble and vegetation have been plowed under early, they are thoroughly rotted and disintegrated by spring and enrich the soil. In doing this early fall plowing the tractor is far superior to horses, because one man with the power machine can pull two, or three or more bottoms, plowing the soil to a greater depth in less time and with less effort than several men could do it with teams. This is not mere theory, but is amply borne out by the experience of thousands of tractor owners throughout the country.

One man and a team will plow about one and one-half acres to a depth of four to six inches in a day. That same man, operating one of the smaller types of tractors, can plow from seven to nine acres to a depth of eight or ten inches in a day. With larger machines, possessing powerful motors, many more acres can be plowed in a day. Here, at the very start of next season's work, the farmer is sure of saving a great deal of the time of himself or his men through the use of tractors instead of horses. The same saving of time will be apparent throughout the entire growing year, for there is practically no kind of large scale work performed by horses that cannot be done by tractors in less time and consequently at less cost.

PRACTICAL ILLUSTRATIONS.

An interesting experience of a large ranching company near Santa Paula will bear out the statement that tractors are more economical than horses. Careful records kept by this company showed that a medium-size track-laying tractor was operated a total of 178 days out of 365 days, at a cost of $1078 for operation, including upkeep and depreciation. During this period the tractor performed the same kind of work previously performed by horses and mules at a total cost of $2108.

Another rancher in Southern California had, for years, used thirty head of horses in raising barley on his ranch. He bought a forty-five horse-power tractor and sold off his horses. All of the work previously done by horses was performed by the power machine, and at the end of the first season he found that he had not only reduced his operating cost, got along with less men, and carried out his plans more systematically, but had increased his yield of barley from twelve to twenty-one sacks to the acre. This increase he attributed to the deeper and more thorough plowing accomplished with the tractor.

KEEP ON GOING.

One of the advantages of the tractor over horses that cannot be overestimated is the ability of the owner to continue field work continuously, night and day, when occasion requires. So long as fuel is supplied to the machine, and it is properly handled, a tractor can keep on working hour after hour, whereas horses become tired and require frequent rests, their continuous service being limited to a few hours. There are many times in the course of a year when climatic conditions are such that certain work must be pushed to completion with the utmost dispatch, and a farmer's ability to do this largely measures the difference between a good and a bad crop. Many tractors have more than paid for themselves in this respect.

A graphic example of this ability of a modern tractor to "pinch hit" for its owner is the experience of a San Joaquin Valley owner of a bonanza wheat ranch. A 1000-acre field of the golden grain had just reached maturity, and three crews were operating tractors at one side, engaged in harvesting the grain. The day was intensely hot, and everything was dry as tinder. A hot wind was blowing across the grain fields, and as the men worked they became aware that a fire had started in an adjoining field and was rapidly

THE NEW FORCE IN FARM ECONOMICS.

BY H. A. CRAFTS.

The farm tractor injects a new force into farm economics.

The potentiality of this force is still an unknown quantity.

Time alone will tell the tale of this new Titan.

But one thing we do know the farm tractor begins at the beginning, which is comforting and reassuring.

Soil treatment is the primal mission of the farm tractor.

Soil treatment under horse power, no matter how forceful and efficient, has never been a satisfactory accomplishment.

Sometimes cultural thoroughness under this old-time power has been accomplished at a sacrifice of horse power, if not of man power.

And in its most extreme efficiency it never reached that perfection which is possible under farm tractor operation.

To repeat—the farm tractor begins at the beginning; then it goes the limit in efficiency.

It prepares the seed bed, which is the Genesis of thorough farming.

In the first place it deepens the seed bed to any desired depth.

Then it pays especial attention to the tilth.

And thirdly it firms the seed-bed; or brings it to the degree of consistency that is calculated to bring about the best crop results.

And fourthly it plants the seed at just the right depth and spreads it in the most systematic manner.

But here arises a proposition secondary in importance only to the tractor itself—the devising and construction of farm implements, planned absolutely upon the tractor basis and principle.

The tractor farm implement must differ from the horse farm implement almost as much as the machine differs from the animal.

And California appears to be the pioneer in this new domain of mechanical development.

We find California today manufacturing the extra heavy four-gang tractor plow; heavy-duty three-gang tractor plow; gopher or drainage plow; cross-kill clod crusher; tractor chisel; the heavy cultivator; subsurface packer; cultivators, not only adapted to tractor use, but adapted to different kinds of crops, etc.

Here is the dawn of a new science—the providing of that class of new farm machinery insistently demanded by the advent of the farm tractor.

And here is one of the richest fields of invention and experimentation ever offered to the inventive genius of America.

It is the force that, taking the farm tractor as the initial point, is destined to rapidly revolutionize our whole agricultural industry, and to make the farming routine of the future a new and wonderful thing—something that will not only lift an enormous load from the shoulders of the farmer, but will confer upon mankind an inestimable boon in the shape of a vast, a sure, a varied and a cheap food supply.

THE VALUE OF THE FARM MOTOR TRUCK.

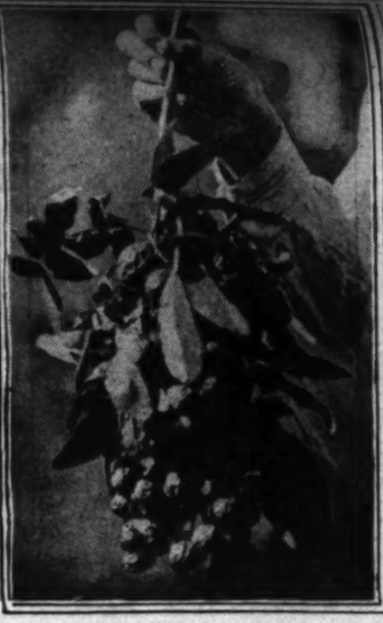
Reports by the United States Bureau of Crop Estimates show the low cost of hauling produce to and from the farm by truck and tractor as compared with the horse team. Studies were made covering many districts and averages struck.

Motor truck hauls during 1918 from farm to shipping point averaged 11.3 miles, while wagon hauls averaged nine miles. The motor truck made 3.4 round trips per day over its longer route of 11.3 miles, while wagons made 1.2 round trips per day over the nine-mile distance.

The estimated cost for hauling in wagons from shipping point averaged during the season of 1918, about 30 cents per ton per mile for wheat, 33 cents for corn, and 48 cents for cotton. For hauling in motor trucks or by tractors, the averages were 15 cents for wheat or corn, and 18 cents a ton-mile for cotton

---

The uses for which the tractor has proved itself adapted are constantly growing, and almost daily ingenious inventors are making new types and operators are putting them to new and unique uses.



Reversion to Type.

Peculiar cluster of small, hard nuts taken from Ventura county English walnut tree.

BAN REMOVED.

The live stock division of the California Food Administration has cancelled its ruling that bean straw and other edible fodder may not be used as a soil mulch or fertilizer. Abundant rains in the northern part of the State have greatly helped the cattle feed situation.

In a list of farm tools and machines wanted by the English government from American manufacturers, furnished by a London merchant, are included 80,000 plows, 75,000 harrows, 50,000 winnowing machines, 40,000 wagons and 20,000 cultivators.

ENGLISH WALNUT REVERTS TO TYPE.

A peculiar case of atavism has come to light in the production of an English walnut tree on the Ventura county ranch of Mrs. Messler of a full crop of currantlike clusters of small, hard nuts resembling the wild, black walnuts. This is a reversion to type dating farther back than the wild nuts of the present day, and is a freak for which it is difficult to account according to several horticulturists who have viewed the odd clusters.

One theory is that, by blooming out of season, the blossoms on this tree failed to get transpollinized. Whether this was the case, it would be difficult to determine, as no such peculiarity of blossoming was noted in the grove at the time of blooming.

The tree bearing this odd crop is six years old and bore its first nuts last season, these being in every way normal. The entire grove consists of English walnut buds grafted on black walnut roots, as is the usual custom. The odd, currant or grape-like clusters of nuts are some twelve to fifteen inches in length.

RULING PROTESTED.

A large number of tractor manufacturers of America met in Chicago on October 10 to discuss the recent ruling of the War Industries Board curtailing production 25 per cent. After lengthy discussion the position was taken that the smaller manufacturers did not receive adequate consideration and that if they are held down to the number of machines produced for the current year's trade it will automatically put them out of business. A committee was appointed to present this grievance at Washington.

DISCUSS STEEL OUTLOOK.

Southwestern tractor and farm tool dealers and manufacturers took much interest in the convention of the National Implement and Vehicle Association, held at Chicago, October 8-10. Manufacturers and retailers met at the convention on common ground for mutual benefit. The chief item discussed was the steel allotment programme.

Thrifty farmers are Uncle Sam's best aides.

We Could Stand a Lot of This Kind of Rivalry.

BY H. C. DAVIS.

HOGS in Hemet Valley seem to have joined enthusiastically in the keep-a-pig campaign, for they are producing the pigs at an inspiring and patriotic pace. On two adjoining ranches, in particular, the competition in pig production is especially interesting, involving as it does not only a patriotic speeding-up, but a friendly rivalry in breeds.

On the Charnock ranch, where Charles Tyler is manager for the owners, J. A. Freeman and T. S. Bell, the Duroc-Jersey is considered an easy winner, and on the Hollingsworth ranch next door, the Poland China retains all the votes. But, notwithstanding the divergence in detail, these neighboring stock farms are pulling shoulder to shoulder, as one might say, in the big drive for pork production.

On the Charnock ranch, the herd is headed by Cherry Friend, a son of Orion Cherry King and prize winner from the show ring at Omaha, now weighing some 900 pounds at less than three years of age. Here seventy-five sows, all of the purest of Duroc-Jersey breeding, are maintained, and about 700 hogs are being turned off yearly for pork. After several years of experience with this breed, Mr. Bell testifies with enthusiasm to the good points which have made for the rapid popularity of this "made-in-America" hog, of which little was known in California a decade ago. He believes that there is no other variety which can produce pork so rapidly or economically, or is so prolific. While the Duroc-Jersey is a fat or lard type animal, he finds that when fed with that end in view it produces a grade of pork in great demand.

A mixed ration of barley, kafir corn and alfalfa are fed on this ranch, most of which is raised on the place. Forty acres are in alfalfa and a considerable acreage in grain. Self feeders are supplied in the pens of the growing stock, while a wide cement paving running through a series of runways serves as a trough for the older stock. This paving, supplied with a gutter at the edge, can easily be flushed with water and so kept in a cleanly condition. Conveniences of many kinds for maintaining the health and rapid growth of the stock are furnished. A mechanical device in the form of a small, revolving oval about the size of a football serves as an oiler and disinfectant, and adds materially to the comfort of the animals and the healthful condition of their skin.

While not on so extensive a scale of production, the Hollingsworth ranch, where J. E. Hollingsworth is both proprietor and manager, is committed with equal enthusiasm to the cause of Hoover and the hog. During the past year Mr. Hollingsworth has turned off some 300 porkers and he now has about 250 hogs on his ranch. He is keeping all his young sows to increase his output.

A Poland China boar from the Anita Baldwin Herd, Nokio, a fine example of this standard breed, is the head of the herd here. And the standards of the breed are kept up also with pure bred sows that do credit to the well known excellence of the Poland China. Uniformity and quick growth could not be better illustrated, Mr. Hollingsworth feels sure, than by picking specimens at random from among the contented animals pastured on his alfalfa fields.

On this 400-acre ranch 200 acres are devoted to the growing of alfalfa for the further purpose of pork production. Besides the green alfalfa, fed "on the hoof," rations consist of hay and barley. The stock thrives on this food schedule and every fleeting moment is applied with zeal toward hastening the rapid increase of the nation's meat supply.

On the Charnock Ranch the Duroc-Jersey is considered "the" hog—

While on the Hollingsworth Ranch next door the Poland-China has all the votes.

An Imported Insect Pest That Will Bear Watching.

BY H. C. DAVIS.

THAT the control of the Argentine ant, which now occupies a large acreage in Southern California, will eventually be compulsory in the citrus groves, as are now such protective measures as spraying and fumigating, is the belief of experts who have made the eradication of this pest a study. For, while the Argentine ant threatens the peaceful pursuit of many other branches of agriculture, including truck gardening, poultry and rabbit raising and the honey industry, to say nothing of the beauty of parks and private grounds and the comfort of homes, perhaps its most serious menace to this locality is the protection of orchard pests such as mealy bugs, aphids and the soft brown scale.

Can type of Argentine ant trap for use on ground.

While the armored scales, of which there are several varieties that feed upon orange trees, are not directly protected by this ant, all insects which it can capture, excepting those supplying honeydew, are eaten and thus the enemies of the armored scales are largely eradicated. The honeydew is a sweet substance excreted by mealy bugs and other soft scales and is the favorite diet of the Argentine ant. For this reason the ants act as loyal protectors to the producers of the honeydew, surrounding them with safeguards provided with fairly uncanny intelligence, and preventing their insect enemies from even approaching them.

Paper sack trap for trees.

Aided and abetted in their nefarious plans of orchard destruction, the mealy bug and other pests of its kind fairly thrive in groves where the Argentine ant has once established its colonies. And though there are forty-five other varieties of ants in California, none of these resist the merciless advance of the Argentine ant, but promptly withdraw as soon as these enemy aliens invade their territory. Shortly after such an invasion, the captured locality begins to show the effects of the destructive occupation, and cases are on record in Louisiana where entire citrus groves have eventually been killed under the protectorate of these ruthless intruders.

The eradication of the Argentine ant, after it has once gained foothold in a new territory, is believed by entomologists to be an impossibility. "Many have expressed their conviction that this ant is here to stay no matter what may be done toward its destruction," says C. W. Woodworth, one of the foremost entomologists of the State, in a publication issued by the California Experiment Station. That the ant can be controlled even where well established and that its spreading to localities not already infested can be prevented is also believed by Mr. Woodworth.

THEY SPREAD SLOWLY.

In a number of ways the control of this insect presents a reasonably simple problem. Its spread, where not aided by human agencies, rarely exceeds more than an eighth of a mile a year. New colonies can only be established by the transportation of the queens, and these queens do not fly as is the case with several other varieties of ants. Large numbers of worker ants transported from one locality to another will sometimes live for months but will not constitute a danger to the locality as they will eventually die out without a queen to produce eggs.

Only the withdrawal of food supplies induces any extensive migration of colonies taking with them their queen and young. Therefore the only real danger of spreading is from colonies accidentally transported by human aid. Measures preventative of this danger, through strict quarantine regulations for regions already infested, should do much to check the increasing menace of this pest, it is thought by experts.

That the shipping of ornamental shrubbery has had much to do with the introduction of the Argentine ant into America and also into Southern California is a fact well established. Nursery stock moved even short distances in the same district is thought to have had serious results in the spread of this insect. The hauling of manure from an infested spot to be spread on lawns and orchards has also proved an active agency for the increased spread of the pest. Vegetables have often offered shelter to colonies perhaps disturbed in their homes by digging, as in a potato field, or driven out by irrigation. Any form of household goods or foodstuffs might be used as a temporary refuge in such cases and later afford an unwitting means of transportation.

In addition to the quarantine measures which would obviate such transportation, the control of the ants in infested spots, both to prevent their spread through natural growth and the curb their destructive protection of orchard pests, is a necessary step, according to those who have made a study of the question. Methods to this end have been most extensively elaborated in Louisiana, where the fight against this insect has been carried on for a number of years past, following much serious agricultural loss and damage to property values.

In Southern California, where the Argentine ant has increased alarmingly during the past ten years, successful experiments in control have been carried on during the past few seasons by several scientists. At the government entomological laboratory at No. 830 Curtis street, Alhambra, where citrus insect pests for this section are a special study, R. S. Woglum, in charge of this work, has made the Argentine ant the subject of much investigation.

EXPERIMENTS IN CONTROL.

Under the direction of Mr. Woglum, L. R. Alderman, for five years with the Horticultural Commission in Los Angeles county, undertook an experiment less than two years ago on an eleven-acre orchard at Alhambra belonging to W. G. Benedict. Mr. Benedict had the year before spent $700 on the control of the mealy bug in this badly infested grove. Spraying and washing proved of so little avail that at the end of the season the fruit had to be washed before it could be marketed.

At the end of the 1917 season, after having spent only $80 on the system of ant control inaugurated by Mr. Alderman, Mr. Benedict testifies that he was free both from Argentine ants, with which his grove had been thickly infested, and from the mealy bug. Numbers of similar cases are cited by Mr. Alderman, who has recently taken over the task of Argentine ant control in the city parks of Pasadena.

The methods used in these instances differ from those adopted in the majority of cases in Louisiana. There the direct measures taken are planned for the destruction of colonies by the use of traps in which the ants are induced to make their nests. The ants will seek the shelter of these artificial nests to avoid rain and can thus be conveniently killed by fumigation.

In the dryer climate of Southern California, however, the most effective system seems to be poisoning. The theory is to avoid the immediate killing of the adults, but to make the poison attractive to them so that it will be carried home and fed to the young, thus preventing the growth of the colonies. The secret of success seems to be patient persistence and correct judgment in adjusting the strength of the poison, the government formula for which was printed in the Farm and Tractor some months ago.

Putting out poison traps for Argentine ants in Busch gardens, Pasadena.

The plan as followed by Mr. Alderman includes frequent inspection of the poison baited traps which are set at close intervals along the borders of a tract under treatment, and at advantageous points through the grounds. Simple traps of paper sacks are used for tree trunks and shrubbery, the insects gaining access to the poison through small perforations. This method lends itself to home treatment and should prove successful if followed with persistence, the greatest drawback being the natural inclination to slacken vigilance when the pest begins to disappear, thus giving the ant colonies opportunities to rebuild to their former strength.

Citrus orchardist placing ant traps in grapefruit tree.

By way of identification of the Argentine ant, several simple tests will point out their presence. This variety is a very small, black ant, and wherever found is practically the only kind to be found in its neighborhood. Its runs are in single file and disappear inconspicuously between bricks, in cracks of cement or other obscure entries to the underground passages. There is never a pile of debris surrounding the entrance to the home as with several other varieties, and the colonies are practically impossible to locate from the surface of the ground. The fact that the Argentine ant is the only species to be found in California which has no odor when crushed furnishes another simple test for its identification.

By ROBERT W. HODGSON, Instructor of Citriculture, University of California.

FRUITS and nuts indigenous to the tropics and to foreign countries are now, as never before, attracting the attention of the people of the United States. One has but to consider the intense interest now being exhibited in the avocado to realize that the last few years have seen a marked increase in interest on the part of the American public as to fruits once little known and appreciated in this country. The last two decades have witnessed the culture of a number of such fruits reach economic importance in the United States, among which are the avocado, the Japanese persimmon, the pomegranate, the loquat, the feijoa, guava and the roselle. The roselle is, however, hardly as well known as most of the fruits mentioned although it is by no means less deserving of attention.

While many of the more recently introduced fruits, such as the avocado, guava, and feijoa are of American origin, the roselle is native to the Old World, where it has been grown and appreciated for many years. A strictly tropical plant, it is very sensitive to frosts and therefore its culture is at present limited to tropical and subtropical regions, being confined in the United States to Florida and California. Since its merits have been realized by the English speaking peoples, it has enjoyed its greatest extension in Australia, in parts of which it is now grown to a considerable degree. In Queensland, the culture of the roselle in recent years has assumed considerable proportions, the fruit being used largely for the manufacture of jams and jellies for export. The uses of the roselle are so many and varied, constituting as it does a most valuable addition to our list of jelly and jam fruits, that this fruit deserves a wider cultivation than it now enjoys. The roselle is particularly adapted to the home garden, as its culture is so simple and its requirements so few. In regions adapted to growing this fruit it should be found in every garden.

Belonging to the Mallow family, the roselle is a close relative to a number of our common and important plants, among which are the fiber producing plants cotton, Malva, Althea and Tree mallow or Lavatera. Among the vegetables it is related to okra, while some ornamental relatives are the abutilons and Hibiscus.

The habit of growth of the roselle is much like that of the cotton plant, the stems, however, being reddish and branching much more profusely. The plant reaches a height of six to eight feet and bears beautiful large yellow flowers, each with a dark red eye. The plant itself is quite ornamental and aside from its useful qualities constitutes a valuable addition to our list of ornamental plants.

The flowers open during the night, and close during the forenoon, so that much of the beauty of the plant is not evident after 10 o'clock in the morning. The roselle constitutes one of the few cultivated plants in which the part used for food represents a portion of the flower which is in this case the calyx. The development of the calyx is very rapid, within three weeks after the opening of the flower attaining its maximum size, at which time it should be picked. If left to nature, the "fruit," if we may so call it, loses much of the properties which make it valuable. In addition, if allowed to mature, the yield of the plant is very materially reduced since in the axil of each leaf there are several latent flower buds which develop only if the first crop of flowers is removed. By picking the calyces from the plant as fast as they reach the proper stage, the yield of the plant is greatly increased.

IS AN ANNUAL.

The plant is an annual and must be planted each year. Since it is very susceptible to frost, it should not be planted until all danger from frost is past, which usually means about the first of April in Southern California. In Florida the seeds are commonly sown in a seed bed and it is transplanted to the field when six to eight inches in height. In California, however, better results seem to be obtained by planting directly in the field, some five or six seeds being placed to a hill and later thinned out to one plant.

The plants are usually spaced from six to ten feet apart each way, depending upon the character and fertility of the soil. The roselle demands no special type of soil but will thrive on any soil that is moderately well supplied with plant food. It apparently does best, however, on a rich sandy loam. The use of large amounts of barnyard manure is not to be advised since in some cases it apparently stimulates the plant to vegetative growth at the expense of fruiting.

Picking roselle. Each flower is cut from the bush with a sharp knife.

Ready for market. The roselle retails readily at from 10 to 15 cents a pound.

For best results, the plants require a large amount of sunshine available on all sides, which makes planting in crowded rows unsatisfactory. The aim should be to have the plants spaced so that when full sized there is still a slight distance between them.

Planted early in April, if weather conditions are normal, in California, one may expect to begin harvesting the calyces in late August and the season is in full swing during September and October and the plants continue to bear until killed by frost. This is in marked contrast with Florida conditions, where the plant is reported as never bearing earlier than October although it there continues bearing on through the winter months.

YIELDS AND RETURNS.

There is considerable variation in the seasonal yield per plant, some running as low as two pounds while others will produce twelve or fifteen pounds of the calyces during a season. However, an average yield of five or six pounds may be counted upon under ordinary conditions. Planted eight feet on the square, there are 680 plants to the acre which, averaging five pounds to the plant, would give a total yield of 3400 pounds. At 5 cents a pound, this would give a gross return of $170 per acre. The labor cost of harvesting is high, running several cents a pound, but from the figures given it is easy to see that while the net returns are not high, there is still good money to be made in growing the roselle. Of course, at the present time, the market demand is not large and the business might easily be overdone. Nevertheless, as the product becomes better known and consequently the market demand greater, it is the writer's belief that the commercial culture of the roselle as a jelly and jam fruit is bound to increase and on a sound economic basis.

For many years the roselle has been grown in India for its fiber, which is largely used in the manufacture of cordage and coarser textile products. Although the strains grown for fiber purposes do not yield high in calyces, it would seem that with the improved strains grown for jelly and jam purposes the fiber might prove to be a valuable by-product.

SEED SELECTION.

The great variation in size of the calyces and in yield of individual plants furnishes favorable opportunity for increasing both these qualities by the proper selection of seed. If the average yield could be doubled, which seems possible, much greater profits could be made. Individual plants which produce large numbers of well formed calyces should be marked for seed selection. The pods for such purposes are left on the plants until the seed pods turn yellow and show signs of splitting at the apical end. They are then picked and dried in the sun and the seed threshed out and stored in a dry place.

The calyces as well as the tender shoots of the roselle contain high percentages of pectin and acid which renders them especially suitable for jelly making and preserving in various forms. Moreover, the calyces contain a beautiful red coloring matter which makes the product pleasing in appearance. In Queensland, quite an industry has developed in the making of roselle jam and jelly for export. There is no reason why a similar industry should not develop in California.

In composition, the roselle is almost identical with the cranberry. Indeed, it furnishes a most excellent substitute for the cranberry and this quality alone should make it popular with the American people. It can be used in the making of pickles, sauces, jams, jellies and in many other ways which will occur to the housewife.

In preparing for cooking the stem and basal end of the pod are cut off at the point of junction of the calyx and seed pod. A slight pressure forces the seed pod out of the apical end of the calyx. The calyx alone is ordinarily used since it contains the color, but the seed pod also contains large amounts of pectin.

There are very few pests attacking the roselle, about the only one of importance being the ordinary garden nematode which attacks the roots. No satisfactory remedy for this pest on any crop has been found and infested land should not be planted to the roselle.

Among the most enthusiastic roselle growers in Southern California are Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Rosell of Arcadia. Coming to California some years ago, they heard of a new crop called the roselle, adapted to California. It sounded good to them and since that time they have been ardent students of roselle culture. Moreover, they have been singularly successful in growing the roselle and have produced a markedly superior product.

When you are downtown ask your market man for a few pounds of roselles and try a little jelly. You'll like it and come back for more.

An Imported Insect Pest That Will Bear Watching.

BY H. C. DAVIS.

THAT the control of the Argentine ant, which now occupies a large acreage in Southern California, will eventually be compulsory in the citrus groves, as are now such protective measures as spraying and fumigating, is the belief of experts who have made the eradicating of this pest a study. For, while the Argentine ant threatens the peaceful pursuit of many other branches of agriculture, including truck gardening, poultry and rabbit raising and the honey industry, to say nothing of the beauty of parks their conviction that this ant is here to stay no matter what may be done toward its destruction," says C. W. Woodworth, one of the foremost entomologists of the State, in a publication issued by the California Experiment Station. That the ant can be controlled even where well established and that its spreading to localities not already infested can be prevented is also believed by Mr. Woodworth.

THEY SPREAD SLOWLY.

In a number of ways the control of this insect presents a reasonably simple problem. Its spread, where not aided by human Titled Americans.

BY THE term "titled Americans" we have no reference whatever to the one American man who voluntarily expatriated himself and became a British peer, nor do we refer to those many American women who married what are called "noblemen" in foreign lands, thus becoming "baronesses," "duchesses," "countesses" and the like of that.

We have titles of our own to confer, and we do not have to go abroad to acquire handles to our names.

For, be it known, that whereas in foreign lands a man may be saluted as "my lord," we can and do offset it here by saluting a man as "doctor;" and for the other titles that they use in those "furrin parts" we have no end of "colonels," "professors," "judges," and other high-sounding appellations, world without end.

He is, indeed, a poor man among us who cannot hang his hat on one or another of these pegs before he ends his earthly career and lies down with dusty death to join that great caravan which journeys to the bourne from which no traveler returns, or words to that effect.

We speak now only of those titles which we confer so blithely and with so free and generous a hand on our neighbors and fellow citizens in the broad light of the open day.

And, large and ample as this list is, think of the additional and almost endless list upon which we may fall back in a pinch if we desire to peep through the keyholes of the secret doors of our fraternal organizations.

Come we then upon titles of such majestic mien, and of such sonorosity, so to speak, and in such array as to make available an endless supply from which to chose, that the blue books of the effete monarchies of Europe would hide their heads in shame if they had any shame in them.

If any American will stop to consider the magnificence of the titles conferred on the officers of just the lodge to which he belongs, not to mention at all the storehouses of the rituals of other lodges in this respect, he will not envy the monarchical institutions of Europe one bit.

It is a real delight to anyone who loves the music of sound to stand on any street corner in the land and hearken to our people greet one another as they pass.

In any given hour of a given day in any town you have a mind to select in this broad land, provided it be a town of considerable population, we will wager that you will see wending before you in the procession no less than a dozen colonels, fourteen judges, and as many as fifty or sixty doctors.

The doctors head the list. We seem to have made that particular title what might be called a generic term.

The way it is now with us, we call all ministers of the Gospel doctors. And, of course, all physicians and dentists are called doctors. In like manner, also, every druggist is saluted as "Doc," at least, which is merely a friendly and affectionate abbrevation of the full title. Then there are the horse doctors, the chiropodists, the masseurs and the school teachers—all "doctors."

And, next on the list, numerically, undoubtedly come the "professors," which title includes barbers and dancing masters.

Let old, moss-backed Europe go chase itself. We can jingle more titles in her face in one day than she can scare up in a month of Sundays. In this respect, as in so many others, we have the other side of the world hanging over the ropes and gasping for breath.

Self Determination.

THE great and vital principle of the right of peoples to determine for themselves their own forms of government, now so much insisted upon in world politics, reminds us of the happy progress that has been made in the doctrine of the right of individuals to determine for themselves in what manner they shall live their lives.

We refer more specifically to the right of an individual to choose the work he shall do in life. You know, it was formerly the case that when a boy started out upon his career it was a career that had been chosen for him by others. He was to follow a profession, a trade, a craft, a business or an art that his parents or guardians or some one other than himself desired he should follow, whether the individual himself was disposed in that direction or not.

Now, a boy or a girl is consulted as to what he or she would like best to do. In other words, the individual is encouraged to follow his bent. And this is far the better way. It means that we shall have better service, because everyone is doing the thing that most appeals to him.

The Farmerette.

REPORTS from all sources seem to indicate that the farmerette has made good. This winter's most popular style of girl will sport a deep brown complexion, walk with a stride and shake hands with you like a prize fighter. Next spring and summer there will be a greater demand for her than ever, and we wouldn't be surprised to find hundreds of farmerettes marrying young men who own ranches.

THE FLAG.

What song is the old flag singing,
As it ripples upon the breeze?
Its voice is in far lands ringing,
And its splendor is on the seas;
The light of its folds is falling
From the sweep of its own fair skies
In the gloom where the weak are calling,
With hope in their lifted eyes.

Wherever its stars of glory
And its bars of crimson glow,
They gleam with the deathless story
The world has thrilled to know;
Wherever the highways lengthen,
And the feet of free men fare,
The soul of the flag will strengthen
The hearts that battle there.

JOHN S. M'GROARTY.

The Big Show.

THE "big show" is not the circus that comes to town, or the spectacles put upon the mimic stage by the cunning genius of men, or eke the great wars.

The big show is God's world in which we live and have our being and at which we have ceased to marvel because its sights and wonders are familiar to us since the time we were born.

And yet, what show can possibly equal in beauty, in majesty, in its never ending changes and surprises, that which is set in the heavens with the earth as a stage.

It is like a great play constructed to the which he was led to pronounce from his rule that old Aristotle enunciated and studies of nature.

Aristotle laid it down as a rule that the play must have "a beginning, a middle and an end." Wherefore, a play naturally divides itself into three acts. And that's the way with the play that God has staged in His heavens for the past millions of years—the oldest play in existence and the one play that never grows old.

Its three acts are Morning, Noon and Night. The sky is its cyclorama, the hills and the mountains are its "sets," the clouds are its "borders" and we are the audience.

The best seats for this big show are doubtless to be had in California. It is here in the "Land o' Heart's Desire" that the play is seen at its best. Go where you will to all the lands that are laved by the waters of the seven seas, and you shall behold no sunrise like the sunrise on Shasta, no sunset like sunset on the Malibus, no drowsy dream to equal the noon that wraps a mission valley in its hazy peace.

How can the heart of man ever be grateful enough to the good God who made us and gave us California in which to live?

Safety of the Seas.

ONE of the ancient sources of trouble, namely, the freedom of the seas, is doubtless due for permanent settlement on a satisfactory basis at the end of this war.

In addition to this, we are also doubtless due to witness the seas made safe for the voyager in times of peace—that is to say, the specter of accident and disaster at sea is likely to be laid, owing to the progress that man has made in the building of ships and in the science of navigation.

This is, indeed, "a consummation devoutly to be wished." The seas are vast graveyards. Countless are the dead who sleep beneath the mighty billows of the great waters.

If now with ships as safe to dwell in as a house is upon land, and with navigation perfected to a science exact and invulnerable to danger the seas shall also be free to all to come and go upon them wheresoever they desire, then travel by water is bound to witness a tremendous increase.

When one thinks of the caravels of Columbus and the crudely constructed galleons in which Cabrillo achieved the discovery of California, and the ships in which Magellan and Marco Polo sailed in the circumnavigation of the globe, it is a far cry from all that to the miracle ships that sail the seas today.

It is a far cry from thta ancient Phoenician who straddled a log and hung up his deer skin shirt to dry, thus discovering what a sail would do in the wind, and it is a dim vista from that primordial sailing log to the ocean leviathans of today.

A Paradox.

IT SEEMS like giving utterance to a paradox to say that we can make lighter our burdens by adding to them. Still, this is sometimes the fact. You would be surprised to know how much less you will think of your troubles if you will try to help your neighbor out with his.

The philosophy is similar to that of the tax collector who collected from a man for a dog. The man did not own a dog and accordingly made a protest. "Gee, Bill," said the tax collector, "I don't see how you can beat the game unless you go and get yourself two dogs."

A Suggestion.

IN OUR humble capacity as one of the countless millions of the world's arbiters, we beg to be allowed to make a suggestion.

It is reference to the construction of the "peace table" which is soon to be set up. Our suggestion, however, does not apply to the personnel of the council which is destined to sit at the table, but it is in reference to the table iself.

Usually a table which is to bear the weight of problems so momentous, and which is to be honored by the presence of men of the greatest distinction and ability, should be made of costly wood, or even of gold.

But our suggestion is that it be made of materials even more precious than any kind of wood or metal could possibly be.

We suggest that this peace table be made of dead men's bones, that it be lacquered with the blood of the martyrs and that it be burnished with the tears of widows and orphans.

If the plenipotentiaries, the envoys extraordinary, the ministers of state and the generals shall sit at a table like this, the peace that they shall then sign will last until the end of time.

The trouble has always been that when a war ended its sufferings were forgotten. The dead do not sit at peace tables; widows and orphans, the wounded and the maimed, are never invited to take part in the discussions.

And yet, it is these, above all others, who should be consulted—these who have been made the victims of war and who cannot hope to be its beneficiaries.

Pray God, O brethren, that there shall be no more wars to curse and blacken the face of the fair world. Pray God that at this peace table there shall be said and done that which shall put an end forever to human slaughter at the hands of human beings.

Great Lives.

WE MAKE bold to say that there is a general misconception in the minds of people throughout the world as to what really constitutes a great life.

Unless a man or a woman has been in the public view with whatever service was rendered, unless his or her picture has been in newspapers and books, unless, in short, they have "made a noise," we do not consider that the lives they led were great lives.

This is not only a harmful misconception; it is a mistake and its consequences are, from a moral point of view, extremely vicious.

Suppose you are walking in the fields or in the forests and you come across a strange kind of bug or insect. You are curious to know what it is. Well, you can secure a book in almost any public library that will tell you just what you want to know. That book was written and compiled by some man who did nothing his whole life long but study bugs, cataloguing them, learning their tribe and origin and the habits of their existence.

Other men have spent their lives in equally humble capacities, but adding always to the world's sum of knowledge. The drug that soothes your pain, the spectacles by which you renew your worn-out eyes, the fire you cook with and that warms you—these and millions other of your blessings and delights were wormed out of nature's secret storehouses for you by patient students whose names you do not know.

These are the great lives. These are the lives that have blessed the lives of all who followed after them. And the men and women who led such lives were great people though they went down to their graves unhonored and unsung.

Brave Men.

SOMEONE one time said something like this: "He was a brave man who first ate an oyster."

He was, in sooth. And also he was a brave man who first wore side whiskers, as was the first man to stick a mustard plaster on himself, and the first man to talk back to his mother-in-law, the first man to chew on a pickled green olive, the first to take a bath, and so on, ad infinitum.

It is a heartening thing to know that the world has never been without brave men, and that it is never likely to be without them. Cowards have always been in the minority and always will amble along in that classification. All of which is as it should be.

side, was performing vain oblations and ablutions—prostrating, bathing her face and repeating the ritual aloud—before the Shinto shrine.

Miss Wirt pulled herself stiffly to her feet. "What your wife mean?" she asked in her school-mistress voice.

Iris Bud straightened her bent back, and her face dripping with water, answered, eloquently no doubt, but it was in Japanese.

"What she say? What excuse she make?" Miss Wirt was still the indignant instructor.

Nakamoto, with very small embarrassment considering what he had to say, said: "She not say excuse. She say, 'Honorabrr rady git out—no rike!' She say, 'Your God no good; George git worser o-rr time. Go home, honorabrr gar-rs!'"

"You are not telling us to go home?" cried Miss Wirt wildly.

"I are te-rring you—go home," pursued Nakamoto calmly also callously. "My muzzer come Japan we-ry soonly. I reave. Honorabrr gar-rs, say goo'-by, now."

And the "honorable girls" did say good-by! Miss Wirt was bitter. "That thick resinous smoke would kill a well baby. . . . I don't suppose the little fellow will last an hour. Oh, what misguided people! Do you think I ought to insist on. . . ." She stopped on the stair of St. Jude's and looked hopefully at her co-laborer.

The co-laborer was discouraging. "You don't wish to be forcibly ejected, do you? I am sure I saw kick in Iris Bud's eye for all her politeness."

Next morning Nakamoto came up for a sort of Nunc Dimittis to the dishes. To inquiries he said: "George, after radies say goo'-bys, he throw up his sick. Now his sick o-rr right."

And George was all right. The doctor when appealed to said the smoke might have been from some gum that . . . er . . . it was just what was needed . . . er . . . some kind of medicinal gum or other. . .

A week later, as the two "workers" sat in the cool of the evening on the lanai watching the panorama of the clouds rolling over Manoa Valley, Miss Deal broke the heavy silence.

"He's very cocky," she mourned, "and so lofty and scornful when I approached him about the dishes. It was disgusting! Such a name, too! Hashichi Shimamura! Did you ever hear such a mouthful? Fancy, yelling that out the window a million times a day. He may be as capable as he claims—he looks capable of anything—but he can never take Nakamoto's place with me!"

"I miss George. . . . Poor little soul! He'll probably grow up a heathen." Miss Wirt looked plaintive.

Miss Deal gazed at her polished nails—like pink onyx.

"Frankly, with me, it's Nakamoto's efficiency with the dishes. Don't you think," she said, maybe a bit maliciously, "we could have prayers in chapel Sunday night for their return?"

"A worker in the field! You ought not joke or speak lightly of . . ." Miss Wirt began.

The vain one did not heed. "I've been here longer, I know, than you; but you're so enterprising that you've probably been in every little junk shop, Japanese or Chinese, in town. Do you happen to know where we could get some of that incense they burn to Shinto? Oh, no he's the Idea—the Abstraction. It's Buddha—Buddha they burn the incense to. Do you know where I could get the real stuff?"

The other missionary was silent, and the silence seemed reproving, although it might not have been.

And Miss Deal to square herself with some unspoken thoughts which seemed to be affecting the general atmosphere, said slowly:

"Well, George says—my George, that an open mind is a valuable possession and er—well, you might as well know—Nakamoto will come back if he can be assured of little George's safety—and anyway it would be a good thing to have some of that medicinal gum on hand here at St. Jude's. Wouldn't it?"

Miss Wirt rose briskly to her feet. "There's a curious cubby-hole of a place away down on Nuuanu street; they have idols and gongs and incense pots. . . . I suppose we could find what we want. If we hurry we can get back in time for night school."

German Kings Who Hate Kaiser.

renowned for its brilliancy, while its rulers occupied a front rank among the monarchs of Europe, whereas the wane of Saxony's grandeur dated from the time when French influences were superseded by those of Prussia, which has always been bent on reducing Saxony to the rank of a mere vassal state, sapping its independence.

King Frederick Augustus is the only monarch in Europe now living to be afflicted with that strange malady to which the French have given the name of "petit mal," in order to distinquish it from the "grand mal," or epilepsy. The Scotch graphically describe the "petit mal" as "dwalms," and it takes the form of a sudden mental stupor, and of irresistible somnolence. The King, although otherwise in perfect health, is in the habit of suddenly falling fast asleep at state banquets in honor of foreign sovereigns, at councils of his ministers, at great court functions, and even when on horseback at military reviews. In fact, his somewhat frequent tumbles from his charger on occasions of this kind have been very unkindly ascribed, especially at Berlin, to intoxication, whereas they have really been due to mental stupor, resulting from an invincible desire to sleep.

Sometimes when receiving a foreign envoy in audience, he will be discovered in the act of gently slumbering on the throne, while at other moments, when speaking, he will suddenly stop in the middle of a sentence, without any apparent rhyme or reason, remain apparently dazed for a few minutes, and then either turn away, or else will start talking about something entirely different, without apparently remembering the former subject of conversation.

His grandfather, King John, suffered from the same malady. Moreover, he developed in the closing years of his life a form of mania with homicidal features. After the old monarch had made himself so offensive to ladies of the foreign legations that they left Dresden at a few hours notice; and after he had run through one of his attendants with his sword, and had assured his sons, Albert and George, in the most solemn manner that he was already dead, and that it was the very highest time that his remains should be laid at rest; after, moreover, the doctors had decided that he was incurably and hopelessly demented, he was officially proclaimed dead, and as having been killed by a fall from horseback while riding in the mountains.

Another body was buried in his stead. Contrary to custom he did not lie in state. No one, not even Queen Carola, his consort, was allowed to see the corpse—supposed to be his—and it is no secret that he survived his official death for a number of years, strictly confined in the mountain monastery of L—.

King Frederick, while not an attractive character, has behaved with boundless patience and forbearance with his former wife, whom he was compelled by his father, the late King George, to divorce, in consequence of her elopement with her children's Belgian tutor, Prof. Giron. But as divorce is not recognized by the Catholic church, to which King Frederick Augustus belongs, he still considers himself her husband—this too in spite of her subsequent marriage and divorce, with an Italian pianist of the name of Toselli. Although the ex-Crown Princess, who belongs to the Tuscany line of the imperial house of Austria, has treated him in the most abominable fashion, and has given her name to a book of "Reminiscences" ridiculing him, as well as all the members of his family, he still continues to pay her an annuity sufficient to keep her from want.

LETTERS FROM CAPT. AL WADDELL.

TIMES BOY AT THE FRONT.

THIS morning I went to church, at a little chapel. The place was filled with American soldiers and the few people of the village. I am now in a little village six miles out of quite a large city. The city is very old and has many historic places.

Two miles out most of our outfit is billeted in a rather large village; four miles beyond, my battery is located, and a mile out from us are the colonel and his staff in a wonderful old chateau. Their place reminds me very much of Mills College grounds and buildings.

I am quartered with an old family in the finest mansion in the town, a quiet and quaint old place. There is a wall bearing 1432, and the last building in the place is marked 1896. There is an old wall around the village and the old houses are just like the pictures you have seen of French villages out in the country.

Where I live there is a garden wall running around a wonderful garden, and about 100 yards down this garden is an old mill stream, a beautiful, bubbling, dashing brook, and sure enough, in the corner of the old garden is the old mill of the village. Every night as I hear the water singing the sad song hurrying over the little waterfalls I think of my little daughter Billie and the song "Down by The Old Mill Stream."

The old people where I live cannot do enough for me and the people of the village treat me like a king. The old men take off their hats and the ladies bow and the kiddies give a military salute. There are no young men, they have all gone to war, and the young women are either nurses or working some place. I am very careful to treat the people with great courtesy, as they deserve to be so treated, and my men carry water from the creek for the old women, help the old men chop wood, sweep the streets, mend furniture, and do any and every favor they can when off duty. Our boys even divide their tobacco with the old men. As a result they think the American soldiers wonderful. In return the French people do many favors for us.

The French children are the dearest little tots in the world, not at all fresh. They love the Americans, and are happiest when some big soldier is teaching them English words, and in return they are teaching the soldier. My best instructor is a little girl about 5½ years old. She is as pretty as a picture, with her large brown eyes with long lashes and wonderful curly hair. She walks around holding my hand, and when I point to something she tells me what it is in French and then I tell her what it is in our language.

I am no longer in the quiet little village with the mill stream running at my back garden wall. I must not tell you where I am, nor must I tell you about my trip. How long we were on the train and how far we traveled in any direction cannot be told here. But we arrived all together and as happy and as well as ever, and we are still in France.

I have been very fortunate in that I have seen a great deal of France in the short time I have been here. Of course you know it is often necessary to travel about in the service, and I have done my share.

Where we are now is a beautiful place. I am billeted in a wonderful chateau owned by Count —. He has two unmarried daughters, very beautiful, but they are away at school some place.

The house is a great old mansion—I wish you could see it. There is a great stable with room for 200 horses and their feed for many moons; there is the cutest little chapel right near my room; stone bungalows all over the grounds for the caretaker, gamekeepers, gardeners and horsemen. The main servants' quarters adjoin the mansion. Of course there are few servants here now, just enough to care for the place. The count is in the government service, I understand; we have not seen him, but he sent his welcome to us. Our men are all very happy here.

Today as I sat in the very chairs in which many of France's great men and women have sat, on the great veranda of the old chateau—after a hard four hours' drill—listening to the roar of artillery, I found it hard to believe myself awake. It was like a strange dream.

My room is finished in old French tapestry. The color is pink, the furniture is upholstered in pink chintz. There is a rich pink canopy over my bed and wonderful pink curtains which frame the cross of the little chapel steeple as I look from my bed. Just over my bed, as in every room is a Crucifix. On the old walnut table which matches the bed, dresser, chairs and clothes cabinet, are two ancient brass candlesticks. There are two cut glass candlesticks to match some other little ornaments, like soap dish, pin tray, ash tray, etc. The old elegance of the room would do well for Napoleon's time.

There are other rooms in green, blue and tan, and the same high bed with deep mattresses in each. Capt. Orlando's place told about by Pug had nothing over us. In the bathroom there are two tubs, both are copper with enamel inside. One is the biggest I ever saw and the other is smaller than any I ever saw. Must be that the small one is a single tub and the other is for two when in a hurry. The thing looks big enough for a dozen, compared to ours at home.

The wall is tiled up ten feet and the floor is of stone. Of course I like that, as I can splash all I want to over the place and do no damage. There is a shower over the big tub. The pipes, faucets and valves are all of polished brass and the sides of the wall looks like the inside of the engine room on the ferryboat.

The kitchen has a large stove of stone, with little places covered with cross irons like a toaster. That covers one side of the kitchen. There is a huge fireplace with machinery for cooking before it, on the other side, and on the third is a small fireplace with a collection of pots for cooking coffee, soups and the like.

The utensils are all heavy bronze kettles or stone crocks. The spoons are very heavy and the knives are murderous-looking tools.

The kitchen table is of stone with heavy wooden top. There is a serving room with a big stone table for cutting meats and preparing the dishes for the table. There are two sets of chinaware and two of silverware, one heavy and the other very delicate.

A den is filled with old guns, stuffed game, rugs, duelling pistols and deep cushioned chairs.

The dining-room is rich in its old time elegance. A great lamp hangs over the most wonderful hardwood table I ever saw. There are glass cases, and side tables covered with wonderful china and cut glass. There is a breakfast-room adjoining on one side and a smoking-room on the other; both are richly and appropriately furnished. From the smoking-room opens the clubroom, where there is an old French billiard table as well as a table for cards and other games, and great easy chairs.

This clubroom opens onto a great veranda half enclosed in glass and furnished with tables and chairs like a huge hotel. The sitting-room, reception hall and parlor are like the inside of the hotel at Coronado, only older in finish and not quite as large, but almost. There are wonderful oil paintings appropriately hung in all the rooms.

Capt. Albert G. Waddell.

The rumble and roar of army trucks tell of the passing of a fleet out on the road. There are voices heard again. Americans, they are going down a little patch to a creek to wash their clothes. Then there is silence again, broken only by the shriek of a peafowl hunting worms among the moss and fern on the banks of the lake. The wind gently touches the trees, and like tears of sorrow, the tears of the widows and orphans of Belgium, France and England, yes, America, too, the quivering leaves shed their sparkling crystal drops. All is still again. Then from somewhere comes on the gentle evening breeze, like out of the heart of the forest, the American National Anthem.

There is always that wild happy and sad feeling about the heart of the soldier as he listens to those last notes, "O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave."

The anthem's last notes die on the early evening air, the hand comes down from the salute and silent prayer automatically goes up to Heaven, "Thank God I am an American soldier, and may God make me a worthy soldier of my country."

Like a benediction the gentle wind again touches the tall trees of the French forest, and they nod their heads and seem to softly whisper, "God bless America."

I am now at a great French artillery school. It is far greater than anything in that line at home. It is all artillery, and artillery of every breed is represented.

Camp Kearny as you saw it could be fitted in one corner of this place. It is said to be the world's greatest school of fire today. Even Columbia University, with its great area and vast enrollment is a joke beside it. When I graduate from here (if I ever do,) I will surely be a real artillery man. I count it a great opportunity.

Of course there are not the fine buildings of Stanford, Yale or Columbia, but they have buildings, buildings and buildings. They are of brick and all well lighted for class work. The practical work as wonderful, and really makes all the work at Camp Kearny that seemed hard then, seem like a joke, and I surely am working harder than I ever did in all my life.

Where we are we can get to the hospital in the afternoon and visit men who were fighting the evening before. It is wonderful to talk to those men, who have come down wounded. They don't seem to care a rap and want to get back. The other day one big bruiser came down who had been hit in both legs, but had kept on and captured a Hun officer and several men single handed before he realized he was hurt.

I could write all night, but there is so little I can write, so you will have to wait until I return to hear it all.

A fine bunch of mail arrived today from home, seven letters from you and two from mother. There is still so little I can write, but can say I am certainly hitting the ball hard, and getting by like a million in the school so far. I don't know that I shall do anything great when we get to hard stuff, but I am going to just hit it hard on the nose and take what comes. I worried about the school at Camp Kearny and got by, and here is absolutely the latest, the last note in modern artillery and I have made up my mind to go through.

Our instructors are French officers picked for their knowledge and experience, with some Americans who have demonstrated their knowledge in a practical way in firing on the line where the theoretical had to be used practically.

It is known that a number of officers from the regiment are likely to be taken, and it was hinted we would be called upon to supply some for the new outfits being formed at Kearny. Of course I don't want to be ordered back until I get to win one of the coveted American decorations, and prove even to myself I am not yellow, but if the War Department in its wisdom sees fit to send me back to Kearny, to Russia, Siberia, or even Turkey, I am that little fellow who will go right along with a smile.

I gave up a great deal when I came in and I mean to play the game for all I have, and if I go through here at the top, and then to the front and get bumped off, as a few of them do up there, I don't want to make any great fuss about it. I just did what any other fellow would have done and what a lot have done already. On the other hand, if I am sent home before winning a service stripe or a wound chevron, or without the satisfaction of leading my wonderful battery forward, I will have the satisfaction of knowing I took things just as they came, never side-stepping a single thing.

You can never know what wonderful men the Americans are. This is not a popgun war like the Spanish-American, nor is it a scouting party like we had on the Mexican side of the Rio Grande, but what anyone ever did, the Americans can do, and do better, when they learn, and it does not take them long to learn either.

I can tell you I am proud of my battery. The men are simply wonders, every one, and it makes one feel a spirit of "do your best" for the honor of leading such men.

Some of the men have been getting money from home, and have written to tell their people to buy Liberty Bonds with the money, or Saving Stamps. I feel I really know the very hearts of these men, as I censor their letters, and I can tell you a cleaner, nobler set never lived. They are living up to their promises to mother, sister and wife, and a happy, cheerful lot of men they are. It would be hard to be called upon to leave such a command, but as I have said, it is with a smile I go or do what I am called upon to do.

THINGS FOR EVERY HOUSEKEEPER.

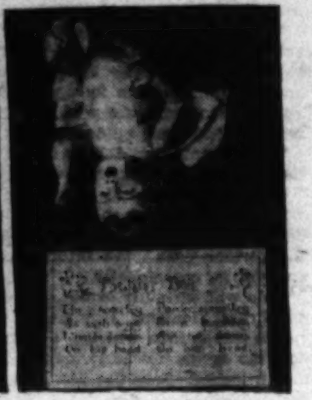
NO MATTER how much we economize on grown-ups, we do want to give the baby something, even if it is not a great big something. There are so many dainty things in the stores now that are not necessarily expensive, but any one of which would add appreciably to the wee chap's outfit.

Baby's skin is very tender and one perfectly dandy gift for him is a nice, soft, comfy, bath towel, with a dainty little cross stitch design in the corner to give it individuality. In fact there is a bath set of towel, wash cloth and soap all done up in a nice box that makes just the right thing for the young citizen.

Another bath adjunct is powder boy, a celluloid powder box made in the form of a dollie. No baby will mind being dressed when such a fascinating thing is danced over him.

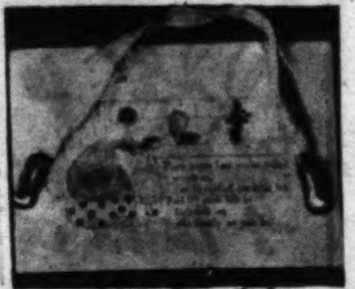
Then there are the always needed little shoes. Those in the illustration are a few of the cunning shapes to be seen. They are of felt in white or the delicate colors, finished off with a bit of embroidery and the cute, stubby things are one of the nicest gifts going.

Some nifty young shoes

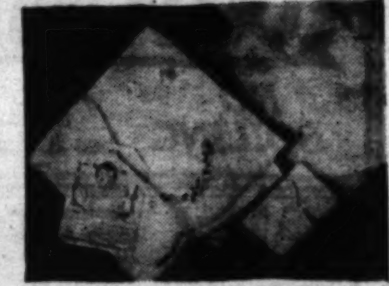


Powder boy

For the very young person



To hold a bib



Soft towels for the baby

The bib holder for the young person, when he or she appears at the table, is much appreciated. It is made of a soft piece of ribbon or silk elastic that will not rub the little neck, with clasps to hold the bib.

Have you seen those enameled trays for the table? No very young man or lady can help spilling things on the cloth and a tray solves the problem for mother. Of course we have had metal trays that fit over the edge of the table, but these enameled wooden ones, with their nursery rhyme design, are new. The bright pictures will keep His Nibs amused while waiting to be served.

CHAYOTE RECIPES.

CREAMED CHAYOTE. Boil tender in well salted water, add it to a cream sauce, or white sauce, prepared by stirring a tablespoonful of flour into one of hot butter until smooth and well cooked, then adding hot milk to make of the desired consistency, stirring to prevent lumps. Season well, and put in the boiled chayote, let simmer a few minutes, and serve hot.

FRIED CHAYOTE. Cut in very thin slices, add a few slices of onion, and fry in butter or salad oil, seasoning well.

BREADED CHAYOTE. First boil until tender in salted water, then slice thin, dip in beaten egg, roll in cracker or fine bread crumbs, and fry until delicately browned. Or the slices may be dipped in fritter batter and fried.

CHAYOTE WITH EGGS. Slice the chayote across in rounds, hollow each slice slightly on one side, and boil until tender in well salted water. Drain, lay the slices in a buttered tin, with the hollow side up, break an egg on each slice, season to taste, sprinkle with grated cheese and bake in the oven until the eggs are set

CHAYOTE WITH TOMATOES. Parboil the chayote and chop coarsely, mix with ripe tomatoes, and sweet green peppers and stew all together, seasoning to suit the taste.

BAKED CHAYOTE Cut the chayote in halves flatwise, score both sides, season with salt, pepper and a tablespoonful of butter to each half, and bake in a moderate oven until soft, basting with the gravy which runs from them.

CHAYOTE WITH CARROTS. Chayotes and carrots blend nicely in flavor. Wash and scrape the carrots, and wash the chayote and cut in halves or quarters or smaller pieces, about equal quantities of the two vegetables or one-third carrots to two-thirds chayote is a good proportion. Boil together in well salted water until both are tender and the water nearly boiled away, then mash perfectly fine and smooth, season with salt, pepper and butter. If too juicy, a spoonful of sifted cracker crumbs stirred in will absorb the surplus moisture, or an egg, well beaten, and stirred in while the vegetable is boiling hot, will thicken and add richness to the dish.

CHAYOTE WITH POTATO. A blending of chayote with Irish potato makes a very appetizing dish. One rather small potato to each chayote, peeled and cooked together, with a sprig of parsley, in salted water until soft, drain, mash perfectly smooth or rub through a sieve, season with salt, paprika and a spoonful of nut butter stirred smooth with a little water. Mix thoroughly and serve hot.

CHAYOTE EN CASSEROLE. Algerian style. The popular way of serving the chayote in that far-away land, is to chop it fine (run it through the food chopper) mix in a very little onion also chopped fine, and mix all with stale bread crumbs, adding butter generously, put into a casserole, pour a little olive oil over the top, set in the oven and bake thoroughly.

CHAYOTE UNCOOKED. One admirer of the chayote declares he likes it raw, taking the very young and tender fruits, cutting in long, fingerlike pieces, and eating them with salt, like radishes. They may also be sliced very thin into vinegar, like green cucumbers.

STUFFED CHAYOTE. For this style of cooking one should choose the mature fruit that has a firm shell. Cut in halves and boil in salted water until tender. Scoop out the pulp, mash it with bread crumbs, finely chopped or ground nut meats, or use any savory "left-overs" on hand that will blend well in flavor, season to taste, pack the mixture into the shells, sprinkle with grated cheese and bake brown. Another mixture may be with ripe tomato and sweet peppers, and the taste of the cook will suggest other combinations in almost limitless variety.

CHAYOTE SALAD. As a salad material the chayote is a welcome "find" as it may be used in so many combinations. Cut in quarters, boiled in well salted water until tender, and served with mayonnaise or any preferred salad dressing, it is very nice; but it may be combined with almost any other materials used in the formation of salads. Chop the boiled chayote and mix with the pulp of tomatoes, nut meats, etc., and stuff the hollowed out tomato cups with the mixture, or mix with chopped celery, sweet peppers, fruits, etc., for an endless variety of salads.

To keep the corset sweet and clean, sponge frequently with a pint of hot water in which has been added a tablespoon of ammonia. Sponge both the inside and outside of the corset and hang in the sun to dry.

THE MOTOR TRUCK AND THE WAR.

FRANK G. CARPENTER.

WASHINGTON (D. C.)—Shortly after the war broke out the Germans had 80,000 trucks in the field, and the armies of the Allies had 170,000 motor vehicles of various kinds. As soon as war was declared every wheeled car moved by a gasoline engine that could be found in France, Belgium and England was mobilized for military operations and it was that quick mobilization that held back the onslaught of the Germans.

It was the motor truck that saved Verdun and Paris. At Verdun 4000 trucks moved back and forth bringing supplies, making an endless procession thirty miles long coming and going. The trucks now in France, if joined together, allowing fifteen feet to the truck, would make a train as long as from New York to Cleveland, and that train would include portable searchlights, traveling telephone and telegraph offices, automobile repair shops, electrotyping plants for making field maps, field kitchens, field hospitals, officers' passenger cars and trucking vehicles of every description.

At the beginning of last year there were something like 110,000 motor trucks in the war zone. We shall have more than that number for our own troops there by the beginning of 1919. The first intention was to use 100,000 trucks of various types for 1,000,000 men. We have already almost 2,000,000, and our army will have several times the number of trucks per division of that of any other in the field. At the beginning of the year France had something like one truck for every fifty men. We shall have one or more for every twenty-five.

The British say at least 30,000 trucks are needed for an army of 1,000,000. According to our present plans, when we have three millions in the field we shall probably require something like 200,000 trucks. That time will come early next year. The War Department wants 100,000 trucks delivered by the first of January, and from now on we shall be sending them across by the thousands. Even at 100,000 the cost is enormous. A single truck with its repair parts costs in the neighborhood of $4000 and that hundred-thousand order alone will have a value close to $400,000,000. The aggregate output of our motor-truck industry in 1917 was worth less than $270,000,000. From that you can get some idea of the speeding up now going on in war truck production.

We Make More Trucks Than Any Other Country.

WE ARE turning out trucks faster and better than any other country on earth. Our first work along this line was standardizing the army gasoline vehicles. Before the war we had sixty-five different types of trucks used by the army, and we carried six types across the Atlantic. Each of these types had its own repair parts, and those used for one could not be used for the others.

The same condition prevailed in the other countries at war. The Germans had simplified their vehicles to a certain extent, but those of the Allies were composed of machines of many different kinds. One army, for instance, had four standards of pneumatic tires and no end of sizes. Its tire situation was so involved that it took seven times as many tires as if the trucks had been made with the tires interchangeable. It is much the same in that army today.

Similar conditions prevailed as to other parts of the machines, and the whole necessitated a vast quantity of repair parts of one kind or another. The British army still requires 32,000 repair parts for certain of its trucks and those of other armies need more.

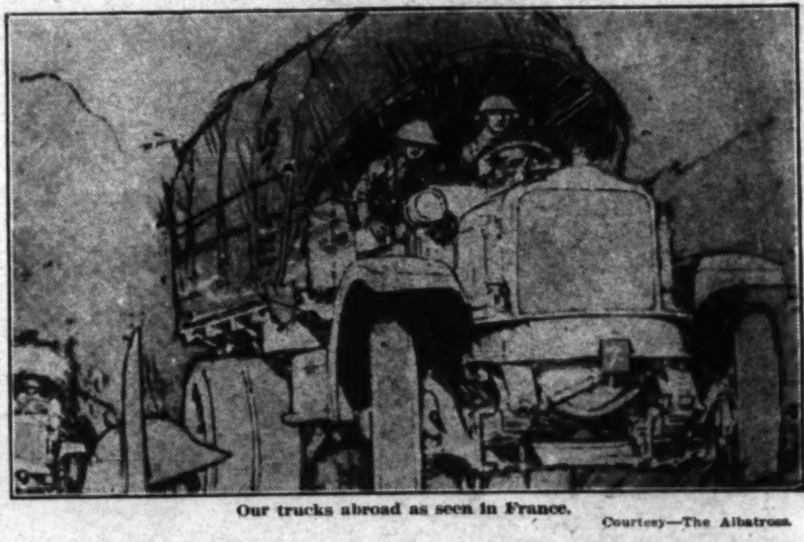
Very different are the war trucks we are now shipping to France. They have been made after the standardized model which we call the Liberty truck. This truck has only one-fourth as many repair parts as the British, and everything connected with it is interchangeable, so that the parts of any truck of one type will fit into those of another.

In bringing about this result the first thing done was to standardize the American army truck, eliminating all waste motion and waste parts and making, as far as possible, a fool-proof motor vehicle, which has all the strength and none of the weaknesses of the other trucks now in use. This was accomplished by bringing together fifty of our ablest transport engineers and truck experts to design a new truck for the army. They had everything to choose from.

The captains of the motor-truck industry gave up their trade secrets, waived their patent rights and supplied new ideas. The crank-shaft of one company was used, the piston of another and the oiling system of a third. The work was largely one of elimination, and at the end of a month's study the plans were brought forth, which are embodied in the Liberty truck of today.

How the Need Was Supplied Without Delay.

AT THE same time the machinery for making these trucks was designed and the new tools, dies and other machines were rapidly brought into being. Within thirty days after the designs were made the first truck was completed, and then an order was given for 10,000 cars. That order was distributed among fifteen different plants, and the business of these plants has been so standardized that the government can now have its army trucks made by the tens of thousands. It is estimated that we shall be able to supply not only our own troops, but some of those of our Allies as well.



Our trucks abroad as seen in France.

Courtesy—The Albatross.

The Liberty truck is the most efficient of all trucks for the purpose. It is made in three types, ranging in carrying weight from three-fourths of a ton to five tons. Without the body the largest truck weighs almost four tons. The three-ton and five-ton trucks will each make from twelve to fourteen miles an hour, and each has a capacity of more than fifty horse-power. The fuel is gasoline, fed by gravity from a fifteen-gallon tank on the dashboard, with a fifteen-gallon reserve tank under the seat. A one-ton truck that is likely to have a large part in our army work is being made at Detroit.

In addition to the demands from abroad are the increasing demands for motor trucks in the various war activities at home.

Some of the cantonments, such as Camp Dodge, were devoted to the training of cavalry, and connected with them were remount stations, with thousands of horses. Camp Dodge, situated near Des Moines, was a cornfield when the Secretary of War picked it out as the site for a camp. He sent forth his orders, and the caravans of war trucks went to work.

In a short time five miles of wooden buildings and ten miles of improved streets were created. A concrete reservoir, with a capacity of 22,000,000 gallons, was built, and twenty-two miles of sewers were dug. Among the buildings were a bakery, a laundry, a hospital, a steam-heating plant and an electric light plant, and accommodations were made for something like 40,000 horses. All of the transportation of the camp was done by motor trucks, and that to even hauling in the food for the horses and taking away such horses as died.

The motor truck is doing an enormous work in hauling the material for all kinds of war industries and in carrying the finished products from the factories to the seaboard. Fleets of trucks are in the service all along the Atlantic Coast, and caravans of them have been moving back and forth over the Appalachian Mountains.

The loads carried are of every description. Some have rubber tires, gas masks made of rubber and other such things from Akron on the way to the East. Others carry munitions and munition-making machinery, and some have picric acid and other explosives, which are so deadly that the railroads fear to transport them on account of the danger. This was the case with a cargo of picric acid which was taken from New Jersey to eastern Pennsylvania. The distance was sixty miles, and a fleet of trucks delivered the goods.

Not long ago the copper stills for a chemical company in New Jersey were brought there from Philadelphia. Each still was big enough to form a scalding vat for a hippopotamus. It was eight feet high, seven feet in diameter and weighed 5000 pounds. Nevertheless one truck took two of those stills as a load and hauled them to the plant in less than twelve hours.

The need for speedy transportation, independent of the railroads, has been so great that motor truck routes have been established from many of the interior cities to New York. There is one known as the Akron and Boston express, which has been taking rubber goods from Akron to Boston. Its trucks have twelve-inch tires and they run on express schedule. They leave Akron daily at 6 o'clock in the morning, get to Pittsburgh about 6 in the evening, and at noon the third day are at Philadelphia. They reach New York by 10 o'clock that evening, and are due in Boston twenty-four hours later. Two men go with each truck and one drives while the other sleeps. Telegrams are sent from time to time as to where the trucks are on the road.

This service started with four trucks carrying tires to the East and bringing back cotton fabrics and other materials. Later on the trucks were increased in number and branches running off to Washington, Philadelphia and elsewhere were added. The distance from Akron to Boston and back was 1510 miles and this was covered within less than seven days. In December, 1916, the first train of army trucks left Detroit for the Atlantic seaboard. It consisted of thirty trucks, and it made its delivery on schedule time.

Two years later 30,000 Liberty trucks made the trip from Cleveland and Detroit to the ocean. If delivered by railroad those trucks would have required 15,000 freight cars.

Refrigerator Truck to Transport Perishable Goods.

THERE is a motor express from Philadelphia to New York which has a number of five-ton trucks, one of which has a refrigerator system that enables it to take perishable goods in the hottest of weather. The distance traveled is about 100 miles, and it is made in ten hours. The trucks start from Philadelphia at night and reach New York early next morning. They carry all kinds of goods. A record shipment comprised fifty tons of ammunition that had to meet the sailing date of one of the steamers, and another was 100,000 pounds of sugar sent from Philadelphia to New York when the latter city was short.

At the time the headquarters of the Emergency Fleet Corporation were moved from Washington to Philadelphia the clerks and their office equipment and their families and household goods were carried from one place to the other on trucks. The change was made within forty-eight hours, and that without any perceptible halt in the work.

Mail Delivery to Out-of-Way Places by Truck.

MORE important than any city, company or individual truck enterprise is that being carried on by the parcel post branch of the United States mails. This service is under the charge of Fourth Assistant Postmaster General Blakeslee, a man with a vision, who sees in the motor truck the bringing together of the producer and the consumer, the elimination of the middleman, who feeds on the farmer; the release of the congestion of the railways, the improvement of our highways and the creation of a new business for the backwoods farmer and out-of-the-way manufacturer, which will bring such results as could almost pay the interest on our national debt.

Up to six months ago there had been established by the Postoffice Department eight motor truck star routes, and these during the six months preceding had made total net profits of more than $166,000. Every route had earned over $20,000, equal to double that amount per annum, and the average profit of every passenger mile of travel was more than 6 cents. During last July new routes were put in order, covering more than 2300 miles of road and involving a daily travel of 4600 miles.

Mr. Blakeslee tells me the earnings of the postal truck service would more than pay the cost of making and maintaining these highways, and that without reducing the present postal income derived by using other means of transportation. He estimates that 10,000 such routes would each earn $40,000 per year, producing $400,000,000 per annum, or more than the annual postal revenue at this time.

But this is only the beginning. We already have something like 60,000 rural and star routes in working order, and 100,000 motor trucks might be easily employed. At the time that the war closes we shall have far more than this number in France, and they can be brought home and put to work in the mail service at a great profit. To the earnings from carrying of parcels is added the high rates of transportation for firts-class mail matter, which makes the total profits of the transportation greater than can possibly be earned by any private organization attempting to compete.

Our Flag.

To Thee, whose broad red stripes have been tinted a deeper hue and a richer luster by the blood of American heroes; whose white stripes have been made brighter by the tears of joy and sorrow flowing out from the hearts of patriotic fathers, mothers, wives and children; to Thee, whose stars shine with a new and magnified light as the whole world sees the blessing of Freedom; to Thee, Dear Flag, loved by our brothers in France—kissed by her maidens fair, revered by heroes and orphans of war-crushed Belgium—bathed in the lovely clime of Italy's sunny vales and floating side by side with her emblem from her lofty peaks; to Thee, honored the world around—e'en by those who were once a foe; to Thee, whose purity has never been trailed in the slime of covetousness; to Thee, Dear Flag that has never known defeat, the Flag that has never been hauled down; to Thee, honored wherever man is known for righteousness—we pledge anew our love and honor, and recognizing no sacrifice too great to make for Thee, with the help of God we will carry Thee in honor to victory and world freedom.

"Specifics."

MORE than a score of "specific" remedies, or preventives for the grippe were recommended to me by correspondents. Among these I may mention lemons, onions, pimientos, prayer, Bulgaria bacillus, buttermilk, cold baths and astrology.

As I have said, there is no "specific," either in food or drink. The only "specific" is to live so that the blood is pure. Then no disease can harm you. Or should you get it, through indiscretions, the attack will be light, in accordance with the amount of waste matter in your blood. "Pathogen," the late Thomas Powell, M.D., called it.

Bad Menus.

A COMMON menu at restaurants in this country is meat or fish with bread, potatoes and pie.

This is about as bad as it could be, and is a prolific cause of sickness.

Never eat bread, and seldom potatoes, with meat or fish. Instead, eat a salad or green vegetables, or both—and cut out the pie. You may eat a little fruit with meat or fish.

Importance of Food.

SOME of my readers may possibly think that I place too much emphasis on the building of the body by food. That is impossible for "As a man eateth, so is he." It is as absurd to suppose that you can build a good body out of bad food or bad combinations of food as it would be to think that you can make a durable suit of clothes out of shoddy material. Writing on this subject, Hereward Carrington says:

"Of all the factors which go to make health, the food factor is doubtless the most important, and for many reasons. Let us consider the following facts. Food, and only food, makes blood—and blood as we know, makes body, so that our bodily structure is dependent upon, and only upon, the food we eat. Breathing simply purifies that blood; or oxidizes it; exercise merely circulates it; but the food we eat is that which makes the blood, and in this respect food is certainly the most important factor that can possibly enter into the case from any point of view whatsoever.

"It may be claimed that proper breathing will oxidize all food material ingested, turning it into healthy blood, even if that material be at the start not of the best, and that insufficient breathing and exercise may render the best food unsuited for the organism, for the reason that it is not properly utilized, and remains, as it were, always malassimilated. To a certain extent this may be very true, but it only emphasizes the point that breathing and exercise are, in a sense, necessary, not that they are more essential than the food which they oxidize and circulate! Pure air cannot turn bad food into good blood. If the material used in the construction of a house be not of the best, no amount of careful plastering and no amount of ingenuity displayed by the contractors and builders can make that house as strong—as 'normal,' so to speak—as if the materials were in the first place of the best.

"Moreover, breathing and exercise can never supply certain elements to the body, which, if lacking in the food, must always be lacking, and the body starve ultimately because of lack of these materials. Thus, in those cases where the food lacks certain salts, in organic compound, the body dies as we know of 'saline starvation,' and this would assuredly happen no matter how careful we were in breathing, or in exercise, or in mental attitude, or in any other manner whatever.

"We must remember, also, that food is the greatest producer of disease, and that its proper regulation, as to quality and quantity, is the greatest preventive measure, as well as curative measure, which we know. Why does the athlete always have to go into training for so long a period of time, and take so much exercise, in this preparation for any contest requiring endurance? It is simply because his body is in such a condition that this is required, in order to get rid of a lot of useless material which should never have been introduced in the first place. We constantly overeat, and then have to take enforced exercise in order to burn up, and get rid of, this excess of food-material! If we did not eat so much in the first place, all this would not be necessary. We should prevent the accumulation of this excess of malassimilated food material, and then the toxic or poisonous products which result because of its presence would be avoided."

Whisky for the Grippe.

FOLLOWING is an Associated Press dispatch from Omaha:

"Five hundred gallons of whisky in barrels, kegs, bottles and cases, now in charge of Sheriff Clark, are to be turned over to the hospitals of Omaha, and are to be used to fight influenza. An order for the turning over of this whisky to the health authorities was made today by the entire district branch, every judge signing the order.

"The judges were requested to take this action by Mayor Edward P. Smith and Health Commissioner Manning, who stated an emergency exists in which 'there is an apparent necessity for whisky with which to fight the influenza epidemic.'

"Dr. Manning said he will not authorize the use of whisky except at hospitals."

If whisky is good to be used in a hospital why is it not good to be used in the sick bedroom, at home—except perhaps that in the former case the internes may get a swig of it, occasionally.

This will certainly evoke a loud roar from the Prohibitionists. However, there are far worse things than whisky. As, for instance, coal tar drugs (formerly made in Germany) and injections into the blood of filthy animal matter.

A Sensible Health Officer.

I MENTIONED recently that Health Commissioner Copeland of New York said: "The great majority of those who are susceptible to influenza will be attacked, after which the epidemic will gradually die out."

Dr. Copeland also brought down upon himself the wrath of the political doctors by refusing to order the closing of schools, theaters, churches or other places of assembly. Nor did he commit the absurdity of ordering people to wear gauze masks, through the meshes of which millions of "bugs" could easily penetrate. He also pointed to the fact that although there were a few thousand cases of the epidemic in New York, this was a very small percentage of a population of 6,000,000.

It is notable that in New York the deaths from influenza were far less in proportion than in Philadelphia, where stringent medical regulations were imposed, even to the quarantining against other places.

If there were a few more sensible health officials like this, there would not be such a growing distrust of the medical profession.

Lemons.

HERE is a news item:

"There is an explanation for the present demand for lemons, it was reported at the Chamber of Commerce yesterday, as it has been discovered that lemons are a preventive for influenza. The California Fruit Growers' Exchange is planning to publish and circulate throughout the country pamphlets which will show that the sucking of a lemon constitutes an influenza preventive."

There is no "preventive" of influenza, or of any other disease, except to keep the blood pure.

Lemons are good, but they are not a "specific." There is no "specific."

Citric acid is very strong, and should be taken in moderation. It should always be diluted with water, and not more than two lemons daily should be taken in that way.

Yet better than lemons as an aid in malaria and other ailments, is my well proven receipt for pomelo or grapefruit. Wash a pomelo, slice it, skin and all, pour on it a quart of boiling water, let it stand for a few hours, mash it up, and take a glassful of the liquid three or four times a day. Or, if you cannot get pomelos, use lemons the same way.

Here is another way to use lemons. Squeeze the juice of half a lemon into half a pint of milk—raw milk (if you can get it.) Beat it up with an egg beater. This makes a mild combination like buttermilk.

We should instruct the mother on the subject of diet for each sickness. There is no excuse for not doing so. Wrong diet must always be corrected. Doctors must be able to give sensible advice on the subject.

BACK TO BUDDHA FOR GEORGE.

BY EDITH WAGNER.

GEORGE was about two months old when he came with his parents to Honolulu from Japan. He must have been nearly a year old when Miss Wirt first clapped eyes on him, and Miss Deal had known him six months before that—but not intimately.

George was a source of mild entertainment to the two missionaries. Nakamoto, his father, was yard-boy for them at St. Jude's Mission and it was their habit to affect forgetfulness of his name in order to hear Nakamoto say, "He p-rain George, jus' George."

There is nothing humorous about the name George, but it struck their fancies to find it so——Miss Deal, because her young man back on the "mainland" was a George (a very gay young man for an earnest "worker's" young man) and Miss Wirt, for no reason whatever.

The duties of a yard-boy at St. Jude's were manifold and not strictly tabulated. He watered the very large lawn of Bermuda grass and all the many tropical flowering shrubs, the hedge of hibiscus and the arbor in front of St. Jude's protected by two ylang-ylang trees and the arbor in the rear of St. Jude's covered by a brilliant bougainvillea. He swept the schoolrooms and cleaned the living-rooms upstairs. He answered the telephone and ran errands and he took care of George, but not till 5 o'clock struck did he allow himself that indulgence.

But in the cool of the evening he could crawl out of his cocoon, as it were, cheap haole trousers, near-white shirt and old straw hat; take his bath, put on his neat gray kimono and sandals and nurse George —George, so moon-faced, and slit-eyed, and chim—his baby kimono tied with a sash as brightly-colored as a tropic humming bird.

Miss Deal and Miss Wirt, after struggling with the school work and church and Sunday-school problems, found housework rather onerous; the other teachers boarded down town traveling to and from their duties on the trolley, but the resident teachers were perforce harnessed to a black beast of a gas stove when not engaged in ministering to the small Oriental's love of knowledge.

Miss Deal had pretty hands, but she had a heart and she could not allow Miss Wirt to wash dishes even if Miss Wirt did profess an appetite for this recreation. Of course, Miss Wirt could not permit the desecration of such hands . . . and so it went, until they hit on an admirable bargain: Nakamoto was hired, outside of his regular duties, to wash the dishes for 5 cents a day. As his work was over at 5 o'clock in the evening he was to make one job of the dinner and breakfast dishes in the morning, then at noon wash the luncheon dishes.

Five cents a day is a modest sum to bring, missionarily speaking, the peace that passeth understanding. It brought them, besides the peace, in closer relations with Nakamoto for they felt that by being friendly and personal they could, in a way, remove the obloquy of sweating a fellow human-being.

But there is no disguising the fact that $1.50, no matter how sonorously you pronounce it, is an inadequate recompense for a month's dish-washing. So Miss Wirt, with what, if she were not a "worker in the field," would be termed low cunning, cordially and daily looked into George's welfare. Nakamoto evidently had a parent's weakness—a fatal susceptibility to praise of his offspring. While industriously digging the burnt fat off a frying pan he would delightedly respond:

"Yass, George a' ri'." Or sedulously shining a glass say:

"Yass. George no' dead! You rike George?"

Miss Wirt had insisted on a Spartan regime of cleanliness where the dishes were concerned.

"You've a nerve," had been Miss Deal's admiring comment.

"That's all right," defended Miss Wirt, "hasn't he a good Christian home to wash dishes in, and don't we always inquire for George?"

Nakamoto, to praises of George's intellect and agility and adipose tissue, used occasionally to say: 'Yass, I t'ink George maybe he dead to-morra!"

"Good heavens!" Miss Wirt burst out, on her first introduction to Nakamoto's thought processes. "Is George sick?"

"George not sick; he we-r-rl. Today I say maybe George dead to-morra. To-morra jus' same to-day George not gone dead. I g-r-ad!" and the humble Epictetus continued his scrupulous scrubbing of the kitchen sink.

The cynic who advised that if you lack a virtue you should assume it, advised better than he knew, for by dint of assuming a thing you come finally to acquiring it. Thus the two workers found themselves, in time, really fond of George; the conscious recognition was about the time he was learning to walk; he was such a quaint and lovable, little morsel, helplessly swaying on his much too small underpinning, that a sudden gust of affection one day sent the two down town to Sayegusa's where they blew themselves for a perfectly gorgeous kimono and sash for him.

It would have been more to the point to have raised Nakamoto's infinitesimal wage; but that's not the way any of us—even missionaries—are built. It does not make us feel as big and generous and kind to simply pay a man enough for his work as to bestow on him something extravagant—extravagant for both parties, as this particular beneficence happened to be.

It is not with intent that George's mother has so far been slighted, although she was a sore spot in the body politic of St. Jude's; the horrid truth being that she was an unreconstructed heathen, bringing with her from Japan her Shinto shrine, and burning secretly incense before a little soapstone god with his eyes picked out in scarlet. She burned it openly on her first arrival, but the two workers "got busy" and removed the reproach, for it was certainly a reproach to have almost on the sanctified premises of St. Jude's, smoke ascending to an alien god.

Iris Bud was a spare smiling woman with a long horselike countenance. Iris Bud gives a picture—it is reasonable to fear—of a pink-tipped, plump, cherry-lipped person; but as Iris Bud in Japanese is difficult to spell and all but impossible to say, the English translation will have to be used in spite of the deceptive connotation.

George could walk before they had the fateful picnic at Waikiki, and Buddha had long been relegated to the limbo of departed spirits—a very good place for him with his red eyes and his exposed abdomen.

Picnic morning the two missionaries were wakened in the gray dawn by the joyful screaming of a horde of small Orientals, all with parcels containing food and "tight." If anyone thinks that the Oriental is endowed with any story book impassiveness he should witness the embarking of about a hundred of them off for a day's outing. They piled on the car, with the help of the teachers and the conductor and the motorman, three deep and sometimes four, giggling and shouting and talking in Japanese, Chinese, Hawaiian and Portuguese; pointing, wriggling and hanging out of the windows, and so they reached the loveliest bathing beach in the world.

George in a "tight" was an exciting spectacle; his legs were really too thin for his fat face and the rest of him; his stomach looked like a rubber balloon but his parents beamed on him as though he were an infant Apollo.

The larger number of the children could swim—even as eels—those who couldn't sat in the warm sand, like George, and let the waves, exhausted and powerless, run creaming over them; or chased shrieking in packs along the beach.

Just back of the beach is a pleasant grassy lawn shaded by great monkey-pod and algaroba trees; there, under the grateful green twilight made by those heaven-provided canopies, they were to eat. When the two workers could drag the excited children from the opalescent sea, a sea, amber, emerald, peacock blue, indigo—as incredibly colored as a futurist dream—they seated them on the grass each with his wooden plate loaded to the guards.

Miss Wirt found George at an interesting stage of the game with a fig in one little fist and a mango in the other.

She tried to take the mango from him but his small fingers were as withholding as the tentacles of a hee.* "You're going to end up a sick baby if you follow too much the devices of your own heart," she said gently to the unknowing George.

Next morning Nakamoto answered the usual fawning inquiries, by the blunt statement: "George, he we-ry sick!"

"Very sick! Oh, no! I think get well soon." Miss Deal said, with the cheery optimism other people's illnesses bring forth.

But Nakamoto rather gloomed over his dishes that Sunday morning

A multiplicity of duties—Communion service, Sunday-school, Japanese church, Bible class, evening service, then Japanese evening song with the two missionary workers acting as organist and choir respectively, kept the two from making a call on George. Monday, early, Miss Wirt went to see him, after hearing from his father that he was "ritter better."

However, he was a very stuffy-looking George with head and hands distinctly hotter than they should be, and an alarming wheeze coming off his narrow chest.

Of course no one ever has croup in Honolulu, though it can not be denied that George had all the symptoms.

Miss Wirt appealed to the Palama Settlement nurse who was busily tying up the sore toes and dropping drops in the sore eyes belonging to a number of infant cosmopolites. She was very obliging and cheerful—ran over to the cottage where she took George's temperature and said she'd give him a little "dope" and he'd be all right in the morning. The "dope" was apparently castor oil and calomel, but it failed of its usual miracle, and next day the nurse, Miss Gordon, a nice Scotch girl, thought that the doctor should be sent for.

The missionaries were waiting in the poor little cottage with its cheap haole furniture when he arrived—a pompous young man with a tiny inky mustache and his hair arranged in what was known in the last century as a "roach."

Iris Bud held George, now painfully struggling for breath, in her arms; for all her anxiety and preoccupation she forced her polite smile and dropped her usual courtesy. She could understand little of what was said, so kept her jet-bead eyes traveling from one face to the other in the hope not to lose anything.

The doctor looked at the small glass tube after he had recovered it from George's button-hole of a mouth, and shook his head.

"Come now!" Miss Wirt's tone was brusque for the reason that she felt anything but brusque. "There is really no need to shake your head in that hopeless fashion."

"Well," the doctor's tone was brusque probably because he felt brusque, "if we were not in Honolulu I'd be tempted to test for diphtheria. For one thing the kid has awful tonsils—big as his fist—ought to come out. Queer thing the way people want to hang on to their tonsils—useless, absolutely."

"Well, of course, George has not had his long enough to realize that they're only good for the doctor to cut out."

The doctor turned an approving eye on Miss Deal—she hadn't been saying anything 'Good looker," he thought, shaking down his thermometer. "That other . . . trying to tell me!"

They all worked hard trying to follow the doctor's rather elaborate orders. Sometimes the baby seemed better after a treatment but on the whole they thought that he was weaker at the close of the day. That evening they had prayers in the chapel for the suffering little fellow, and Iris Bud out in the cottage knelt with commendable devoutness until Nakamoto came back from the service. His hopes were high.

"George's sick git we-rr now!" he assured the waiting mother.

But poor little George steadily grew worse. At 11 o'clock, too anxious to go to bed, Miss Deal and Miss Wirt sat in the cottage agonizing over the child's laboring breaths. Finally Iris Bud with a polite smiling face went out and returned with a hanging shelf of carved unpainted wood which she hung with two blue cords on the wall. She made several of these trips to a small inner room, and behold! she had a god-shelf completely furnished with a Shinto round mirror, an incense burner and a half dozen or so wicked-looking little gods.

Miss Wirt who had not noticed Iris Bud's activities was kneeling by the low cot, endeavoring to swab out the baby's fast-closing throat, suddenly she felt stifled and looking around the room found it rapidly filling with puffs of thick gray resinous smoke. Iris Bud was burning incense before her Buddha!

And as the incense was taking care of Buddha, Iris Bud herself, to be on the safe

CARE OF THE BODY.

CONDUCTED BY HARRY ELLINGTON BROOK, N. D.

Masks and Germs.

AT THIS writing (October 31) the "peak" of the influenza epidemic seems to have been reached, notwithstanding the fear inspiring edicts of "health" authorities, including the wearing of unsanitary masks, than which nothing could be better devised to prolong and spread the disease.

A majority of these cases were simple influenza, and many of them were merely colds.

After alarming the people with reports to the newspapers—literally "scare heads"—and finding that a panic threatened to interfere with business, the doctors then had the assurance to tell people not to be afraid.

Epidemics come and go. Every few years we have an epidemic of influenza or grippe, and colds, complicated by pneumonia, where it has been maltreated by food, drugs and serums. Otherwise, the patients soon get well, and are the better for the housecleaning, for this waste matter has been accumulating in the blood for months or years.

An epidemic never lasts long. It is short, sharp and severe. All whose blood contains much waste will be affected by the atmospheric condition—more or less severely—some merely with a slight cold, according to the amount of waste there is in them to burn up, and no amount of guarding against "germs" from the outside can protect them.

The epidemic has spread over the entire world, showing how small this little globe of ours is, and that atmospheric conditions reach all around it, like tidal waves. This has always been so, but we did not know it before the development of telegraphic news service.

In this healthful climate an epidemic naturally is milder. The sun of California is a good health insurance, for those who live reasonably. The sun is the greatest curative agency. Light is life, darkness is death.

Dr. Frank McCoy, one of the leading M.D.'s of Los Angeles was quoted as saying:

"Fifty per cent. of the cases are caused by fear—the fear that because someone else has the malady, they also will get it. This is nothing but the regular old fashioned grippe, which is no different than it has been for years past. Grippe is caused by atmospheric conditions that occur at this season every year."

A noteworthy fact is that many physicians of the "regular" school have been affected, some of whom have died. Not a good advertisement for the methods they practice.

The young and vigorous have been especially liable to acute attacks. This is because they have the vitality to throw off the waste matter. If left to nature, and not poisoned with food while feverish and unable to digest, they would all recover without "complications." In older people, with less vitality, disease becomes chronic.

As I have shown, these bacteria—which are an effect, not a cause of disease—are so microscopically minute that thousands of them could easily penetrate the meshes of the finest cloth. Indeed, they penetrate the tissues of the body. Whenever air is breathed they enter. And you cannot well live without air.

Regarding masks, J. K. Gilkerson, D.C., writes to me:

"I have become so worked up about this infernal gauze mask proposition that I am taking the liberty to write you my opinion, hoping you may be able to awake a few of the public before the political doctors close the lid clear down.

"Think of it! The lungs are for the purpose of throwing off carbon-dioxid and other poisonous gases from the body. Then we have it stopped, when it will be sucked back into the lungs.

"Again, the dampness formed in the gauze by breathing through it produces a condition on the outside so that everything sucked against it will adhere, and if a man were going through some impure area of atmosphere the poisonous stuff would not only adhere to it, but remain there.

"Is not that a scientific health principle? Why do they recommend a screen window to be thrown open for good ventilation, and then muzzle the mouth?"

Meantime, nothing whatever was said about the all-important subject of diet, except to advise "eating abundant food." Nothing about cleansing the body thoroughly, with internal baths and sweats, and nothing was done about cleansing filthy streets, alleys and lots, until after three weeks it was undertaken voluntarily by the City Council. All that is too simple.

Few wore the masks in Los Angeles. In fact, I only saw one on the street. It was on the face of a black man, and the contrast was startling. Sailors, who were compelled to wear them, usually wore them around the neck, where they would do less harm.

In San Diego the people refused to wear masks, asking why should they do so, when the health officer did not.

In San Francisco the wearing of masks was made compulsory, and most of the people fell over each other to get them, like a lot of scared sheep. One man was shot and seriously wounded by a health officer, because he refused to wear a mask, and several hundred were fined $10 apiece. This is an example of what we may expect, when the political doctors obtain full control over the bodies of the American people.

San Francisco can never again poke sarcasm at Los Angeles as a "jay" town.

In San Francisco also that Woods Hutchinson was in all his glory, a self-appointed Committee of One, getting much free advertising. A San Francisco evening paper referred to him as the "Jules Verne of Medicine." Not bad.

Of course a serum was invented, to meet the demand. A San Francisco dispatch said its use would be made compulsory, although the medical authorities admitted that it is only an experiment. They have not yet had time to observe the working of it. In such cases, everyone who gets well is credited to the serum treatment, and of course many get well. During the past decade hundreds of serums have been tried and abandoned, leaving a trail of sickness and death behind them. Yet they talk of making such an experimental virus compulsory.

One good thing has been accomplished by this epidemic. Instead of instilling the public with veneration and awe of the medic authorities, it has led many to think seriously on a subject to which they had previously given no attention, namely, "medical science," and to ask themselves what this "science" is that does such unscientific and unnatural things. In other words, it has proved a boomerang.

Meantime, those who have studied the care of the body in sickness and health, have had no anxiety, knowing that neither this nor any other disease could harm those whose blood is pure, any more than you can grow orange trees on a cement sidewalk. Or, should they get it, because they have a small amount of impurities in their blood, it would assume a very mild form. In other words, they may walk serenely where pestilence rages, like Daniel in the lion's den.

Rational Treatment of Influenza.

FOLLOWING is from a San Francisco correspondent a fruitarian, who is a careful and conscientious reader of the Care of the Body, and profits by its teachings:

"My little girl, 12 years old, started in with a sore throat, then with severe earache and backache, and her temperature went up to 103½, with a pulse of 126.

"First I gave her an internal bath, then reduced her fever by abdominal cold packs of about twenty minutes duration, and packs for the sore throat, also cold sponge baths by the open window. At the end of twenty-four hours there was no sign of fever whatever, but of course a little cold in the head, and the sore throat hung on for four or five days.

"The first day we gave her nothing but orange juice and water, the second day she preferred lemons, and I think it was for the best, as it seemed to cut the phlegm much better. Then we let her start in on pears, and kept her on a fruit diet for about five days.

"My wife and I were not a bit afraid of catching the disease while on the natural diet, and this wearing of gauze masks is quite a joke to us, but while in the growing state we have let our little girl have more bread stuff, etc., which no doubt accumulates more mucous matter in her body, and renders her susceptible to such diseases."

Preparing for a "Spring Drive."

FOLLOWING is from the Christian Science Monitor:

"'Sanitary experts of the country' it is reported by an alert press, 'are already predicting a return of the epidemic in the spring,' the authority given being a health commissioner, and this, it is added, 'recommends the extensive use of the preventive vaccine which, he believes, will increase the safety of those inoculated.'

"Unless something is done promptly to put a stop to such alarms and recommendations,

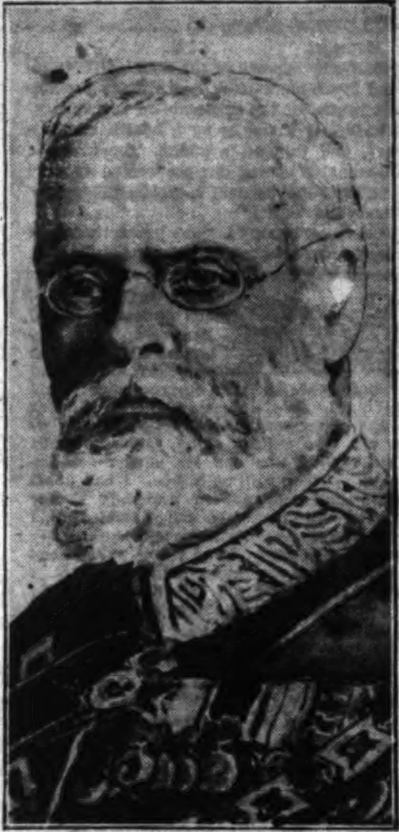
GERMAN KINGS WHO HATE KAISER.

BY CUNLIFFE OWEN



King Ludwig of Bavaria.

“OF ALL the rulers of the confederation of sovereign states that go to make up the German Empire, the one who ranks next in importance to the Kaiser is undoubtedly King Ludwig of Bavaria. According to the terms of the constitution of the empire, the Bavarian monarch is entitled to the presidency of the confederation, and as such, to the title of German Emperor, in default of the Kaiser and of any suitable prince of the dynasty of Hohenzollern.

King Ludwig, who has recently celebrated the golden anniversary of his marriage to Archduchess Marie Therese of Austria, has never liked either the Hohenzollerns or the Prussians. Seventy-one years of age, white-haired, white bearded, he still carries a German rifle bullet in his body, and walks with a limp, as the result of wounds received in defending Bavaria from Prussian invasion in the war of 1866. When in 1870 the Bavarian legislature gave its consent to the constitution of the German Empire, he delivered, as Prince Ludwig, a speech in the Bavarian House of Lords, in which he expressed his profound sorrow at being obliged by circumstances to vote in favor of the plan, which he declared had but one merit in his eyes, namely, that it furnished “a more definite safeguard for the maintenance of Bavaria's sovereign rights than the kingdom had enjoyed under the public and secret agreements with the North German Confederation, which it had been compelled to make after its defeat by Prussia in the war in 1866.”

He likewise laid stress on the necessity of Bavaria “remaining strong and vigorous, to be able to resist any future aggression by Prussia, and also to defend the cause of any other state in the Confederation whose independence may be threatened from Berlin.”

Ludwig has a Rival in His Cousin Otto.

BY MANY of his countrymen, this aged monarch, who since 1870 has never lost an opportunity of manifesting his impatience with Hohenzollern arrogance and his resentment at the constant attempts on the part of the Berlin government to encroach upon the sovereignty of Bavaria, is not regarded as their lawful sovereign. For there is still living another King of Bavaria, namely, his cousin Otto.

When in 1886 King Ludwig II, the munificent friend and patron of Richard Wagner, was seized by order of the ministers of his crown, placed under restraint as a homicidal maniac, and met with death by drowning in the Starnberger Lake, in endeavoring to escape from captivity, after strangling his medical attendant, Dr. Von Gudden, his lunatic younger brother Otto was proclaimed as his successor, and as King of Bavaria in his stead. His uncle, Prince Luitpold, being appointed Regent of the Kingdom, King Otto remained in sole possession of the throne until November, 1913, that is to say, for twenty-seven years, when Prince Ludwig, who had meanwhile succeeded his father, Luitpold, in the regency, was induced by his masterful Austrian wife, and by his ministers, to consent to the deposition of Otto, and to his own proclamation as ruler of Bavaria.

Bavarians Claim “Mad” King Was Killed by Hohenzollerns.

ALTHOUGH Otto throughout his reign was kept in the closest kind of captivity in the small palace of Purstenried, about two miles from Munich, in a state of alternate stupor and fits of violence of a most dangerous character, due to his enormous strength and stature, yet a legend has long been current and still finds widespread belief among the masses, to the effect that he is not crazy at all, but is wrongfully kept in captivity and has unjustly been set aside in obedience to demands from Berlin. The Bavarian peasantry remember that Ludwig II also held Prussia, the Hohenzollerns and Bismarck in abhorrence, and insist that he was proclaimed a lunatic, placed under restraint, and drowned in Starnberger Lake, at the instance of the Hohenzollerns and the Berlin government.

And although they have never set eyes upon Otto since he was proclaimed King more than thirty years ago, save for one fleeting glimpse which some of them obtained when in 1888 he managed to escape from his gilded prison and to seek refuge before the altar in one of the churches of Munich, being speedily captured, they are convinced that he too is a victim of the Hohenzollerns, and that although in full possession of his reason, he has been kept closely confined as insane, in order to prevent him from giving expression to his execration of everything Prussian.

Suspect Prussians of Inventing Stories of Insanity.

THE official assertions of the specialists employed by the Munich government to report upon his insanity, as partaking of the Nebuchadnezzarian mania of imagining himself to be alternately either a quadruped or a bird, they declare to be so many Prussian lies, and the story of his fancying he is a stork, and standing on one leg for incredible periods, in a nest of twigs and straw of his own construction, was denounced as a piece of Berlin fiction.

King William II of Wuerttemburg has just celebrated at Stuttgart, his capital, his seventieth birthday, declining all popular rejoicings and national festivities, on the ground that they would not be in keeping with the universal mourning, misery and destitution that prevail at the present moment throughout the length and breadth of the German Empire. He is accredited with having been averse to the present war, which is perhaps due to the fact that as a young cavalry subaltern he took part in the Franco-German war of 1870, winning during that campaign, by an act of conspicuous gallantry, the Iron Cross, which in those days was very sparingly bestowed, instead of being scattered by the tonload, as has been done by the Kaiser in the present war.

Knowing war by bitter experience and having smelt powder on the battlefield, instead of in sham fights, like Emperor William, he was opposed to reviving the horrors of the conflict between Germany and France of near half a century ago, and the action of the Emperor in bringing about the present struggle, which has drenched all Europe in blood, has merely served to envenom his bitterness against him, which originated when, prior to their respective accessions to the throne, they were both officers of the same Hussar regiment at Potsdam.

Relations between the courts of Berlin and of Stuttgart have always been very strained, owing to the disposition on the part of the Prussian government to trespass on the sovereignty of the Suabian crown.

King William is the most accomplished and enthusiastic chess player in Germany, and never travels without a set of chessmen within easy reach. He also enjoys the distinction of being the principal inn and restaurant keeper in his dominion. Among other sources of his large income are the revenues which he derives, like many of his predecessors on the throne, from the two principal hotels and restaurants at Stuttgart, one, the Marquardt, situated right opposite the royal palace, and the other the Reissig, located under and over the arcade of the so-called Koomingsbau.

All of Saxony Shares Ruler's Aversion for Prussia.

OF ALL the non-Prussian rulers of Germany, there is none who entertains so profound an aversion for the Kaiser, for Berlin, and for everything Prussian, as King Frederick Augustus of Saxony, and his sentiments in this connection are shared not only by the Princes and Princesses of his house, but also by his subjects. Since the beginning of the present war, both the French and the English troops at the front have borne tribute to the difference between the Prussians and the Saxons, all to the advantage of the latter, who on more than one occasion, when relieved from service in the trenches at the front, have hoisted placards for the information of their adversaries to the effect that their places were being taken by Prussians, from whom no decency or deference to the laws of chivalrous and honorable warfare could be expected.

Both King Frederick Augustus and his generals have frequently had occasion to complain, since the beginning of the war, that Saxon troops were unfairly sacrificed in order to spare Prussian regiments, and the relations between Dresden and Berlin, at no time cordial, are now exceedingly strained, owing to the conduct of the Kaiser in ordering about Saxon troops, without regard for the War Department at Dresden, or for King Frederick Augustus, who is exceedingly jealous of his authority.

These unfriendly sentiments bid fair to be perpetuated in his dynasty. For his sons have been brought up largely by French and Saxon tutors to appreciate the fact that as long as French influence predominated at the Court of Dresden it was Tit for Tat.

"GERMANY," declared Senator Lodge, speaking of the peace proposals, "should be paid back in its own coin. There is always a certain satisfaction in evening up a score.

"They tell an apropos story concerning the great artist Whistler. He had a poodle dog of which he was inordinately fond. The dog contracted an affection of the throat, and the artist had the audacity to send for the great throat specialist, Sir Morrell Mackenzie.

"Sir Morrell, when he saw that he had been called in to treat a dog, didn't like it much, but he said nothing. He treated the animal, pocketed a large fee, and went away.

"The next day he sent post-haste for Whistler, and the latter, thinking he had been called on some matter connected with his beloved pet, dropped his work, and rushed to Mackenzie.

"On his arrival, Sir Morrell said gravely:

"'How do you do, Mr. Whistler. I wanted to see about having my front door painted.'"

Time to Go.

NOT all the girls in France are French, evidently; if one is to judge from a letter in which a doughboy tells of an experience he had with a friend of his. The friend, Private Speedy of New Orleans, and the writer were sauntering along the boulevard when they encountered two girls.

"Aren't those girls pretty," remarked Speedy in English, but loud enough for them to overhear. "I could just love either of them."

Imagine his surprise when one of them retorted in perfect English:

"For the love of Mike, cut it out. How do you get that way!"

Stopped Traffic.

KINGS, stars and railroad presidents have ways all their own. Take, for example, Mme. Sarah Bernhardt. She was playing an engagement in Minneapolis and her train was due to leave at 9:30. She was asked, and was eager, to speak in behalf of the Fourth Liberty Loan at the auditorium at 9:25.

An ordinary mortal would either have canceled the engagement to speak, or exchanged tickets for a later train, but not Sarah the Divine. Told of her dilemma she turned to her manager, A. J. Kline:

"What is the road," she demanded.

"The Soo."

"And who is the president?"

"Edmund Pennington."

"Get him on the wire." All this in French, for madam's stock of English is limited.

When the president was on the wire she summoned a few Anglo-Saxon words which said plainly, "Mr. Pennington, you must hold your train for fifteen minutes. I must speak to the good people of Minneapolis so that they will not forget to go over the top for the Fourth Liberty Loan as their sons are 'going over' in my dear France."

Did he hold the train? He did and madam made her speech.

Well, anyway, it was Mr. McAdoo's railroad—and Mr. McAdoo's loan, wasn't it?

The Way to Fight.

"JERRY GERRARD," Universal director, is Irish, and then some, and by way of illustrating the spirit of the Sons of Erin in the present war with Germany, tells of a friend of his whose son went into the United States Navy.

The boy was home on leave and the old man was admiring his uniform. "But tell me, me b'y, why do they make the pants so wide at the bottom?"

"So we can roll them up quickly," explained the lad.

"You're no son of mine," warned the old man, "if yer goin' ter fight wid yer fate! 'Tis yer jacket sleeves that ought to be wide at the bottom!"

Men of Iron.

CAPT. EDWARD BECK of South Bend, Ind., at present in France with the black Senegalese troops, recently wrote home concerning them.

"They are just like our own colored troops," he writes. "No wonder they're great fighters. They never feel any pain. They remind me of a colored laborer in South Bend. One day, to test the hardness of this fellow's head, a mason on the upper floor of a building dropped some mortar on it. The fellow never moved, in fact, he hadn't felt a thing. So the mason dropped a brick.

"Crash!

"When the brick hit his head the colored man looked up at the mason languidly:

"'Look out whar you'all's done droppin' dat mortar,' he said."

Exchange of Courtesies.

IT WAS inspection day at Camp Kearny. The recruits were lined up for the officer and the officer was there, bad temper and all. He stalked down the line, grimly eyeing each man's bundle of needles, soft soap, etc., and finally picked on private Marino as the goat.

"Toothbrush?" he roared.

"Yes, sir."

"Razor?"

"Yes, sir."

"Housewife?"

"Fine, thanks," replied the recruit amiably, "how's yours?"

Gummed the Game.

"FUNNIER than any of the stories I tell to the boys, are some the boys themselves tell of their own experiences," says Elsie Janis, who is entertaining the Sammies "over there."

"One little fellow, with both legs gone, told me how he had crawled up a hill to where he could see the Boches plainly. Suddenly it occurred to him that if he could see them, they could also see him.

"'But, says I to meeself, them Boches will never waste one of them expensive shells on just me, all alone, I ain't worth it.

"'But just then a bunch of artillery guys came up. "Hey there," I yells, "you'll gum the game," an' sure enough they did, for when the Boche sees we've grown into a regular gang, zowie, goes a shell, an' here I am, in the hospital.'"

Cutting the Bills.

THE late J. P. Mitchel of New York was discussing war prices. "Some of them are staggering," he said, "but most of the suggestions for reducing them are as absurd as Joshua's."

"I'll tell you how to cut your bills in half," said Josh one night at the club.

"How," came the clamoring chorus.

"Use a pair of shears," said Joshua.

He Was Careful.

A STORY is going the rounds that originated in a draft board at Richmond. A darky who was eager to evade the draft had been told that the easiest way out was to declare his eyesight was poor. "But watch out, because they'll do everything they can to trick you."

Sam had this in mind when they began to question him, and sure enough, after he had declared his eyesight was no good, the examining physician pointed to a card on the wall and said, "how much of that sign can you read, Sam?"

"Sign? Say boss, where am dat wall?"

His Complaint.

A WRATHFUL man called at Mayor Woodman's office the other day and confronting the city's chief executive demanded:

"I want the city to pay me back $5 I was forced to pay to a doctor."

"How's that?" asked the Mayor.

"Well," said the wrathful one, "I wasn't feeling very good, and the copper on our beat came along and made me go to a doctor or go to jail. He said it might be Spanish flu."

"Well, what of it?" asked the Mayor.

"Well, the doctor looked at me, charged me $5 and sent me away, saying, 'you're all right, only don't eat too much,' and gee whizz, I've been getting that advice from Mr. Hoover for nothing, for a couple of years."

EDDIE MAIER was telling some friends about a fishing trip he was going to make to a newly discovered stream which was a veritable anglers' paradise.

"Are there really any trout up there?" asked one of his friends.

"Trout? Thousands of them," declared Maier.

"Will they bite easily?"

"Will they," declared Maier enthusiastically, "why, they're absolutely vicious. You have to hide behind a tree to bait your hook!"

IN PICKING our fighters for "over there," Uncle Sam is working for the same object as the small boy whose mother permitted him to pick out his own trousers.

The little boy looked them all over carefully, and then pointed out one pile in particular.

"Those are the ones I want," he declared.

They were labelled, "These can't be beaten."

Work Counts.

"TOO many people are under the impression that the war is merely a means to soft government jobs," remarked Senator Lodge, "whereas Uncle Sam is looking for people who are eager to do their bit, regardless of pay.

"What we need is more workers like the small boy I know, who went to work in a factory.

"There was nothing particularly noticeable about the boy except that he never took his eyes off his work, and was always on the job, but a few weeks ago the boss looked up to find the lad standing by his desk.

"What do you want?" he asked.

"My pay raised."

"What are you getting?"

"Ten dollars a week."

"Well, how much do you think you are worth?"

"Fifteen, sir. I've been thinking so for the last three weeks, sir, but I've been so blamed busy I ain't had time to speak to you about it."

The boy got his raise.

LITTLE Muriel's grandmother was not at all like grandmothers are supposed to be—old and white-haired. She was quite young and comely. But one day Muriel was watching her dress her hair, and suddenly noticed a white hair here and there. She crossed to her grandmother's side and began pulling them out.

"Gracious, child," cried she, "what are you doing?"

"Oh," replied Muriel. "I'm only picking the basting threads out of your hair."

The Fresh Guy.

IT WAS at a dance at the Waldorf Astoria in New York, when some candles dripped and made quite a puddle of grease on the floor. A gentleman standing at the door immediately took out his knife and his handkerchief and began scraping up the congealed grease, when a very fresh young gentleman in our "set" tapped the gentleman on the shoulder and said: "Say, old gentleman, you're interfering with our Paul Jones. Suppose you cut that out."

"I was afraid some of the young ladies might slip," courteously answered the "old gentleman."

"Well, they won't," answered "Freshie." "Besides, you're not running the hotel." The "old gentleman" had gathered up all the grease by this time and, giving no answer to the last remark, left the room.

"Fresh old guy," continued "Willie" after the dance—"that old man."

"Not exactly fresh, but careful of his guests, that's all," answered a friend.

"His guests?" repeated "Willie."

"Yes," answered the man; "that happened to be Mr. Boldt, the owner of the hotel."

And then didn't "Willie" fade away!

MARRIED LIFE OF HELEN AND WARREN

BY MABEL HERBERT URNER.

Warren's Influenza Elicits an Unexpected Verdict from Their Doctor.

IF ONLY she might lie there! Her head ached and her throat felt swollen and sore. But it was after 6 o'clock—Warren must not find her lying down.

With dragged lassitude she forced herself from the library couch and into her room to dress for dinner. Her throat, susceptible to the slightest cold, she gargled and sprayed.

"Anybody home?"

"Oh, I didn't hear you come in," she ran out to greet Warren. "Why, dear, you're early!"

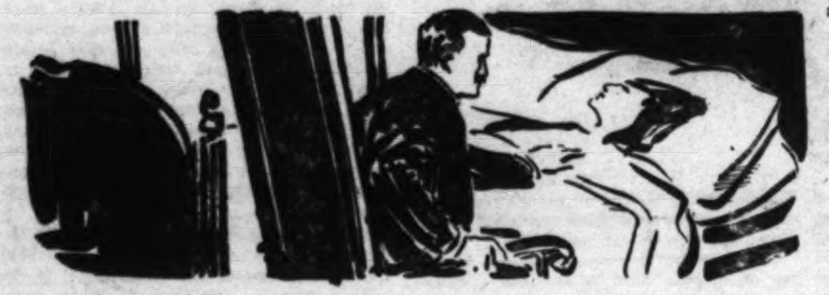
"I'm sick as a dog."

Alarmed, Helen fluttered over him as he flung himself on the couch.

"Does your head ache?" feeling his forehead. "You think it's a cold?"

"Cold?" with a spluttering cough. "Influenza—and I've got it bad."

"Oh, it can't be that! We both caught cold Sunday—I feel wretched too."



"Huh, you're always complaining," brutally. "I stand for it seven days of the week—so just forget it now. I tell you I'm sick!"

Helen swallowed hard. Then steadying her voice not to betray the hurt:

"I'll get you something hot right away—a hot lemonade."

"Now, none of your homemade dosing! You phone for Dr. Kelly."

Covering him with a couch rug Helen turned to the telephone. The doctor's office on the wire, his attendant said he had gone to Southhampton and would not be back before 10 o'clock.

"Say I've got influenza—have him call soon as he gets in," ordered Warren. Then when she had given the message. "Get my slippers and that blanket robe. Tell her to hurry dinner—so I can get to bed."

"Hadn't you better go to bed now? I'll have her make some broth—you shouldn't eat anything heavy."

"Oh, that's all rot—starving yourself when you're sick. Got to eat to keep up your strength."

In his slippers and house gown Warren sat with his feet on the radiator, while Helen went out to hurry up dinner.

Her own head throbbed and her throat grew more painful, but Warren's "You're always complaining," made her force back all thought of herself.

At dinner, in spite of his groaning grunts, Warren ate heartily. Concentrating on himself, he did not notice that Helen looked feverishly flushed and barely touched her food.

Allowing only half an hour for his dinner's digestion, he insisted on a steaming hot bath, which Helen prepared. A ten minute soak and he was ready for bed.

"Do you want me to read to you?" as she tucked him in.

"No, I don't. If I could only stop this infernal cough, I'd get to sleep." Then growlingly, "What the deuce is that for?"

"Just cologne, dear," she was spraying it about the bed. "It's good to purify the air and kill the germs. I'll get an antiseptic tomorrow."

"Well, let up on that—smells like fury," for Warren loathed cologne. "And shut that door—we'll dispense with draughts."

"Dear, try one of these glycerine lozenges," as his cough persisted.

"Cough drops for influenza!" with a disgusted snort. "Eh? What've you got there? Not that old doctor book?"

"It helped your toothache. Don't you remember—that hot prune?"

"Huh, influenza wasn't invented when that thing was written."

"'Ice bag, Infants, Ingrowing Toe Nail, Indigestion,'" read Helen from the index. "'Inflammation, Influenza!'" Then turning to page 309, "'The symptoms of influenza are similar to those of a cold, the distinctive—'"

"Oh, cut the symptoms," grumped Warren. "What's the dope?"

"'Soak the feet in hot water. Cover the chest with a hot bran poultice. Drink copiously of wine whey!' Wine whey—it doesn't say what that is." Then reading on, "'Ten grains of quinine at bedtime'—but you'll never take quinine."

"You bet I won't—makes my head buzz. Here, pitch out that book and get me a good stiff hot Scotch—put some lemon in it."

"In just a minute, dear," as she turned into the bathroom.

"Now, I'll not take any of that dope, I tell you," as he heard the clink of bottles from the medicine chest.

"I—I'm just taking some quinine myself. It's good for any cold."

"Got to dose yourself, eh? Can't get away from your own blooming ailments. If I was ready to croak—you'd have to pipe up about your aches."

Without a word Helen choked down a quinine capsule, then hurried out to heat the water for his Scotch. Her hands were icy and her head throbbing hot.

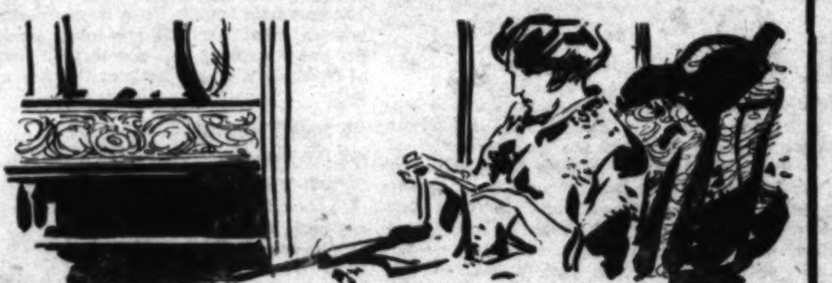
"What're you trying to do—scald me?" grouched Warren when he sipped it. "Too sweet. Wonder you wouldn't get a thing right."

Another half hour of irascible demands and complaints before the soothing influence of the hot Scotch became potent, and he finally dozed off.

Nine, ten, eleven, and still he slept on, while Helen sat in the library too wretched even to read. She forced herself to sit up until 12 o'clock, then decided the doctor would not come before morning.

Warren was now lying diagonally across the bed. She would not rouse him to move over, nor sleep in her own room—for fear she might not hear him call.

Drawing the library couch to the bedroom door, where she could hear his every movement, she made it up with the spare bedclothes from the hall closet.



Not intended for a bed, the couch was hard and narrow, and Helen feverishly restless, listened wistfully to Warren's stentorian breathing.

Was she always complaining? It was not the first time he had said that. Was that how he thought of her—as a sickly complaining wife?

She was haunted by a story in a recent magazine, the story of a woman who had alienated her husband's love by constantly dwelling on her ailments.

Unable to sleep, her thoughts grew morbidly distorted. The pain in her head increased. She was consumed with a feverish thirst, yet sick and dizzy, she shrank from the exertion of getting up.

A gray dawn lightened the library windows before she finally drifted off to an alleviating oblivion.

The doorbell—an imperative ring! She stumbled to her feet, blinking at the flooding sunlight. A quarter of eight! She had barely time to throw on her negligee before Nora ushered in Dr. Kelly.

"I'm just on my way from Southampton—they phoned me your message." Then with professional briskness, "How's the patient?"

"He slept well," trying to control her dizziness.

Warren, aroused by the voices, greeted the doctor's cheery "Good morning" with a surly grunt.

Holding to the doorway, Helen watched the doctor's swift examination.

"Influenza? Why, you haven't a touch of it. No, under the tongue," silencing Warren's protest with a thermometer. "You're all right—just a cold." Then when he removed the glass tube, "Only 98—normal."

"Well, I felt mighty rotten last night," growled Warren.

"It's this dampness—mean weather for colds. Keep your feet dry and warm." Then turning to Helen, "Mrs. Curtis, for the next few nights you might make him a hot lemonade—before he goes to bed."

Helen nodded. She was still holding to the door.

"Hello, what have we here?" his keen eyes on her fever-flushed face.

The next moment he had drawn her to the window.

"Let me see your throat," sternly.

A chill instrument pressed down her tongue. Her efforts to say "Ah-h," as he instructed, were excruciatingly painful.

"That'll do. Now take this—under the tongue."

Helen dropped into the chair to which he led her, and with an effort held the thermometer betwen her tremulous lips.

"One hundred and two!" was his grim verdict. "And a well developed case of tonsilitis."

"One hundred and two!" muttered Warren, sitting up. A high temperature was the only symptom of illness that ever impressed him.

"Have this filled at once," the doctor was writing a prescription. "Ring for a messenger if there's no one to send."

"Oh, wait, doctor—he oughtn't to get up," faltered Helen, as throwing on his bathrobe Warren started to phone.

"Don't you worry about him. You're the patient here. Now you're to go to bed—and stay there." Then as she turned back to the couch, "No, that's no place for you!"

With inflexible authority the doctor swept her into her own room. There, in the smooth freshness of the bed, the cool pillow against her heated face, her tense nerves relaxed to a delicious lethargy.

From the hallway came the subdued tones of the doctor and Warren, the cautious mumbling always used outside a sick room.

"I'll be back at 3 o'clock," the doctor was again by her bed. "Now Mr. Curtis is to stay home today—not because he's sick but to take care of you."

Helen tried to smile, but it was a quivering uncertain smile.

Again the mumbling of voices down the hall and the doctor was gone.

Tremulously she waited for Warren—but he did not come. An anxious, fevered wait. Then his quick firm step—not the shuffling of bedroom slippers. He was dressed—his usual well-groomed, vigorous self.

"Now, I'm on the job," sitting on the edge of the bed he took both her hands. "We're going to pull you around double quick!"

She lay quite still, a sob choking her pain-constricted throat.

"One hundred and two! Poor little Kitten," stroking the clinging hair from her hot forehead. "And I was setting up a howl over a cold—just a plain every-day cold."

"Oh, then—then you don't think I'm always complaining?" faintly.

"Complaining? Why, I was growling 'round here like a sore-headed bear—and you didn't chirp. You're a brick, Kitten, when it comes to standing pain. Now you're to lie there and take it easy—here's where I qualify as a nurse!"

ligious, as any man must be who prays five times a day, prostrating himself—boatman or bey, pasha or pauper—on his Persian rug or his straw mat, with his face turned toward Mecca and reciting a prayer from the Koran. The following is the Moslem equivalent of the Lord's Prayer, it does not sound very heathenish, in fact, it has the simplicity and beauty of our Bible:

"Praise be to God, Lord of the Universe, the Merciful, the Compassionate, Lord of the Day of Judgment. Thee only do we worship; to Thee do we cry for help; guide us in the right way—in the way of those whom Thou hast laden with Thy blessings; not in the way of those who have encountered Thy wrath or have gone astray."

Fancy, one of our fat old cabmen going down on his marrow bones, five times a day—every day—and reciting that prayer. It might improve his figure, if it didn't his morals.

STRUGGLES OF THE LITTLE THEATER.

BY NEELY DICKSON.

Charles Rann Kennedy.

EXPERIMENT is the basis of all development. When experiment ceases development ceases. Experiment, of necessity imperfect, is always open to attack. It suffers the stings of failure and the barbs of criticism but only through experiment may change and growth be brought about; only through courageous failures can the ultimate be attained.

The desire to experiment comes as a result of dissatisfaction. New methods are invented because vision reveals that there is something beyond the present. Vision is the result of the blending of emotion and imagination; creation, the result of vision.

The reason there has been so little creative work in our American theaters is because they have for so long been controlled by men lacking in vision—men in the game for the sake of the money and not for the sake of the art. Imagination and creative genius have played no part.

As a result of such sordid commercialism, dissatisfaction has crept in and the next step has been experimentation, a reactionary movement apparent in Europe many years before its full force was felt here.

The new school has suffered many and furious attacks from the old school. Failures have been recorded and mistakes held up to a skeptical public. Many experimental theaters have indeed suffered defeat. By their birth and passing I am reminded of Kipling's 'After me cometh a builder, tell him I too have known," for each sincere group of experimenters has delved and dug and builded and profited by the successes and failures of other groups. But those that have failed have passed on the torch to someone else until today there are in America over seventy-five small theaters where eight years ago there were none.

These experimental theaters, be they called Little Theaters, Art Theaters, Community Theaters or what not, have all been motivated by a desire to get away from commercialism and to experiment freely in new methods of acting, scene designing, lighting and playwriting. They desire to present plays that might never be seen in a commercial theater, and to present them in a way that would be different from the commercial productions, and by so doing achieve a finer, freer expression in drama. Not perfection but experiment has been their cry. Not finish but growth.

The little theaters have usually no great fortunes at stake. They are rich only in ideas and enthusiasm. They may follow out one theory one year and later try another if it seems to point to greater development.

They claim as their prerogative the right to experiment.

How to Get the Public to Understand and Appreciate.

MUCH misunderstanding has resulted of course; difficulties arise. It is not always possible to have an understanding audience. The public is more apt to be satisfied with a mediocre production presented after the accustomed method than with one that abounds in creative potentialities. The smug sophists are satisfied with the old order, satisfied, because they are so lacking in originality that it never occurs to them that there can be anything better.

Despite skeptics' prophecies to the contrary, the experimental playhouse is here to stay, and out of these same theaters with their groups of earnest workers may come a big impetus to the much talked of regeneration of the theater. These playhouses which are so frankly known as experiments should be of inestimable value both to the professional stage and to the public. Many literary dramas have been presented in the little theaters that would never have been tried in the commercial houses, and many successful playwrights have been given to the public through this medium.

Most of the little theaters have been fathered by groups of actors, authors, painters, musicians and dancers, all of them artists, either "arrived" or in embryo, craving an opportunity for self expression—intelligent, enthusiastic, sincere experimenters willing to sacrifice in order to create and willing to suffer in order to see an ideal realized.

They are frequently referred to as the insurgents or the reactionaries, and such they have become in their desire to break away from the old theater traditions and hampering conventions. In the eyes of the old school anyone connected with the little theater movement is an "amateur."

The term amateur, however, has come to have a much greater dignity than formerly, and must not be confused with the rural school variety of the past generation. An amateur of today has been aptly defined as one who loves his art so much that he is willing to work without remuneration. And this is what most of the workers in the experimental theaters are called upon to do.

The result is of course a less stable organization, for man must live and too frequently the theater experimenters are dependent upon their efforts in some other vocation for a livelihood. This curtails the amount of time possible to be given to the theater.

Why the Little Theater is Not Financial Success.

THE question that is constantly being asked is, "Why are there so many little theater failures?"

The answer is not hard to find. The organizations are usually founded without capital; their greatest asset being the talent and enthusiasm of their workers.

Any theater must depend for life either upon the patronage of the public in large numbers or upon a generous endowment. As the seating capacity of most little theaters ranges from forty-nine to 399, it is plain to be seen that the box office receipts could never be sufficient to make the enterprise self-supporting. And as in most cases the endowed theaters have been few and far between it is quite apparent why these little theater groups have been so soon in need of the funeral wreath and the pallbearers. Even though the players may work for little or nothing the cost of the productions, rent, stage equipment, etc., far exceed what any small house can meet through its box-office receipts alone.

If the admission price is raised to anywhere near $2—the price charged at the opening of our own Los Angeles Little Theater—it is prohibitive to most little theater goers. For the real art lover is seldom a moneyed person and the little theater devotee is obviously an art lover or he wouldn't be interested in patronizing the little theater.

For the present, then, until enough of the general public has learned to enjoy the one act play, the little theater's only hope of longevity is in at least partial endowment by those who do appreciate the art of the little theater and who can afford, financially, to be "patrons of the arts."

The One Act Play is Better on a Small Stage.

THE very nature of the one act play demands a small setting to be consistent. Few one act plays are as successful on a large stage as on a small one. Several of the plays that were originally staged most successfully by the Washington Square Players at the Bandbox Theater were afterward taken for vaudeville and they suffered much by the enlargement. There is an intimacy and a simplicity possible on a small stage that is quite out of the question in the typical professional theater. The fact that so much of our dramatic output at present is in the form of the one act play is a vital reason for the encouragement of small theaters.

We have had as many kinds of experimental theaters as there have been creative minds to demonstrate their theories. Some have represented community effort, many have striven for "the newest things in art," others have struggled for the unusual both in the play and in the setting, and some few have chosen a middle course and endeavored to present plays of literary merit together with the newer methods of stage investiture.

The Community Theater of Hollywood, which came into being in September, 1917, did not begin with the avowed purpose of pursuing art no matter where it led, nor was it imbued with the iconoclastic desire to break down all the conventions of art and life and give free expression to every wild impulse. Rather, the aim has been to give wholesome drama with a literary quality, acted and staged with sincerity and artistic simplicity.

The success of any project either of art or finance depends upon the ability of the "promotors" to study the surroundings and to make the enterprise fit the conditions. The Hollywood Community Theater has tried to meet the needs of an intelligent, appreciative community. In short, an effort has been made to study the community and to have its theater express its ideals, to make of its theater a place where good drama, wholesome amusement and intelligent recreation could be enjoyed; a place where one act plays seldom seen on the professional stage might be presented for the community and acted by members of the community.

Many people think that the reason for starting the theater in Hollywood was because there was such a large moving picture field to draw from. Quite to the contrary. Be it known that the thought never occurred that the film people might be interested.

However, it has been a source of gratification to find that although no effort was made to seek them, they came with a generosity of spirit and an earnest desire to co-operate that has been most helpful. Some of the strongest support and the greatest encouragement has come from the motion picture directors, scenic artists and actors. Nevertheless, to the question that is asked repeatedly, "How much does the Hollywood theater depend upon the moving picture people for its audience and support?" the answer is always the same: "Only to the extent to which they form a vital part of the community."

Much of the initial success of the Hollywood Community Theater was made possible by the self-sacrificing efforts of the president of the association who first secured enough members to make possible the repair of the dilapidated old building which was to become the theater. He and the men working with him—who, by the way, were not pursuers of art at all, but just intelligent, enthusiastic college men who didn't know as much about a theater as they did about a football game but who believed in clean, wholesome, invigorating amusement—are deserving of unstinted praise for making it possible to launch the project.

After the building had been repaired and fitted up in such degree of good taste and comfort as the finances permitted, a stage and a simple lighting system were installed, some chairs and a piano were borrowed, and the theater was opened.

Now, running a theater without funds and under the system of everybody working may sound very Utopian, but it has its drawbacks. For, frequently, when the most work is to be done no help at the moment is available; also, demands must be very carefully made, for nearly everyone wants to do the thing he wants to do and when he wants to do it, so that when stage matting should be tacked down the proffered assistant may prefer to take care of the box-office, and then either the director has to tack down the matting or else wait until someone comes who does not have a soul above matting. This system is not exactly conducive to efficiency as it may tend to delay the production. However, there is usually to be found on the part of everyone the utmost willingness to do any amount of drudgery. Certain members of the community who believe in the project have been willing to make sacrifices for it even to the extent of doing the gardening and window washing!

But it is upon the players themselves that most of the work has fallen. They have made curtains, answered the telephone, swept the lobby, painted the furniture and shifted the scenery until sometimes it has seemed that there was little or no time or strength left for rehearsing or playing. Nowhere could there be found a more loyal, unselfish, courageous, self-sacrificing, intelligent group of young people than the players of the Community Theater of Hollywood. With them it is never, "What is best for me?" but instead, "What is best for the theater?" upon which every decision rests. If any degree of success comes to this little theater much of the credit will belong to this earnest, ambitious group who form the very bone and sinew of the enterprise.

The Funny Question About "All the Money."

THE question that has caused the players and the officers of the association quite the most merriment, and, it may be added, exasperation, is the oft repeated one, "What do you do with all your money?" (Great stress should be put on the all in reading this.)

An answer to this question might well be printed and posted in the lobby with the suggestion that the inquirer perform a little mathematical calculation. By so doing he would find that much of the money from the preliminary sale of season tickets has had to be used to make the building habitable and to purchase what is obviously necessary equipment. That has left the theater dependent upon the single admission fees to pay the overhead expenses and the cost of the productions—rent, telephone, electric bills, etc., and to stage twenty-two different plays and costume ninety-eight characters. Yet the watchword "No Debts" has been adhered to, and the theater has been kept running.

The admission charged has never been more than 75 cents, by season ticket only 60 cents. Yet the attempt is made to keep the quality of the plays, the excellence of the acting and the artistry of the stage settings such as to compare favorably with the little theaters that have charged from $1 to $2 admission.

Although the Hollywood Community Theater's ideals may not have been entirely realized, the whole-hearted and enthusiastic support of the patrons has been highly gratifying and has proved that, despite the many failures in little theater projects, there is a distinct place in this city for a little theater.

By the third production last season, the box-office receipts had nearly doubled and two additional nights were being played. As the season progressed the audiences increased both in numbers and enthusiasm. In the later productions there were as many if not more people from Los Angeles than from Hollywood proper. And this in spite of the fact that the theater is quite off Los Angeles' theatric map and in a somewhat inaccessible place.

It was also highly gratifying to find such a large percentage of the audience made up of the much maligned "tired business man," but it was even more encouraging to see at successive productions the very same tired business men, and this despite the discomfort they must have endured from the folding chairs which were used the first year.

What the future holds for the Community Theater of Hollywood or what we can hope to accomplish is only a matter of conjecture. We have our ideals and we hope to live up to them; we have our aspirations for service and we hope to see them gratified; and we have also a deep rooted desire to bring a greater respect and sincerity into the work of the theater.

The mistake should not be made of judging the little theater productions by the commercial theater standards. Their purpose is not the same and the type of play offered and the manner of production must necessarily be different. Yet each has its place. The little theater is not trying to rival the commercial theater any more than a miniature rivals a life-sized portrait. The one is for the intimate corner, the other for the gallery. Each should be accorded its place in the big dramatic scheme and each be allowed to make its contribution to the art of the theater.

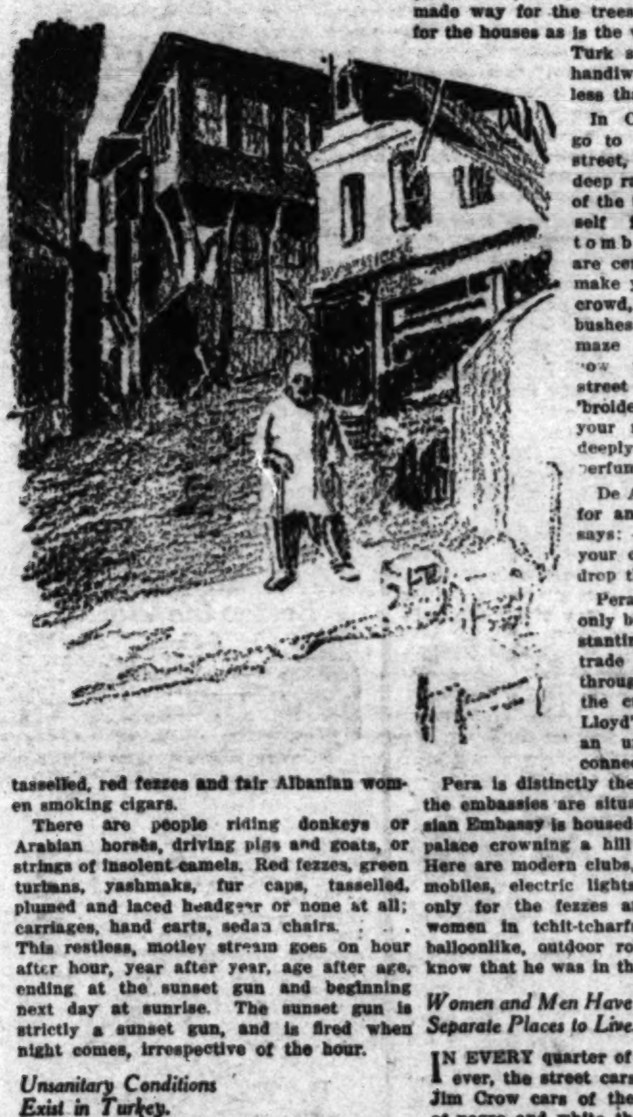
COLORFUL CONSTANTINOPLE.

BY EDITH GILFILLAN.

CONSTANTINOPLE, to begin with, is not one big city; it is four big cities covering the wooded heights of the shores of the Bosporus, the Golden Horn (which is an estuary of the Bosporus) and that part of the promontory formed by the Golden Horn which is on the Sea of Marmora. These cities, with each its hundreds of suburbs, are Stamboul, Pera, Galata and Scutari. Scutari is in Asia Minor; it is built on the tongue of land that separates the Black Sea from the Sea of Marmora. I was pretty old before I discovered that the Golden Horn was water and not land; after that "kink" was straightened I could see the necessity of bridges between the two cities of Pera and Galata and the city of Stamboul.

To see the population of Constantinople every one is agreed, from Mark Twain to De Amicis, that one must take his stand on the floating bridge, over a third of a mile long, which connects Galata with Stamboul. It is De Amicis's epigram that, "Over this bridge 150,000 people pass every day and not one idea passes in ten years."

It is like a tremendous carnival, with all the maddest and most outré costumes and colors on the soberest and most dignified people; this contrast is most extraordinary between rags and gold lace; people loaded down with gay garments and those almost naked; men wrapped in ill-smelling sheepskin and women enveloped in misty chiffon; one in orange brocade walking beside one in dusty tatters; fat eunuchs with black-tasselled, red fezzes and fair Albanian women smoking cigars.



There are people riding donkeys or Arabian horses, driving pigs and goats, or strings of insolent camels. Red fezzes, green turbans, yashmaks, fur caps, tasselled, plumed and laced headgear or none at all; carriages, hand carts, sedan chairs. . . . This restless, motley stream goes on hour after hour, year after year, age after age, ending at the sunset gun and beginning next day at sunrise. The sunset gun is strictly a sunset gun, and is fired when night comes, irrespective of the hour.

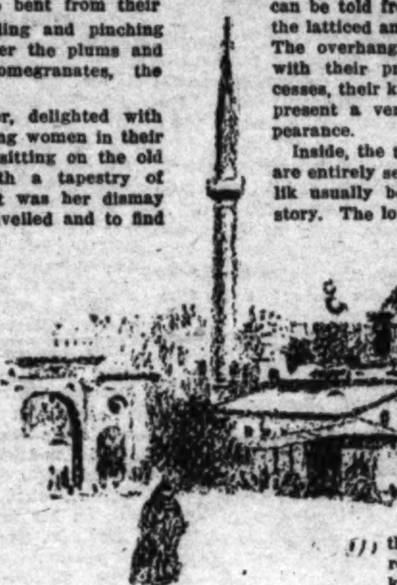
Unsanitary Conditions
Exist in Turkey.

AN INCIDENT told me by a friend who was head nurse in a mission hospital in Scutari illustrates the unsanitary condition of Constantinople.

One day while out walking, she was charmed to see on a distant wall a number of women dressed in the gay and brilliant colors worn by the lower class Turkish women (the upper class having definitely discarded their once lively street vestments for the somber tchit-tcharf.) They were like a lot of flaming tropical birds, all rose, green, gold, violet, maize and purple, all laughing and chaffering with several fruit venders, who were holding up their big wooden trays to the women, who bent from their perch on the wall handling and pinching and turning over and over the plums and dates, the figs and pomegranates, the grapes and peaches.

My friend came nearer, delighted with the picture these chattering women in their lovely hued robes made sitting on the old ruined wall covered with a tapestry of vines and flowers. What was her dismay to see that they were unveiled and to find that they were lepers, with every horror and monstrous disfigurement possible — without lips, with empty sockets, with lidless eyes, with ears resting on their shoulders, with noses gone.

After the poor creatures had selected their fruit, the venders lowered their trays to their heads and went cheerily off to sell the remaining fruit at the bazaars, or the mosque steps, or the cafes.



A Turk thinks it wicked to fell a tree so here are the original trees; ancient fig, cypress, lofty palms, enormous spreading plane trees, everywhere. The houses have made way for the trees and not the trees for the houses as is the western mode. The Turk says, "Should God's handiwork be considered less than man's?"

In Constantinople you go to the end of a fine street, it is closed by a deep ravine; you come out of the theater to find yourself in the midst of tombs—for everywhere are cemeteries;—now you make your way through a crowd, now through bushes; now through a maze of rags hung out, now through a bazaar street filled with golden broideries; now you hold your nose and now you deeply breathe waves of perfumed air.

De Amicis is responsible for another epigram. He says: "You may light your cigar in Europe and drop the ashes in Asia!"

Pera and Galata are the only busy quarters of Constantinople. Nearly all the trade of the city passes through Galata, here are the customhouses, banks, Lloyd's, warehouses . . . an underground railway connects Pera and Galata.

Pera is distinctly the foreign quarter, all the embassies are situated here. The Russian Embassy is housed—or was—in a noble palace crowning a hill over 400 feet high. Here are modern clubs, hotels, stores, automobiles, electric lights, telephones . . . only for the fezzes and turbans and the women in tchit-tcharfs (a clumsy, black, balloonlike, outdoor robe) one would not know that he was in the Orient.

Women and Men Have Separate Places to Live.

IN EVERY quarter of Constantinople, however, the street cars are divided like the Jim Crow cars of the South, only instead of negro and white the division is between men and women. The compartments reserved for women is called the haremlik, and that for the men is selimlik.

The same division is in the Turkish house. The houses are nearly always built of wood—although Allah, himself, knows where they get the wood from if they don't cut down trees—on the European shore painted dun or brown and in Scutari brilliant purples, yellows, pinks and blues. Where possible they are set back in among roses and jessamine and lilies and hyacinths, under umbrella pines and mulberries and shady planes and acacias and pomegranates. The haremlik or women's side of the house can be told from the outside by the latticed and grated windows. The overhanging upper stories, with their projections and recesses, their kiosks and terraces, present a very picturesque appearance.

Inside, the two establishments are entirely separate, the haremlik usually being in the upper story. The lower story is where the offices, men's reception room, kitchen and men's dining-room are. The haremlik, of course, has its own staircase or private entrance not only to the street but also to the garden.

The furniture is rather meager, consisting of carpets, hard divans and cushions, nearly all adornments being kept in large oaken chests. As a rule, the Turks do not have bedsteads, like the Japanese the mattresses and quilts are brought out of closets and spread on the floor when needed.

The kitchen, which is usually large, is generally an outbuilding. All one side is occupied by a great arched cooking stove made of bricks or stones with squares hollowed on the flat table-top where the fires of charcoal are made and covered with movable gratings on which rest the copper pans or earthenware vessels. There is in the main house a small room called the kahve ojak or coffee-hearth where a great pot of coffee is always ready—simmering over a charcoal brazier—for after love and tobacco the Turk counts his greatest comfort, coffee.

Little coffee-stalls abound everywhere and everywhere you can have your coffee—on a tombstone, on the steps of a mosque, in the shops when you are buying a Persian rug or a package of flea powder, in the hotel lobby or in your bath.

Baths, as we all know, are a Turkish specialty, and anyone who has emerged alive from a hammam—several pounds shy of superfluities—has augmented respect for the Turk and some of his institutions. The hammam bath is not always a painless process, what with the sweating, pummeling and wrenching, but you leave it feeling as frisky as a spring lamb and as gay as a lark.

No Bath Tubs With
All this Bathing.

THE Turk in spite of his constant bathing (bathing being enjoined by tht Mohammedan religion) has no stationary tubs nor wash bowls—indeed, Turkish houses are quite innocent of plumbing. Marshallah! But as they never bathe save in running water the brick floors contain drains that carry the water to the garden outside. Always before eating, a servant pours, from a pitcher, water over an oriental's hands; which seems a wise provision, for they do not use knives nor forks; spoons only are used to eat soup or sherbets.

They do not sit around a table as we do, but sit on cushions round foot-high table trays. All over the Near East they have but two meals. Breakfast is a sort of movable feast up to 11 o'clock, it consists of coffee, fruit and various hot breads. The Turk is enabled to sustain life until his dinner at sunset by drinking innumerable cups of thick, hot, heavily-sweetened coffee.

Dinner, which is consumed in the evening, is the only meal the Turk takes in the bosom of his family. It often is an elaborate affair of twelve courses: Tomatoes and squash and eggplant and other vegetables stuffed with rice or minced meat or cheese, fish swimming in oil, mutton stews, goat fricassees, roasted chickens, rich pastries and candies, preserves of plum and quince and fig and peach, and always coffee and the narghile—water-pipe.

Every Man His Own Blind Pig.

AT SOME of these dinners they drink a sort of brandy called raki; but alcoholic drinks are anathema to the orthodox Turk, although, the sprightly De Amicis says, "If some day a thick darkness should descend over Constantinople, and after an hour, the sun should suddenly shine out, 100,000 Turks would be found with the bottle at their lips." One need not take that to heart, however, for De Amicis would much rather be entertaining than authentic.

The Turk takes his pleasures pretty sadly; about the only time he publicly relaxes is during the Feast of Bairam, which in the way of gift-giving, feasting and good-will to man corresponds to our Christmas. On that day every good Moslem kills a lamb, its fleece dyed a bright orange with henna and its little hoofs covered with gold or silver leaf.

When the lamb has been sacrificed on the morning of the festival, its flesh is divided into three portions, one being given to the poor, another to relatives, the third being kept for the household. On that day the Sultan goes to the mosque which is nearest the Yildiz Kiosk—the vast assemblage of buildings which go to make up the imperial residence—thousands collect to watch the bent, frock-coated, yellow-faced, black-eyed, red-fezzed, little man driven madly by, in a plain, black barouche; followed by regiments of cavalry, infantry and marines; also —a quaint custom—by a half-dozen led horses—beautiful, graceful Arabians.

The month-long fast of Ramazan, of which old Omar wrote:

> "As under cover of departing day > Slunk hunger-stricken Ramazan away."

is held by the Moslem to be a divine institution. Its observance is strictly enjoined on all true believers over the age of 14, invalids and travelers only excepted. Ramazan is held in the ninth month of the Mohammedan year. The Moslem year being lunar, Ramazan makes in the course of time the round of the seasons. But through the winter days, from sunrise to sunset, the pious Mohammedan does not take a bite of food or sup of drink; he also abstains entirely from coffee, tobacco and sweets. But the moment the echoes of the sunset gun have died they are liberty to break their fast.

The Turk is considered by Christian nations to be an unspeakable, ferocious heathen. However, he is essentially re-
